FARMER'S
SYDNEY.
SEVENTY-SIX YEARS.

"CHILDREN'S MORNING" AT FARMER'S IS ALWAYS A BUSY ONE.

Children's Morning at Farmer's, as is now well known, is Saturday Morning—an arrangement that suits parents well.
For after the rush and seriousness of the week—which is practically over by Friday night—the children can be brought in, and time spent on their appearance.
This Morning we consider the Outfitting of Master "Young Hopeful."

FOUR STYLES IN BOYS' HATS.

The feature of Farmer's Juvenile Headwear is that the qualities are obviously superior. The usual characterless nature of such a stock is reversed here. The shapes, the body, the finish, have an atmosphere of distinction which raises the wearer above the average. This distinction will be found in the following four styles:—
Boys' Genuine South American Panamas, in block shapes, with head leathers and black bands. Price 10/6, 12/6, 15/6.
Also unblocked shapes, with strap. Price, 10/6, 12/6.
Boys' Straw Boaters, suitable for school wear. Price, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6.

Men's Hat Department, Pitt-street Shop.

A WASHING SUIT FOR BOYS, FROM 3 TO 10 YEARS OF AGE.

This "Ranger" Suit is made of Drill, Repp, Holland, or Crash, well finished in detail, and a decidedly superior design. The Blouse opens down front, and is removable like a coat; smart in style, and durable in wear.

A SPECIAL VALUE AT 10/6.

CREAM FLANNEL TROUSERS, for Cricketing, Tennis, etc., are needed by every youth. One particular line we handle are soap-shrunk, and fully guaranteed. They are made with loops for belts, and have side straps.
Sizes, 7 to 9, 10/6.
13 to 24, 12/6.

THREE BOOTS THAT WILL STAND PLENTY OF WEAR BY HEALTHY BOYS.

Boys' Box Calf Lace Boots, strong welted soles, leather lined, 16/6 pair; also same style, drill lined, price 14/6 pair. Cheaper quality, price 12/6 pair.
Boys' Tan Willow Calf Lace Boots, strong welted soles; leather lined, price 16/6 pair. Drill lined, price 14/6 pair.

MEN'S UNDERWEAR, LIGHTLY PRICED AT LASSETTERS'.

There is no gainsaying the fact that Men's Underwear of the right kind will be extremely scarce as the weeks pass by.

We would strongly advise those men who are in need of Underwear for present wear, or who are likely to want same in the near future, to BUY NOW.

As each new shipment arrives selling prices have to be advanced, owing to the abnormal high prices of the goods in Britain.

THE UNDERWEAR WE ARE OFFERING IN THIS ADVERTISEMENT IS ALL BRITISH-MADE.

AND THE PRICES ARE AS LOW AS WE CAN POSSIBLY MAKE THEM.

FEATURING THEDA BARA,
FEATURING THEDA BARA,

The Greatest Actress of the Screen

All Sydney will feel her fascination. Her name will be on the lips of one and all.

No Conventions or Traditions trammel Theda Bara in "Carmen." Her impersonation is based on her original conception of the Spanish gipsy of Prosper Merimee's famous novel.

A NEW CAR depreciates from one-third to one half the first year. A good, guaranteed, rebuilt car, bought at the right price, is a profitable investment and, after years of service, only shows a low rate of depreciation. We have rebuilt and soiled cars that have had very little use going for half or less than half their original cost, and are good for years of use. We have sold hundreds of cars, and can refer you to satisfied clients throughout the country.

We have some of the best cars, both new, rebuilt, and second-hand for sale, price list of which we would be pleased to supply you with should you write or call in and see us. Some we can sell on terms.

PALMER CORD TYRES.
PALMER CORD TYRES.

The history of the Palmer Cord Tyre reveals one thing which is worthy of special remark:—In the big record-breaking events at Brooklands the Palmer Tyre stood up to remarkable speeds beyond the point which other tyres would go.

MODEL 75

"OVERLAND."

EVERYTHING THAT GOES TO MAKE A CAR UP TO DATE IN APPEARANCE, RELIABILITY, AND EQUIPMENT IS FOUND IN THE NEW MODEL 75 OVERLAND.

IT HAS VIRTUALLY ALL THE ADVANTAGES OF THE LARGE, EXPENSIVE CARS, BUT AT A PRICE WELL WITHIN THE REACH OF THE AVERAGE PURSE.

The Ignition is by high-tension magneto.

The Car is very easy to handle.

The steering wheel is large, and turns easily. In fact, every detail of construction throughout the car makes for convenience and ease of control.

This new Model 75 Overland has all the real riding comfort afforded by roomy, comfortable seats, deep upholstery and cantilever rear springs.

The Car with full equipment weighs only 19 cwt., which means unusual economy in maintenance and operation.

No other car of similar price can possibly compare with this new Overland in points that make for complete satisfaction.

Let us prove this to you with a demonstration.

DEMONSTRATOR MODEL 75 OVERLAND WILL BE ON VIEW IN OUR SHOWROOMS NEXT WEEK. A BIG SHIPMENT OF CARS FOLLOWING A FEW DAYS LATER.

GOODYEAR

THE ROAD TO TYRE CONTENT.
GOODYEAR WRAPPED TREAD "DOUBLE-CURE" AND WHY IT EXCELS.

This is more expensive than the "molded" process employed by other makers, but it insures more uniform vulcanisation throughout the tyre.

In the "molded" process the thin side walls and thick treads are subjected to the same heat for the same length of time. Hence, the rubber and fabric in the side walls are cured more than the fabric rubber underneath the Tread. In some places the Tyre is either over or under cured. This creates a tendency toward fabric and tread separation.

In the wrapped tread "DOUBLE-CURE" process the fabric and rubber get the same vulcanisation in all parts.

In the "molded" process "mold pinches" or "fabric buckles" are obscured in the Tread, and such defects cannot be recognised by inspection.

In the Wrapped Tread "DOUBLE-CURE" process these faults are discovered, and the tyres rejected.

It costs more to make Tyres by the Wrapped Tread "DOUBLE-CURE" process, but better tyres are the result.

Some other tyres will always sell lower because of poorer and less material—fewer plies of fabric—inferior construction.

You never hear any one say "Goodyear Tyres have poor Treads." You hear users say "Goodyear Tyres give the best service."

Goodyear talks "Quality" first, last, and all the Time.

ANY GARAGE WILL SELL YOU

HONESTLY!
IT'S A GOOD LITTLE CAR.
IT IS, REALLY.

Not because WE say so, but just because OWNERS say so. We have made hundreds of sales of METZ Cars. They are all over New South Wales, and a trial run will certainly convince you. Get these facts well established in your mind.

TAKE THE BODY. Built in Sydney, Torpedo design, and tapered bonnet. A wide 2-passenger seat, neat khaki hood, electroplated fittings (no brass to polish), any colour scheme you fancy. Lots of leg-room, a real stretch-out-and-be comfortable sort of body.

NOW THE ENGINE. Strong, big, and reliable, developing 22-H.P. on the English Rating, and fired by BOSCH Magneto Ignition. It will take you 30-33 miles on a gallon of benzine, will hurry your METZ over any hill as fast, is not (as in almost every instance) faster than any other car. It will lift your METZ up and over the kerbstone, on to the footpath, without taking any run at it, proving positively and conclusively to you the positive efficiency, simplicity, and reliability of the METZ Gearless Transmission.

Four full elliptic springs suspend the car, and we know of no car more comfortable to ride in over rough roads. The front and rear axles are 8ft apart. There is no gear-box and gear wheels, no clutch, no live axle with troublesome pinion and crown wheel, and no universal joints. The METZ is the simplest car on the market, the smoothest running, and WE KNOW OF NO CAR MORE ECONOMICAL to run.

Four years' trading has thoroughly established this car in N.S.W. You INVEST your money in the METZ. You don't speculate it. You are not buying a new, unknown, untried car. But you are buying one that has PROVED itself in strenuous Interstate and other Australian and American Reliability and Economy contests, to be far and away the LEADING light car.

IT IS GUARANTEED BY US FOR 2 YEARS.
IT IS SOLD FOR £200, NET F.O.B. SYDNEY.

GREAT HILL-CLIMBER AND LIGHT ON PETROL.

WALGETT, January 21, 1916.

"We beg to advise having had a good trip through to here last week with the new 1916 Maxwell we bought from you. We came through on 15 gallons of petrol, and have now done 1000 miles.
"W. BUTLER."

INVERELL, January 27th, 1916.

"Just a line to let you know that our Maxwell Car reached here safely on Saturday last after a splendid trip. Mr. Fraser reported that not a single hitch occurred on the run from Newcastle, and we feel sure that our money is well invested. What we wanted was a light, powerful, and presentable Car for Stock and Station work, and we reckon we have got it.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR.
"IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF."

THE MAKERS DO NOT CARE TO SAY A WORD ABOUT THIS CAR WHICH IT DOES NOT SAY FOR ITSELF.

They would, however, like to get into the minds of possible buyers one thought in addition to the story which the car itself tells.

That thought concerns the motive that dominated Dodge Brothers in designing and building it.

They have never for a moment been interested in seeing how little they could charge.

But they have been immensely interested in demonstrating how much they could give.

They have brought to bear upon the accomplishment of that ambition an unusual manufacturing experience, a very valuable equipment, and complete financial independence.

IT IS FOR YOU TO SAY WHAT MEASURE OF SUCCESS HAS ATTENDED THEIR EFFORTS.

J. N. S. Clarke.

"I Was Laid up in a Hospital"

But I am now completely restored and my Sleep is Rendered Most Refreshing. . . . .

There are many business men in Sydney to-day who feel the effect of the great heat, the strenuous times caused by the war, and the worry of business to such a degree that they are more dead than alive when the day closes, almost too fatigued to reach home. To those men the letter published below by a prominent city accountant appeals, for it tells in a few words how jaded nerve strength can be restored, insomnia banished, and health regained by the use of this well recognised remedy, Clements Tonic. It is the medicine that decreases weakness, and increases strength. It should be in all homes in these appressive days. No home is medically equipped without it.

CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.,

"After suffering and being ill in hospital for about 12 months, I met a friend of mine (a chemist), and feeling extremely weak and scarcely able to walk properly, I asked him what I should take to bring some vigor into my system.

"He strongly advised Clements Tonic—and not to be sceptical about it. I took his advice and have since thanked him most heartily. That was about six weeks ago, and I can most truthfully say the Tonic has created wonders.

"My constitution is almost completely restored, my sleep rendered most refreshing; from restless nights I can now sleep soundly, awakening in the morning thoroughly refreshed. My appetite, which was very jaded, has returned, and I thoroughly enjoy every meal I take.

"You can make use of what I have written, as it is a man's duty to advise his fellow beings what benefit he derives from a medicine that will do universal good. I really feel TWENTY YEARS YOUNGER SINCE TAKING THE TONIC."

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

WESTMINSTER, Christmas Day.

Oddly enough, the member of the Unionist party in the Cabinet who personally has gained influence and popularity since a Coalition Government was formed, is Mr. Bonar Law. When grudgingly admitted to a seat on the Treasury Bench in a Unionist Government with credential of an Under-Secretaryship, he characteristically sought a modest place at the extreme end of the row of Ministers. He was elected as leader of the party in Opposition upon a principle not unfamiliar in the history of Presidential elections in the United States. He was not the chosen candidate of the party, whose suffrages were divided between Mr. Walter Long and Mr. Austen Chamberlain. As insistence upon these two gentlemen going to the poll threatened to split the party, Mr. Law, as an outsider least likely to bring about that calamity, was placed in the chair of the leader. It was at the time understood that the elevation was merely temporary, and did not establish a claim to the Premiership when the Conservatives came into their own again.

At the outset the new leader, not strong enough to dictate, followed the lead of the noisy section of the party in both Houses, who lost no opportunity of denouncing the Government, and habitually conspired to trip it up by the strategy of a snap division. In one of his earliest speeches, Mr. Law publicly announced that the Government must not expect any mercy from him. The episode was comically reminiscent of the curate in "The Private Secretary," who, in moments of desperation, announced to his tormentors, that if they didn't mind he would "give them a good hard knock." True to his deliberately adopted policy, the newly-appointed leader of the Opposition scolded his way through the sessions to the delight of the Willoughby de Broke class, though not to the maintenance of the traditional dignity and authority of his office. Experience and clearer intuition of the feelings of the House in later years to some extent modified this mannerism. In the new position of affairs, which brings him into colleagueship with the men he was accustomed, ferule in hand, to correct, it has naturally disappeared. This leaves untrammelled the clear thinker and lucid speaker, a man capable of taking unbiassed views of situations as they present themselves. His brief accession to the leadership of the House in the temporary absence of Mr. Asquith, engaged in conference with French Ministers in Paris, did more to establish his reputation than anything achieved since he succeeded Mr. Balfour in the leadership of his party.

There is a general disposition to intermit this week the kindly custom of making Christmas presents. It is felt if anyone has money to spare it were better bestowed upon the men at the front. Even more general will be abstention from the practice of sending Christmas cards. This will be a relief to the Post Office, ill prepared for the usual avalanche of Christmas correspondence of all classes. Its staff has been heavily reduced by enlistment, vacancies being filled up by men and women who are still learning their business. It is customary in peace time for a large number of extra hands to be taken on to tide over Christmas. They are just now hard to find. In their difficulty the Post Office authorities are engaging women. Already more than 2000 have been called in to fill the vacancies created by men who have joined the colours. I hear that over 5000 will be necessary to cope with the excess of Christmas work.

It is difficult to find anything relative to the war that in small degree compensates for the misery it has brought upon mankind. One such presents itself in the reduction of drunkenness consequent upon restrictions on the sale of drinks enforced by aid of the Defence of the Realm Act. Testimony from police courts in town and country reports a growing reduction in the number of charges of drunkenness coming before the magistrates. This is particularly noticeable in the proceedings at the first sitting following Saturday night. In the majority of cases the number charged is one half of the established average. Statistics covering half a dozen years show that convictions for drunkenness increased in number from 1909 to 1914. In the former year they totalled 60,000, rising at hastening pace till in the latter year they reached 80,000. Immediately action was taken in the direction of controlling and largely reducing opportunities for the sale of liquor, the number fell till it has already reached the level of 40,000. It is certain that this beneficent restraint will in measure be permanent.

New Year's Day.

There is a strong feeling in the House of Commons, shared by both wings of the allied political parties, against the little band below the gangway to the right of the Speaker who were responsible for the all-night sitting last week, a development of their organised plan of harassing the Government at a time of national peril. Mr. Asquith's patience under this trial is marvellous rather than admirable. The House longs for an ebullition of honest wrath that would at least for a time stop this yapping at his heels. The feeling of the Liberal party finds expression in an address prepared by the National Liberal Club for presentation to the Prime Minister on New Year's Day. Its terms accurately and cogently set forth the feeling of the party in the circumstances alluded to.

Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Walter Long have each on more than one occasion taken opportunity publicly to render tribute to their old enemy, now their new leader. Mr. Balfour, a keen and sympathetic judge of Parliamentary capacity, has always been an admirer, a friendly attitude Mr. Asquith in private conversation habitually assumed at a time when he did not dream that a Unionist Prime Minister would some day be a colleague in his Cabinet. This is a pleasant state of things, conducive to the successful carrying on of the Government. It is a bitter reflection to Mr. Asquith that in the House of Commons his enemies are those of his own household.

Reading again Samuel Smiles's Memoir of John Murray, Lord Byron's publisher, I come upon a passage which shows there is nothing new under the sun, not even the proclivities of a nation that made possible within the last two years the ravage of Belgium and the suffering of the inhabitants of French towns held in the grip of the Prussian. Within a month of the Battle of Waterloo, Mr. Murray, accompanied by a friend, made a trip to Paris. The Allied Armies having defeated Napoleon at Waterloo were marching on the French capital. Mr. Murray reports that the Prussians billeted upon the inhabitants of towns and villages through which they marched "had been particularly outrageous in their demands, pillaging, devastating, and destroying in the provinces wherever they came, all that they cannot use or take away, even to burning the houses of inhabitants upon whom they had lived."

It is a well-known story in the history of the time that the Prussians, finding themselves in Paris, resolved to blow up the Jena Bridge built by Napoleon to commemorate his victory over the Prussians in a decisive conflict. The idea found favour with Blucher, who turned a deaf ear to the remonstrance of the Duke of Wellington. Finding his representations unavailing, the Duke adopted an ingenious device. He placed a British sentinel on the bridge, with command to parade it from end to end till relieved by a comrade. The Prussians were baulked. If they carried out their design of blowing up the bridge they would also blow up a British soldier, which might have awkward consequences. They accordingly desisted, and the Pont de Jena, which has seen much history made in the meanwhile, stands to-day where it did in the Waterloo year.

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

Winter Sales.

LONDON, Dec. 31.

We are entering the severer zone of winter now, and to-day the winter sales are in full blast. There are bargains, of course, in many departments of the various stores who cater for our wants. Fur coats will find many a purchaser, for the cold weather and higher winds increase in severity as the days lengthen. We are all so tired of short days and lights turned on to dress in the morning and for afternoon tea. In January, although the cold may be keener, the days lengthen almost at once New Year is come. For this reason many women put off getting new things until the first part of January. Tailors are busy enough just now. The spring fashion books are already out. I have been examining them, and from what one can argue from the drawings skirts will be a little narrower and fitting closely round the waist, making, however, a straight line from the waistline of the skirt over the hips, flaring only below the knees. Perhaps this is generalising a little too broadly, but I feel sure that the turn of fashion's tide will set in the direction of narrower, neater skirts, while all coats will be shorter than they have been for some time past. Their basques flare, too, a little. Women have for so long been happy in their narrow skirts that they would take them on again with a ready welcome. The very full skirts are at their best in summer materials, and no doubt they will reappear next summer in some modified manner. For the present, say up to Easter, the skirts are made plainly for wearing with coats, but fit beautifully, and have a better line. Even the extra shortness of the skirt is already giving way to a few more inches, chiefly on account of the flared basques of the coats.

I have been interested in a brown suit of stuff rather like gentlemen's coating which is being built for a girl going into the country on a visit. The skirt is plain, but waves in godets at the hem. No pleats or tucks, merely the very best cutting. That tailor takes no notice of the waist line. He just aims at a straight fall over the hips, and begins his fulness below the knees to the hem. The coat to go with this skirt is very simple, but it has a few new features. The sac back, which is cut so that it is much wider at the bottom, has a strap just in the centre of the back which gathers the fulness there rather in the manner of men's later edition of Norfolk jackets. I believe in male parlance this special coat is known as a golf jacket. The belt does not encircle the waist as does the Norfolk type. With this costume a brown French sailor hat turned up a little all round, made of a mixture of brown ribbon and velvet with a couple of well-chosen blossoms, will be worn. It is an extremely pretty hat, and firmly put together. I have been seeing about a new black suit for myself, and taking the advice of my little French tailor and his wife; they work together under a nomme de guerre," and are a wonderfully clever pair. I am to have a very long coat, which I can wear over any other black skirt, silk or otherwise than its own. It comes within fourteen inches of the hem of the skirt, so that you can guess it is quite long enough for anything. It buttons with a good many buttons down the bodice part; for the garment is built rather on the line of a man's frock coat; the long, wide basque or skirt portion of the coat being added. You get in this way a rather closer fit. One is tired of the floppy belted coat that has been so over done; this is rather more suitable to a white-haired woman like myself, a bit more dignified. It has a high collar of velvet and a little braiding on the broad cuffs, and just in front where the basque joins on there are two braided motifs. The skirt will be very plain, and will serve to wear in our cold winter days with a satin blouse or with more ornate blouses, as occasions offer. I forgot to say that in the brown costume I have described there are fat pockets at the sides. It is really a very fetching little garment.

Blouses.

Now as to blouses, I paid a visit a day or two ago to a well-known house in Oxford-street, which I imagine is as popular a place in London for blouses as is the Galeries Lafayette in Paris. Indeed, I was more struck than ever at the likeness between the two "magasins." Their blouse saloons are the largest we have, and the variety of styles and prices filled me with delight. Their things are smart, as smart as the blouses at shops who begin their prices at a guinea to thirty shillings. No one would dream of making blouses if they once saw what this house offers. Crepe-de-Chine blouses are made of good quality material and fashion, ably cut with ample fulness where they should be full, made up with beadings and lined with chiffon and an under bodice of muslin. For 12/11 you get a very smart blouse in this material. I was astounded. For 18/11 you can get ninon blouses mounted over white chiffon with fronts of lace and the proper collars, all so perfectly finished and looking so French. I saw a particularly pretty blue ninon blouse with little fronts of fine gold net mounted on to the white chiffon lining, the edges finished with narrow gold braid. There are brown blouses in the same style, pink or apricot, cream, all the usual colours. It was a wonderful feast of pretty things. They come down to 4/11 for white Japanese silk skirts, well finished and neatly sewn. One wonders how it is done. This season, too, there is a revival for a blouse of some bright colour in crepe or charmeuse satin to be worn with any costume that suits it. My companion invested in a shade of coral pink, which she avers will look well with her brown costume or with a blue serge suit she is devoted to.

Then there is another phase—the ready-to-wear demi-evening gown. There has been a perfect rage all through the holiday season for gowns of this kind. They generally take the form of a soft satin crepe-de-Chine or taffetas skirt. This is cut straight, with cords run at intervals in the skirt to keep the fulness out. The waist portion is also corded till it fits the waist. The bodice, which is attached to the skirt, is a blouse made of black ninon or chiffon, or of any colour matching the skirt. The sleeves are corded, and over the cords silk or crepe to match the skirt are sewn like a binding. The blouse is black or whatever colour used for the skirt, interlined with white chiffon, on which is laid either gold lace, straps of ribbon making a kind of lattice work, or coloured chine ribbons. This shows through the black ninon. You may vary the interior linings as much as you please. A dress of this kind well and amply cut, of full size, costs 35s at the shop I have written about. I have never seen anything like its quality at this price. A niece of mine, a schoolgirl, wanting a party frock, secured one in pale pink, made in much the same fashion, for 29s 6d. Need you wonder that mothers and daughters are hurrying as fast as they can to what I may honestly call the most popular shop in London.

Hats.

Hats are still small, with great upstanding bows, and the tall black velvet hat with a great torsade of cock's feathers is still a very popular possession. Then there are gathered velvet toques, soft and becoming near the hair, with lovely velvet blossoms on them. I saw some velvet anemones yesterday made beautifully, and mounted on flexible stalks, which set my heart aching for a toque trimmed with them, shaded from deep crimson to purple. There is also the mandarin hat, which is prettier than the name implies. It is made with a round crown of gauged velvet, with a brim of gathered velvet made double, and quite full at the edge, like a frill, only it is all made in one. On top of the round crown, where the mandarin would have his button of office, a beautiful rose is laid. It is a pretty style for anyone who wishes to show her hair and eyes, a great change after the slouch hat pulled far down over the face. I see a good many hats with velvet brims and gathered ribbon tops and crowns. The velvet is put on plain, and comes near the face. The ribbon with looped edges is the kind usually worn.

CHRISTMAS IN LONDON.

THE MAGIC OF ILLUSION.

(BY ARTHUR MASON.)

LONDON, Dec. 26.

Among the many things the Londoner hopes from his Christmas is the traditional Christmas weather he has heard so much of, and so seldom has seen. We all know, by repute, that traditional Christmas of England. It is a Christmas upon which the hoar frost is hung in a million-fold spangle of jewels of white, and the snow lies glistening in the pale gold of the winter sun. "You and I will never read that volume," says the poet, speaking of the irrevocably vanished sonnets of Raphael, the sonnets written by the painter with the silver-pointed pencil "else he only used to draw Madonnas." I do not say we shall never see the traditional Christmas of England, never actually possess that almost legendary beauty of the pictured and storied age when Christmas was winter's high festival, when the mellow light of the mild sun of winter fell upon a snow-white world, or a world within the still and frosted airs of which the bells of Christmas chimed clear and far, and the joviality of Christmas had a perfect setting of brilliant cold without and ruddy warmth within. I do not say we shall never see that Christmas. I only say that I have never seen it, though I have sought it these several years.

This year I sought it again—and this year's Christmas was as little like it as any Christmas could be. This year's Christmas was, in truth, a very melancholy of ill-timed weather, a Christmas of miserable rain above and irremediable mud beneath. The Londoner, looking for the best of Christmas weather, confessed this as the worst. For days it rained, and by way of mockery the nights of those days were nights of moonlit beauty that faded only with the dawn and the rain that the dawn of day after day of this Christmas week has brought with unvarying persistence. A wet Christmas, a Christmas of that mild softness of texture which the Londoner despises above all other possible weathers of England's Christmas—a Christmas of almost warmth.

That drab disappointment of a Christmas week reached its climax on Christmas Eve, a day not to be left unmarked in any calendar of misplaced weather. For then the rain of London broke loose from its accustomed shackles and really rained. With the traffic of the metropolis at its Christmas level, even the familiar drizzle of London is a trial. Rain such as this of Friday is a calamity. Already staggering under their loads of mammoth movement, the central highways of London on the afternoon of Christmas Eve groaned beneath a dislocating confusion of incessant heavy showers upon roadways of liquid mud, what time the hosts of people that are the inevitable furnishing of London's Christmas Eve strode and splashed a fighting way through the mists and the rain. The motor traffic, wheeling and slipping and skidding on the precarious surface of running asphalt, piled itself again and again into blocks within which the heavily burdened horse-waggons struggled for foothold in an ever-shifting world. By nightfall the scene was such as London alone among cities can show, a typical Christmas crush of London's ocean-movement of traffic moving through a thousand streets, with all its familiar motley confusion magnified tenfold by the disaster of rain and rain's influence upon the speed rate of the crowded turbulent streets.

It is not, however, to be supposed that the Christmas of London lacked anything of picturesqueness by reason of this ill-fortune of weather surrounding. On the contrary, those surging, swarming streets through which millions of people went spectrally, half-hidden and half-disclosed by the soft, grey curtain of mist that hung upon and enveloped them, and those same, but transformed, streets toward evening, when all their activity was in brilliant relief under the lights of the shop windows, were as wonderful as ever, and more than ever an unrivalled spectacle of movement and energy. Nor was there any diminution of the normal Christmas excitement of London by reason of a world at war. The shopping centres had been crowded all through the many days of which Christmas week itself was the culmination and climax. In Christmas week, with the great West End business houses at their full splendour of attractiveness, that unceasing stream of their custom rose into a mighty wave, flowing and ebbing and flowing again, in never diminishing bulk and volume.

For this second war-time Christmas, indeed, the shopping areas of London seemed to have agreed to array themselves at their most triumphal. The windows of Regent-street, which, rightly, are part of the fame of that great thoroughfare, from end to end of it were a heaped-up splendour of costly beautiful things, magnificently set out in the hour or two of lighting allowed. The windows of Bond-street and Piccadilly are not so much windows of display as windows of suggestion of the luxury housed behind them, but the great shopping rendezvous of Knightsbridge, and Kensington, and the shops and stores of Oxford-street and Westbourne Grove, spread gorgeous invitation along all the miles of London they cover.

Prodigious, too, the shopping activities of this year. The shopkeepers are said to be astonished at the volume of their trade. War-time notwithstanding, Christmas had royal celebration in that respect of the giving of gifts. For one thing, if ever there was a soldier's Christmas this was it, and out of London in these days have gone to trench and camp and billet, mountains of Christmas cheer for the men on service. Comforts of every conceivable variety had to be despatched to millions of soldiers. That fact alone assured to the shopkeepers a Christmas of overflowing prosperity. War or no war, moreover, the children's Christmas claim was undiminished. The toy-fairs of London lacked no lustre by reason of the fire and slaughter of men's foolishness, and with untroubled brows that were sign and token of their riper wisdom, the children stormed as riotously and as whole-heartedly as ever the immemorial Christmas treasure-houses of their desire. True, the toys of this year were toys with a difference—toys made in England, for one thing, not quite so neatly, perhaps, as they used to be made in Germany, but well enough. Toys, too, of strange intent, toys that were essentially toys of war-time, soldierly toys of admirals and generals, of armies and navies, of forts and trenches and battleships, of artillery in all its new variety of menace, machine-guns and mortars, siege guns and the guns of aircraft. Aircraft itself, too, and battleships, and battle-pieces that sometimes were merely tableaux, and sometimes were actual engagements by land and sea, in which things were blown up with loud noises. Strange, indeed, the toyland of this year, but for all that a toyland whence has issued no less than of yore the shouting happiness of its patrons.

Thus the Christmas of London, a curious complexity of mutually destructive emotions. As from without, a festival of rain-swept cheerlessness; as from within a tragi-comedy, an inextricable commingling of gaiety tinged with terror, of happiness weighted with anxiety, of lightheartedness struggling with sorrow. Yet, and in spite of all, a festival, with the magic of the Christmas tradition, half fact, half illusion, radiant upon it. In that respect it resembled its exterior surrounding. The early darkness of these winter afternoons, and the falling mists of the winter evenings, are, somehow, less a saddening of the streets of London than a grace and glamour upon them. Within that delicate dim grey veiling, the lights of London play with the effect of a shine of near stars across a thin-spread cloud. Even the merciless rain of these days, a rain which at any other season had been an intolerable burden of discomfort, but which quite failed to damp the Christmas cheerfulness of these hosts of London hurrying purposeful upon their Christmas errands; even the rain had its share in the common picturesqueness of Christmas week. For the moving lights of the traffic, and the fixed lights of the streets and shops, shone again in the wet pavements and roadways, transfigured their dreariness, set the very slush of them gleaming and sparkling, so that they seemed no longer to be the drenched and bedraggled surfaces of a rain-swept city, but fantastically shining avenues, unsubstantial fairy highways, rivers of light in a magically-lighted land. Some such illusion, too, was upon this second dreadful Christmas of war-time, so that, if only momentarily, the tragedy of it was forgotten and all the sorrows of it were put by.

THE NEW AUSTRALIAN OFFICERS.

(BY SERJEANT.)

The war, so far, has been fruitful of many lessons, not the least of which is the necessity for a change in the manner of selecting officers. This not only applies to England, but also to Australia. In the old country hitherto officers have for the most part been drawn from the better classes, or from those families which have been able to financially assist their sons to maintain what are really expensive positions. It is—or was until quite recently—necessary for an officer to have an income of at least £200 to £300 per year apart from his rank pay, if he desired to hold even a lieutenant's commission in the British army. Some smart regiments required even more than that, and as a consequence the poorer man had to be satisfied with N.C.O. rank. The present war, however, has altered all that. The tremendous mortality, sickness, and unfitness for active service owing to wounds among officers has created a demand which could not be met by the depleted families of the well-to-do or the aristocracy of England; and it has been found not only necessary but judicious to fill the gaps in commissioned ranks from the class who have so far done all the fighting but little of the leading. It has been found on numerous occasions where a fight has resulted in the death or disablement of all the officers of a unit that a soldier has stepped out of the ranks and led his mates to victory.

In Australia the case is somewhat different. Class distinctions are not as great as in the older country. Life for all is more strenuous, both from choice and compulsion. Our first officers were certainly frequently drawn from those who had had some military experience in times of peace, but on the whole they were of the right stamp—even if in some cases they lacked stamina. Where our officers, however, differ so greatly from the British is that they foster the spirit of comradeship with their men, and while acting as leaders, never lose sight of the fact that, prior to the war, they for the most part were on terms of intimacy with the very men now under them. This goodfellowship is natural, and will always be maintained. Courage, and strength of body and character are the main factors in the making of Australian officers. An officer must be a sport; he must be able to don the gloves and put up a good fight, and must try to excel in all branches of athletics, for his men are all athletes, and will neither follow nor pay respect or obedience to a weakling, no matter how well he "knows his drill." Gentility in officers is not needed. Ruggedness is more important. It begets confidence and admiration. The men are hard and rough, and absolutely fearless. They look for the same qualities in their leaders. They resent severity, but like firmness. Any sign of weakness breeds contempt. "Side" or stand-offishness is not tolerated. Jack Brown, who was No. 3 in the platoon, must not "put on dog" because he now wears a star; nor must he look for immediate recognition of his rank until his men have got used to the change. No doubt the newly-fledged officer feels just as uncomfortable as his former mates; and it is only by judicious conduct that he can hope to educate them to the alteration in their respective military standing.

The making of an Australian officer is thoroughly progressive now-a-days. After passing through the early stages of squad and section drill, a preliminary examination takes place, any man in the ranks who is at all ambitious being given a chance to step out and show what he knows. It is a nervous moment for the aspirant when for the first time he attempts to form a "squad at intervals," and put them through the movements, or detail the position of "attention." If he shows proficiency, and has "personality," and a good word of command, he is told to put a couple of stripes on the sleeve of his dungarees. He is a corporal (acting) but still on private's pay. Later on comes another examination, which, if successful, entitles him to yet another stripe, making him an acting sergeant. In due course his appointment comes out in R.O.'s, and he gets all his "duty pay," being the difference between private's and non-commissioned officer's rate since the first date of his promotion. He now acts as platoon commander or sergeant, and must take his turn at discharging the duties of battalion orderly or company orderly serjeant. He handles a platoon on parade, and drills it, besides helping his section commanders to learn to do likewise. Having come out in orders, he is entitled to enter a school of instruction. If he passes through that he is recommended as a candidate for lieutenant's commission, and goes into a school for a month prior to being sent to the Agricultural Ground in Sydney for final work. He now learns what real toil is. He also finds out that he really knows nothing—not even how to "slope arms," or spring to attention. He goes through the work of being "smartened up." What with physical culture, bayonet fighting, rifle exercise, trenching by day and night, bomb throwing, marching, extended order work, field operations, scouting, and all the rest of it, his time is fully occupied, while his nights are spent in studying military books, or doing company drill on the floor of his hut with wooden matches. And it is not all pleasant, easy sailing. His instructor is a rough man with a rough vocabulary, embracing the whole Australian language in its most varied and lurid forms. He does not want to repeat a mistake. And he must not reply. A silent tongue is his best asset. It may be galling to be told in front of his mates that he is "The worst blanky donkey ever foaled," or that "If Australians are to be led by the likes of you, God 'elp 'em!" He has to bear it in silence. Better to be "roared up" than ignored. It shows his instructor is taking an interest in him. And, besides, one cannot blame the S.M. He has to put up with a lot, and some men are very trying indeed. Then comes the "try out" by the chief instructor. On his report rests the chance of every N.C.O. for promotion. What an anxious time it is! How much is forgotten through nervousness; how many foolish mistakes are made. This is the hour when a man's personality is studied, and his knowledge weighed against the weekly reports of his instructor. The pupil never knows how he gets on until in R.O.'s appear the names of the successful men. No reason is given for sending a man back to his "lines." The orders only say, "No room in the officers' school!" Well, the lucky ones go to Sydney, and again the lucky ones come back to Liverpool and enter the officers' mess. Those who fail remain N.C.O.'s until—the Lord knows when! It is a rough training all through, but it is meant for rough men who have to lead rough men. The enemy is savage and pitiless; the modern forms of war call for strength and pluck, and endurance and initiative. All these qualities do not belong to every soldier. The best are singled out for officers—men who are physically and mentally fit, who will stick at nothing, and who, above all, can win and hold the confidence of the rankers at all times, and in all circumstances. The men like to know that one of their number who, perhaps, before the war shore sheep with them has proved himself as good, or even better, than the rich man's son pitchforked into a commission. They will follow their old mate anywhere, because they know he knows. He is no "dandy," but a real fighting soldier with the qualities which win V.C.'s. This is just why Australian troops do not get on well with British officers; not that the latter are lacking in courage and physique, but because our boys cannot tolerate being "bossed," and also because the discipline expected by the British officer is foreign to Australians. The present war is unlike any previous war. It is a struggle in which scores of battles are fought daily on a front of hundreds of miles by millions of men. Deeds of the greatest valour frequently pass unnoticed. The fighting is carried on by sections, platoons, or companies, or often by artillery out of sight of each other. Trench warfare is the order of the day, with small bands of men engaged in hand-to-hand conflicts, and in which officers and men fight alike. The officers are equipped like their men. Every soldier is expected to show initiative—to know when and how to fire his rifle without word of command; and in a bayonet charge, wherein the lines follow closely on each other, the officer is not exactly running ahead of his men, but is with them, doing his "bit," and exhorting them to do theirs, they knowing at the same time that—officer or no officer—they must go forward, kill or miss, or be taken in the back by those who are rushing from the rear. The days of prearranged battles between serried ranks are gone for ever. There will be no more of the close formations meeting as of old with their officers proudly leading, sword in hand. Now it is sudden rushes from trenches with the officers directing from flanks, or mingling with the men. In such warfare, then, how necessary it is that rough troops such as Australians must have officers whom they understand and like. In the fighting yet to come the foe may be the Austrians or Germans. The honourable methods of the Turks will give place to the savage and brutal fighting which has characterised the "Huns." It is then that the true value of the new Australian officers will be most noticeable, for they will be face to face with an enemy to defeat whom requires all the qualities which go to make heroes, and which have already been shown by our troops and their leaders at Gallipoli.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

RAILWAYS AND WAR.

From time to time the cables have told us that a railway line has been won or lost or that a railway junction has been bombed by aircraft as a point of great military significance. We know in a vague way that in this war railways have assumed a greater importance than in any other war in the world's history. But no one has explained their importance so precisely as has Mr. E. A. Pratt in "The Rise of Rail Power in War and Conquest; 1833-1914." This elaborate title suggests heavy, technical contents which might appeal only to the professional soldier. On the contrary, although Mr. Pratt has had, unfortunately, to stop short at the eventful August of 1914, after which no belligerent has permitted anything to be said about the military operations of the railways he controls, the author is able, by inference and illustration, to make us realise by no means inadequately what part railways are playing in this war. This is not a "war book," but it throws more light on certain aspects of the war than many which masquerade in more pretentious plumage. The one criticism offered is the absence of maps. Mr. Pratt's argument, especially in the case of his chapters on Africa, often pre-supposes a knowledge of geography which cannot be expected from the casual reader.

The history of railways in war is almost as old as the history of railways in peace. One is not surprised to hear that Germany produced its first practical apostle. In 1833 a Westphalia worthy evolved a scheme by which soldiers could be rapidly carried by rail to any given point. Some years later another German had devised a system of strategic railways on the Russian and French frontiers, which would enable Germany to throw an overwhelming force against an enemy on either of these fronts. But soldiers did not take railways very seriously until the American Civil War. That was the first occasion on which the transport of troops by trains assumed any practical importance, and although its lessons are more than 50 years old Mr. Pratt can in some respects find no better examples of the methods of modern warfare. The Federals recognised that railways were rather beyond the ken of the soldier, so they established a special corps to deal with them, and one of its activities was to repair them after they had been blown up. It sounds easy to demolish a railway, but even in the 'Sixties it was hard to make wreckage that a shrewd engineer could not quickly repair. The Federal Army, for instance, produced a forthright Scotsman who insisted on his own way. When it was given him he and his corps boasted, with reason, that they repaired the lines almost as quickly as the Confederates damaged them. After all, it is extremely hard to destroy the "permanent way." Lengths of rails may be pulled up, and embankments may be blown to pieces in chosen spots, but unless there is a bridge or a tunnel affected a well-equipped party will soon put matters right.

Germany, though the first in the field in the consideration of railways for military purposes, was slow in her application of the idea. Mr. Pratt tells us that in the Franco-Prussian war her arrangements, contrary to usual notions, were deplorable. They were so bad, indeed, that she could not remove her wounded by her own lines, and asked the neutral Powers for permission to transport them through Belgium. But Germany was quick to learn. Before the war was over, and before the German States had become the German Empire, "railway battalions" had been established in Prussia, Bavaria, and elsewhere, whose sole duty was to provide for the efficient conduct of the German railways in peace and in war. Their duty even went further; these battalions provided spies, who secured billets in the French railways at important junctions and strategic centres. This was the idea of the notorious Stieber; at any given moment the whole mobilisation of the French army could be hampered by the "blunder" of one of these gentlemen. Stieber's scheme was submitted to Bismarck, and approved by him, but before it had been long in operation General Campenau, the French Minister for War, got wind of it, and scotched it.

Germany is singularly unfortunate in her spokesmen. Dr. Rohrbach is not known evidently outside Germany, but in 1911 he published a book on German colonial policy, which appears to have started a sort of Rohrbach cult in the press. The British have their Rohrbachs, but we pray to be delivered from them. We do not as a rule canonise their concepts and make a song about their illuminating suggestions, which can afterwards be dug out to our discredit. Not that Rohrbach was a fool; indeed, he was so extremely intelligent that one wonders why he was allowed so free a rein. His great idea was that Germany was to found an empire which would gradually embrace the whole of the African continent, and would leave British India far in the shadow. Railway lines were to be the modern analogy of the magician's wand which would accomplish this. The German colonies were strategic points of commerce, which would attract the wealth of the interior. Mr. Pratt observes that the railway, systems of the German colonies in Africa are designed for war rather than peace. The Belgians, the French, and the British have, when challenged, provided better facilities for trade. But Germany has gone on building lines into the wilderness. In Togoland, Kameroons, S.W. Africa, and East Africa, these used to be the mock of the trader. We know more now. In many instances they were built to make access easier to the colonial possessions of other Powers. The railway system of German South-west Africa is typical. It was designed to facilitate an attack on Portuguese Angola and four points in British South Africa simultaneously. In West Africa was cherished the vain idea of working up through the back country of the French Sudan. Similarly in German East Africa the rail system was devised with an eye to future military advantages, and in this colony these military advantages have actually been realised, though elsewhere they failed rather miserably. Mr. Pratt is very scathing when he comes to discuss the military value of Australian railways. He quotes Lord Kitchener's dictum:—"Railway construction, while developing the country, has resulted in lines that would appear to be more favourable to an enemy invading Australia than to the defence of the country. Different gauges in most of the States isolate each system, and the want of systematic interior connection makes the present lines running inland of little use for defence, although possibly of considerable value to an enemy, who would have temporary command of the sea." To show the delay for which the break of gauge is responsible, Mr. Pratt mentions a calculation by our own Defence Department. It is estimated that to move 30,000 mounted troops from Melbourne to Brisbane would take no less than 63 days; with a uniform gauge 23 days would suffice for the operation. Mr. Pratt goes on to point out what this delay might mean in practice. Australians, he says, used as a rule to contemplate as the only possibility of attack one on the Northern Territory by an Asiatic Power. But long before this war broke out military men considered that if Britain were at war with a non-Asiatic Power, able to concentrate a fairly strong fleet in the Pacific at short notice, the enemy might easily make an attack, "not on the admittedly vulnerable Northern Territory—which he would not want, either as a colony or as a 'jumping-off' place from which to conquer the remainder of Australia—but on some point along the coastline of nearly 2000 miles, which, stretching from Rockhampton to Adelaide, comprises the most populous, the most wealthy, and the most desirable section of the whole continent."

The enemy indicated, of course, was, and is Germany, and the weakness of our situation was fully recognised in Germany. Let us turn again to the amiable Dr. Rohrbach, whose expositions of German world-policy always received an attentive hearing. Discussing the defensive powers of the Commonwealth, he has declared that Australia could not resist if her four chief cities were occupied by an invader. If the enemy had temporary command of the sea he would inevitably have matters much his own way. He might very easily capture one State capital "while the reinforcements it needed were changing trains at the State boundaries," and his ships could make the journey from Brisbane to Adelaide in fewer days than the transport of any considerable body of men by us between the same points would require weeks. The one flaw in Rohrbach's theory is that it presupposed at least a temporary command of Australian waters by the German navy; and this is exactly what failed the enemy at the crucial time. Rohrbach's ideas (though in 1911, when he wrote, they were by no means ridiculous) became obsolete the morning H.M.A.S. Australia led the Australian navy through Sydney Heads. And although it is hardly likely that the German Pacific squadron in 1914 would have attempted the actual occupation of any Australian city, there is not the least doubt that but for the salutory knowledge that the "Australia" was "somewhere" our State capitals would have experienced the horrors of bombardment in default of ransom. SPEECHES AND ESSAYS.

Between the spoken and the written word lies a wide gap. Many an orator has gripped his audience with eloquence which, committed to paper, seems trivial and uninspired. There is no surer test of the permanent value of a speech than that it bears re-reading. "Subjects of the Day," by Lord Curzon of Kedleston, survives this ordeal triumphant. This is a selection from the public speeches delivered by Lord Curzon at Westminster and elsewhere in the course of the last decade. These cover a wide range both of time and of subject. Among the more recent are a fine tribute to the memory of Lord Roberts and an incisive analysis of Germany's motives in going to war. The majority, however, date to the ante-bellum days, and show that in many things Lord Curzon could see further ahead than his contemporaries. He was a convinced advocate of national service—a "crank," according to his opponents—and on occasion he indulges in prophesy. "If ever," he said two and a half years ago, "there was a question which deserved to be lifted out of the mire of party politics it is the question of the existence and the safety of the nation. I should like to see a conference on this matter to which the findings might be referred, and in which the responsible leaders of both parties would take part. . . I believe the time will shortly come when optimistic speeches will not satisfy the country; when those who are frightened of compulsory service see that there is nothing else in the field they will have to turn to it, and at such a time you will have to meet your opponent and discuss the matter without favour and without prejudice." How many of the audience guessed that every letter of this forecast would be so soon fulfilled? And what finer confession of Imperial faith could there be than this quotation from a speech delivered on Empire Day 10 years ago:—"The cynics may scoff at Empire; the doctrinaires may denounce it from the benches of the House of Commons and elsewhere, and the rhapsodists may sometimes conspire to render it almost ridiculous. But it is with us. It is part of us. It is bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh. We cannot get away from it. We cannot deny our own progeny. We cannot disown our own handiwork. The voyage which our predecessors commenced we have to continue. We have to answer our helm, and it is an Imperial helm, down all the tides of Time." (Allen and Unwin.)

Sir Dyce Duckworth, in addition to being a distinguished member of the medical profession, has for long been associated with its semi-public aspects. "Views on Some Social Subjects" are the fruit of his activities in those fields where the medical man and the layman join hands to co-operate in the achievement of a common ideal. The author would probably be the last to claim any literary distinction for these essays, but they are informed throughout by shrewd sense, toleration, and sympathy for the other fellow's opinion. As a rule, when the professional man enters the literary lists he has a hobby horse to ride, and he spurs it on regardless of other people's susceptibilities; hence he often rides it to death. But this is not the method of Sir Dyce Duckworth. When he advises he never speaks ex cathedra; when he is most in earnest he half apologises for his emphasis, and admits that he is only expressing his own personal conviction. He preaches temperateness, and in his arguments he practises what he preaches. This method may strike the extremist as Laodicean, but in point of fact the controversialists who adopt it are much more effective than those who bawl and sweat and thump their tubs, and in their denunciation of the other point of view try to enlist our emotion rather than our reason. This will be observed particularly in the several essays dealing with the drink question and with feminism. In others there is no controversial element, but the same common sense. The harmfulness of dust, the importance of recreation, the value of hygiene in every department of our daily life, and a dozen matters of the kind, the author discusses, not as abstract ideas, but as measures which are in the power of everyone to combat, and the lessons he teaches will be forgotten by none who read his book. (Allen and Unwin.)

TOWN PLANNING.

One does not need to be an expert on the subject of town planning to enjoy "Cities in Evolution," by Professor Patrick Geddes, who, it will be remembered, was largely responsible for that famous exhibit which was on its way to Australia when sent to the bottom of the sea by the Emden. The author insists that the disease which the science of town-planning seeks to cure is by no means an inevitable accompaniment of the aggregation of people in large towns. Indeed, it is to some extent a modern growth. Ancient and medieval cities had their rookeries, but they were generally laid out upon a spacious plan, and the rookeries were later parasitic accretions which came into being largely because it was no one's business to see that they did not. But in late times the haphazard development of the centres of population has become the rule rather than the exception. Professor Geddes, indeed, drastically classifies the whole of modern urban architecture as "Slums, semi-slums, and super-slums." "What but semi-slums," he asks, "are those long dormitory rows to which our most prosperous skilled workmen, our foremen, even our clerks, get back at night, between whose mean backyards or yet drearier and emptier schoolyards their bairns have to grow up, and within whose narrow limits their women-folk drudge out all their days?"

Some town-planning enthusiasts are apt to forget the gap between the gutters they see with their physical eye and the cloud-capped palaces they see with the eye of the imagination. They do not realise that very few communities have the chance of beginning from the very beginning, a chance which Australia is lucky to possess in the case of Canberra. They would have the world pursue a policy of wholesale demolition, and they are not always ready to remember that there are practical objections to this course, which do not necessarily proceed from unworthy motives. Professor Geddes avoids these pitfalls. He recognises that the motto for the town-planner must be "Hurry slowly." Indeed, he seems to suggest that we should be more concerned with the future than the past, and in this sane counsel he brings a movement somewhat too prone to airy theories back again to earth. Abolish slums by all means, he says in effect, but prevention is better than cure. Do not let slums grow. The utmost eloquence of the town-planner is unequal to the task of moving stone from stone in the innumerable ghettos and wynds and alleys we have inherited, but it can prevent their repetition. If we cannot repair the errors of our ancestors, we can at least avoid the reproach of our descendants. In this connection Professor Geddes's advice has peculiar application to Australia, where towns arise like mushrooms, and cities add continually to their girth. If every new suburban extension, if every estate "cut up" for the benefit of the new increase in the local population were made to conform to a certain scheme laid down, not by irresponsible, though doubtless well-meaning, individuals, but by a committee able to take a large view, our grandchildren would be unperplexed by problems which we find very hard to solve. "Towns," Professor Geddes happily observes, "must cease to grow like expanding ink stains or grease spots; once in true development they will repeat the star-like opening of the flower with green leaves set in alternation to its golden rays." (Williams and Norgate; Dymock.)

SHAKESPEARE IN AUSTRALIA.

"Australasian Shakespeareana," by Mr. Percy J. Marks, is a compilation quite unique of its kind. It is a record of such research and opinions upon Shakespearian matters as have been published locally or in New Zealand, and is an excellent specimen of bibliography. Its scheme, of course, excludes from consideration the important works by Australasians which have been published in England, and in so far it does not claim to be a wholly representative survey of Australasian effort in the study of Shakespeare. But, apart from this, it appears to be most comprehensive in its range, and most people will be surprised at the number of Australasians who have attempted and achieved some contribution to the vast library of Shakespeareana. Of course, much of what is noted is of trivial or of ephemeral importance, but there remains a residuum of solid value. Mr. Marks is to be congratulated on his compilation, which is certain to be of assistance to students.—(Tyrrell's, Ltd.)

NEW NOVELS.

Mr. E. Temple Thurston has often written about love pursued, and frequently he has written very well about it. But the spurning of love is a role very different from that which Mr. Temple Thurston's heroes and heroines are wont to play; and yet this is the theme of "The Passionate Crime," a story which, to the mind of one reader at least, shows the author at his very best. The scene is naturally the Irish country side. In few other places would Anthony Sorel be possible, and nowhere else would he be so natural. Mr. G. B. Shaw was not the first to tell us of the fierce chastity of the Irish; a chastity which is at once moral, physical, and mystical. Anthony Sorel is a visionary, a dreamer, whose dreams are concerned wholly with his art. He is the true ascetic, who, knowing what abnegation means, prefers to be a recluse in order that he may find expression for the thoughts that surge in his soul. Sorel requires no book of verses underneath the bough and no jug of wine and no one to sing beside him in the wilderness; but he had to learn that even the hermit is not immune from interruption. In days gone by another Anthony was tempted; in the case of this Anthony the temptation was of a more corporeal nature, and there was no snow-drift. So the passionate crime is accomplished, with its inevitable reckoning. The pity of it all is that Sorell and Anna Quatermaine are excellently matched, and if they had only been married out of hand little harm would have been done to Sorel's spiritual development, and he would gradually have realised that his mission did not require him to dwell eternally on top of a lofty pillar. But young people mount high horses, and both Sorel and Anna have all the defects of their qualities. In this story Mr. Temple Thurston gives us that most poignant of tragedies, the tragedy which need never have happened. Had Sorel been more of a man of the world, and had Anna been more of a woman of the world, there would have been no passionate crime, but a happy union, in which a robust brood would have combined their father's high ideals with their mother's passionate zest for loving and being loved. Mr. Temple Thurston's book is not very easy to describe. The two antagonists stand clear, but they themselves, though real enough, are elusive. We get closer to earth in some of the subordinate persons—the priest, for instance, and a delightful old woman, both of whom bring a breath of robust common-sense into the rarified atmosphere with which Sorel choses to surround himself, and the language in which the story is written is delightful. It reminds one of the plays which the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, used to perform. The mere Sassenach cannot presume to say whether it is the genuine article, but it sounds very like it. The modulations of J. B. Synge and Yeats and Lady Gregory meet us on every page. (Bell and Sons: Dymock's.)

Nora Ascough, the heroine of "Me," somewhat belatedly awakened to the fact that chance-met folk in trams and boarding-houses were apt to be bored by the original poems, which she was always ready to recite to them on any provocation or none. The anonymous author of the book will profitably imitate the heroine, for although, to be sure no verse is quoted, many of the experiences described are of more importance to the autobiographer than to the reader. As autobiography the story is plausible enough. Nora Ascough is a young Canadian, who becomes first a reporter on a Jamaican journal and later a stenographer in Chicago. She has literary ambitions, which are eventually fulfilled to some extent, although by her own confession her work achieves popularity rather than success. In her struggles she is brought into contact with many men, some of whom are birds of prey, and some good Samaritans, who help her over many a style. Indeed "Me" is somewhat refreshing in that, unlike most books relating to the struggles of the unprotected working girl, it does not represent man solely as a monster with a predatory eye cast on every woman who comes within his purview. For the rest there are interesting features in the book—the picture, for instance, of the life of the young "business ladies" in a Chicago hotel, and of a side of the activities of the stockyards which Mr. Upton Sinclair and his kind have revealed. Also, the author, all unconsciously, gives us a glimpse of how very large "man" bulks in the horizon of these young ladies, despite their self-sufficiency. There are other matters which are decidedly hard to swallow. The unsophisticatedness of the heroine is overdrawn; can we believe that a girl of eighteen, who had been a social reporter on any paper, could be ignorant of the term "manicure"? Also, Nora's relations with Hamilton are hopelessly unconvincing. The reader knows all the time that he is a detrimental who does not intend to play fair to an innocent girl who has trusted him. That he does so is the more creditable, because Nora makes no secret of her love for him, and is continually hurt because he will not declare that it is returned. And thus when an unsavoury passage in his career comes to her notice, instead of thanking her stars for the chivalry shown her and tempering her outraged vanity with gratitude, she indulges in a frenzy of bitter disillusionment and reproach, and apparently can find no balm save in the production of ephemeral literature. This is one of the many signs of extreme youth in the story. But it shows freshness, sincerity, and a certain amount of promise which go to redeem its obvious imperfections. (Fisher Unwin.)

YEAR BOOK.

"The Year Book of New South Wales for 1916" has just been received from the publishers, the Year Book of Australia Publishing Company, of Goulburn-street. It contains, as usual, a quantity of statistical matter, covering a wide range of subjects, and a mass of general information, well arranged and concisely put, concerning the various Government, municipal, ecclesiastical, and educational directories, sporting records, a gazetteer of the State, and the customary almanac matter. The work appears to be right up to date, and is certainly very useful. There is a good map of New South Wales railways and principal coach routes.

LATE DR. JAMES LAMROCK.

The death occurred at his residence, Kama, Kambala-road, Bellevue Hill, on Thursday, of Dr. James Lamrock, who was well-known in the district, and also in the Illawarra suburbs. He resided at Kogarah, where he practised his profession, for some years, and took a great interest in the St. George Cottage Hospital, of which he was one of the honorary physicians. He afterwards went to reside at Bellevue Hill. For several months past he had been in failing health. The deceased was also well known in sporting circles, and owned and raced several horses. Dr. Leslie J. Lamrock, of New South Head-road, Waverley, and Colonel J. Lamrock, who is in command of the 20th Battalion, at present on active service, are cousins of the deceased. The remains of the late doctor were interred in the South Head Cemetery yesterday, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Last week attention was drawn in this column to the paucity of Shakespearean performances in London during 1915. By a coincidence, under date London, December 16, the writer of "A Woman's Letter" furnishes news which shows that the reverse will be the case this year. Our correspondent describes the Matheson Lang revival of "A Merchant of Venice" at the St. James's Theatre, adding that a series of the bard's pieces is promised at the Royal Court Theatre, that on his return to London, Sir George Alexander will revive "Much Ado About Nothing," and that Miss Horniman will stage the "Comedy of Errors" at the Duke of York's. Further than this, Sir Herbert Tree will put on the chronological plays "Richard II.," both parts of "Henry IV.," "Henry V.," and "Henry VI." All this forms an almost unprecedented effort, but we need it. Nothing stirs the blood in these warlike times like Shakespearian drama, nothing is so "English" in the best sense of the term. As regards the new Shylock by Matheson Lang, with his wife, Miss Hutin Britton, as Portia, these artists are familiarly known in Australia (1910), New Zealand, India, China, the Straits Settlements, South Africa, the East Indies, and America, and the new Shylock has been quite evidently influenced by the artists' Eastern travels. Our correspondent remarks:—I have seen all the Shylocks of our time, from Sir Henry Irving onwards, with the exception of Sir Johnstone Forbes Robertson. It is a part largely overlaid by traditional playing, interpreted according to the temperamental qualities of the actor. Henry Irving's conception was that of a hard, soured, cynical Jew; dignified, because everything Sir Henry touched carried his own natural dignity and courtesy with it. His was almost a terrifying Jew. Mr. Arthur Bourchier played him more broadly, without the dignity of an Oriental, which I conceive to be an attribute of the Jew at any time. Certainly, in classical drama. Sir Herbert Tree's Shylock was full of Israelitish touches. Very "Jewish" and pathetic in parts, hardly dignified, but interesting. It may be said of Mr. Matheson Lang that he plays Shylock almost naturally, not what actors term a "straight part," but he has so welded his study, that it becomes natural, plus the placing of the Oriental first, and this I take to be the true interpretation in playing at any time a Jewish character. It is a fine piece of work for so young a man to have carried through. The production is proving very popular. It is played with spirit, beautifully dressed in carefully chosen colours, and with beautiful Venetian scenery.

The local stage is likewise "threatened with intelligence," as Ichabod Bronson used to say, in the form of a Shakespearian season a few weeks hence at the Adelphi Theatre. At present the new company formed for that purpose by the George Marlow direction is appearing in Melbourne at the Princess's Theatre. "The Merchant of Venice" was first revived, whilst just now "Othello" is being performed with Mr. Allan Wilkie in the name-part, and Miss Frediswyde Hunter Watts as Desdemona. These artists, who have travelled a great deal, are new to this part of the world. Mr. Wilkie is an English actor, who received his Shakespearian training whilst supporting at different times Sir Herbert Tree, Mr. Fred. Terry, and Julia Neilson, and other well-known artists, with the result that he took part in two command performances before King Edward. Although the Melbourne season is at popular prices, the mounting of the play is described as excellent, Mr. Wilkie's experience as a producer having proved of great value, whilst the leading impersonations have held the attention of successive audiences. This art enterprise should especially receive support in view of the fact that without it the regular stage would have drawn a blank this year as far as the greatest of all dramatists is concerned.

"Adventures in a Perambulator" is the title of a whimsical suite in five movements which has just been performed with success by the New York Symphony Orchestra, and now seems likely to become widely known. The author is John Alden Carpenter, a graduate of Harvard, employed in his father's firm, George R. Carpenter and Co., Chicago, dealers in railroad and vessel supplies. The suite was originally introduced by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra last March, and has been performed by them at Detroit, Cleveland, and elsewhere. The composer is also literary, and has written a voluminous and most amusing programme note upon "Baby" and his sensations and reflections. The composer seems to have been influenced by the manner of Debussy in his effort to suggest the dim and miraculous world of childhood; but some of the movements possess a direct and tender charm, and each of the characters is identified by a separate theme. "Baby," for example is musically revealed in his symphonic perambulator, delightfully suggested by a combination of strings and celeste, and seeking to be present "always at the focus where the greatest number of vital forces unite in their energy." Baby is tucked into his "pram" by an indomitable Nurse ("She is older than I, and very powerful"), a strap is buckled over his stomach, the Nurse stands firmly behind, and, like the racehorses, "they are off." There materialises a vital force—the policeman; an unprecedented man! "Round like a ball, taller than my father. Blue—fearful—fascinating." For the nurse, too, this is a vital force. Here is romance, a meeting, conversation. Emerges then the hurdy-gurdy. "A dark man turns music out of a box on wheels; a dark lady, richly dressed, turns when the man gets tired; and there is an irresistible waltz, dazzlingly adorned with glockenspiel, harp, celeste, xylophone." The composer makes another success by the whimsical charm of his music when Baby sees the lake with its sunbeams glancing from its wavelets. "Can there be a more delicious thrill than is yielded here?" asks the author-composer. "There can be. There is. Dogs! One by one they appear; then in pairs, then in societies. Little dogs, with sisters, big dogs, with aged parents. Kind dogs, brigand dogs, sad dogs, and gay;" and the orchestra "yaps" with persuasive realism, and you hear the theme of "Where, and oh where has my little dog gone?" Baby is amused, and to think more clearly closes his eyes. How very large the world is! How many things there are! Baby sleeps (possibly the audience also!), and the Perambulator suite subsides faintly in a pianissimo.

A curious experiment has been made at the London Coliseum, where Tchaikowsky's popular "1812" overture for full orchestra, military band, and carillon, has been rearranged so as to combine with a spectacular stage piece. The idea was carried out in the most elaborate fashion by T. C. Fairbairn, an operatic stage manager at Covent Garden, and under Beecham. The scenario is faithfully moulded upon the overture. The curtain rises in darkness to a solo voice singing a lovely Russian folk-song, taken up by the choir p.p.p. Gradually emerge from the gloom the snow-covered, desolate Steppes in winter, with soldiers camped on the low hills, and the peasants in a small chapel singing the first chorale of the overture. Suddenly the country folk come rushing in before an invading army, which the soldiers ride forth to meet. Victory, followed by a joyous chorus. Russian dancers entertain the now delighted moujiks (Morozov and Vania, and the Misses Zalmani and Bromova whirled around the scene), and finally the great climax with "God the All-Terrible" overcoming the theme of the Marseillaise, amidst the 'ceaseless clang of bells, realises Tchaikowsky's dramatic conclusion.

"WHO'S WHO."

"Who's Who" continues to grow in bulk as the years roll on. The 1916 issue, which has just been received from the publishers, A. and C. Black, Ltd., of London, contains 2452 pages of closely packed details of the careers of more or less notable people. There are this time over 25,000 of these brief biographies, and Australia is well represented; but an unfortunate error is made in describing the Prime Minister (Mr. W. M. Hughes) as "the High Commissioner for Australia since 1915." The volume is indispensable to those who require for any reason to look up the personal history of people in the public eye and the particulars of the offices held by them and their addresses.

THE CHURCHES.

NATIONAL IDEALS.

Preaching at St. Matthias' Church, Paddington, last Sunday, on the subject of "Who will Dominate the Future of Australia," the Rev. S. G. Fielding emphasised that human life must have a purpose. That it should have no purpose, no plan or design, and that we were the victims of blind chance or insane necessity, was unbelievable and unthinkable. Any attempt to order and arrange human life apart from its fundamental plan and purpose—that was, apart from the mind and plan of God—must break down and sooner or later bring about ruin and disaster. "What is the drift of Australia's national life at the present time?" the preacher asked. "Is it towards high and noble ideals in our civic and political life or towards base and ignoble ends? Let us face the facts. In spite of desperate and sporadic attempts to check the current of national vice and worldliness, is it not a fact that Christ and great Christian ideals of truth and justice, love and sacrifice, are slowly but surely slipping out of our national life? Shall we awaken in time to the dangers that threaten us, or will the forces of evil grow stronger and stronger until at last they sweep away every Christian ideal from the land. Our great hope, possibly our only hope, is that the present war will awaken us from the shadows and shows of life, and that the trivial and unimportant will be seen in their proper perspective, and the great facts and realities of existence at last stand out in bold relief, even though it be against the red glare of battle, and the domination of Christ submitted to throughout the land."

CHURCHMEN AND THE THEATRE.

Commenting on an article in the "Church Standard," from the pen of a layman, on the subject of certain theatrical performances, the "Brisbane Church Chronicle" says:—"If only a quarter of the facts he alleged had been true his protest would have been amply justified. There is, however, no reason to suppose that he exaggerated in any way the seriousness of the evil, and it is an evil about which every Church man and Church woman ought to maintain a very active conscience. There is a certain type of play in which the seventh commandment seems to be treated as a piece of antiquated prudery, and breaches of it as subjects for innumerable jests. And there would seem to be certain theatrical performances in which the appeal is to all that is lowest and most vile. It is difficult to know how to deal with the evil. To protest is to advertise, and there are unhappily some people to whom a suggestion of 'riskiness' acts as a recommendation; and consequently many well-meant protests have before now defeated their own object. But one thing is clear. It is the theatre-going public which needs reforming first. The theatrical manager provides the sort of performances which the public are shown to like. If risky performances did not pay they would very speedily cease. Our business consequently is with the public taste, and in this connection a very serious responsibility rests upon all who profess and call themselves Christians. Reform will be brought about by example rather than by precept. If every practising Christian would resolutely refuse to patronise doubtful entertainments, and would determine to tolerate no jokes or innuendoes on the stage which he would not tolerate in his own drawing-room, and would teach his children to do the same, the evil would speedily cease."

Compared with the previous year, this shows an advance of 51,477 copies. The foreign Scriptures sold at the depot represent no less than 38 languages. The work of distributing New Testaments to the troops has been continued. A total of 9,450 of the 1/6 pocket edition and many hundred penny Testaments have been given to soldiers in camp and on transports. At a meeting held last week at the Chamber of Commerce, at which Archdeacon Gunther presided, the proposed memorial to Mr. Moss, who for over 28 years was a valued and successful worker among the sailors in Sydney, was discussed. It was considered that the memorial should be of a permanent character, and something that would be a constant reminder of the worth and work of this missionary, who was a true friend of sailors. The character of the memorial will be decided when it is known how much the hon. treasurer (Mr. Stephen) has received towards this object.

CUTTING OF PACIFIC CABLE.

STORY OF NURNBERG'S RAID.

In their annual report, just issued, the Pacific Cable Board give some interesting details of the attack on the Fanning Island station by the German cruiser Nurnberg—one of Von Spee's squadron—on September 7, 1914, as the result of which effective communication was interrupted for several weeks.

Early in the morning the cruiser approached the island flying the French flag. This ruse deceived the board's officers as to the true character of the vessel until she landed armed men and a machine-gun. The landing party immediately arrested the superintendent, surrounded the station, and trained the machine-gun on the office buildings. They then entered the office, and having made prisoners of the staff on duty they attacked the instruments with axes. The staff had been able to transmit brief intelligence of the occupation both to Bamfield and to Suva before the enemy entered the instrument-room and cut off communication. All the cash on the station was taken.

Immediate steps were taken to engage a vessel to proceed to the island, and the steamer Kestrel left Honolulu on this mission on September 19. In the meantime the staff at Fanning Island had been actively employed in efforts to restore temporary communication, and in spite of the absence of suitable appliances for handling and repairing cables, and of the improvised character of the apparatus available, communication was successfully established with Suva on September 22. The Kestrel arrived at the island three days later.

In effecting the repair of the Suva cable (says the report), the members of the staff concerned displayed remarkable ingenuity and skill. In particular, the work of one of the operators, Mr. Hugh Greig, is worthy of special mention. This officer adapted an ordinary pickaxe to the purpose of a grapnel, and succeeded by this means in partially raising the heavy shore end where it was cut. He also dived, and, working under the sea, secured the end by ropes, thus enabling it to be raised above the sea level.

The cables were restored by the repair ship Iris at the end of October. It is added that the replacements of the apparatus, buildings, and plant destroyed involved an outlay of about £5000.

ALONG THE SUEZ CANAL.

Sapper Fred Lorking, of the 1st Engineers, writing from Tel-el-Kebi Camp, Egypt, under date December 29, says:—"We are camped practically on the same ground as where the great battle was fought in the Soudan war, and one or two of our men have picked up a few relics. There is not much to be seen in this place—a few trees, but very little vegetation, and miles of nothing else but sand. We have had a pretty good time until we moved here. We get a little fruit, such as oranges, dates, and figs, but they have not the taste of our own fruit. It is the middle of winter; the days are hot, but the nights very chilly, and we have to be very careful of ourselves. The Egyptians are not bad fellows, but the Arabs and half-castes are a dirty race. We are receiving some comforts from the Comfort Fund, for which we are very thankful."

THE FIRST SERVICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Archdeacon Boyce, in his letter on the above subject, published in your issue of the 7th inst., writes:—"I am in full agreement with Mr. Watson that the date of the first service was February 3, 1788. . . . But this is not a very recent discovery, as some appear to think. Dr. Houison, three or four years before he died, found this out."

I cannot understand the Archdeacon writing this when Dr. Houison and himself, so strongly tried the public to accept Sunday, January 27, as the date. In the Synod of 1903 Archdeacon (then Canon) Boyce proposed a resolution affirming the Sunday after Anniversary Day as the anniversary of the church in this Continent, and in the "Church Commonwealth" Dr. Houison wrote the leading article on January 29, 1904. In this he contended that all the evidence went to prove that January 27 was the day. In a sermon preached in St. Andrew's Cathdral on Sunday, January 31, 1904, by Canon Boyce he adopted Dr. Houison's theory.

Dr. Houison read a paper on the same subject at a meeting of the Historical Society on September 5, 1904, in which he quoted from many authorities in his endeavour to prove that January 27 was the correct date. On October 3 following I read a paper, and used all the same authorities to prove February 3, 1788, as "the Sunday after our landing," but the members present were unsympathetic, even Canon Boyce would not support my view.

I had the satisfaction, however, when Archdeacon Boyce was absent in England of being the means of proving by Dr. Arthur Bowes' journal, which he kept on the transport Lady Penrhyn, that on February 3 "this day Rev. Mr. Johnson preached on shore for the first time," which has since been endorsed by a leaf from a printed diary, in the Mitchell Library, by Richard Williams, of the ship Borrowdale, which states that on "Sunday, February 3, the first sermon was preached from the 116th Psalm, 12th verse." My old friend, the late Dr. Houison, agreed on many things with me, but on this we were at variance. I may say that during his lifetime we had not the two pieces of evidence here quoted. I am, etc.,

THE RED KITE.

BY WILLIAM A. HENRY.

Brand nodded several times.

"I know your style," he said. "I needn't have asked the question. Now you've seen my plane, and you know just a little of what she can do. Isn't it plain that I only just want a little help to do a great deal?"

"What kind of help?" asked Gardiner.

"Hands for the 'Red Kite,'" replied Brand. "She wants a crew of three or four to get her beak and claws working at full pressure."

Gardiner and Chetwood surveyed each other.

"I don't know what to say," observed the former. "Of course, we're both obliged to you—and it's tempting—very tempting. But I'm in the regulars, and I've just been arranging for a commission for my friend in my regiment. And, you see, this—this invitation of yours is—well, it's about the most irregular thing I've ever heard of."

Brand looked acutely disappointed.

"I'll admit that it's not the kind of proposition that crops up every day," he said. "Anyway, I shall be dead sorry if you don't come. I'd hoped ——"

Just then a light footstep sounded on the gravel path. Helen Chetwood came unexpectedly upon them from round the corner of the summer-house. Although she bestowed a general smile on the group, her eyes lingered longest on Brand.

"This is our first meeting this morning, then," she exclaimed. "These two breakfasted at a ridiculously early hour, while as to you, Mr. Brand, you must have been late—at least, I hope so for your sake."

Brand had risen hastily to his feet. True to his hospitable instincts, Chetwood had supplied him with a tweed suit of his own. Seated, the disparity between human inches and garments had not been remarkable. Now it leaped to the eye in that disconcerting fashion possessed by glaringly inappropriate clothes. Brand, intercepting a gleam in Miss Chetwood's eye, smiled.

"It seems to me, madam," he said, "that just at present I owe most things to your family, even those I stand up in. Your brother's been just too kind, and, as to your husband ——"

Helen Chetwood interrupted him with a gasp. "As to my who?" she cried.

"My impression was wrong, I suppose ——"

The colour had mounted to Helen's face, and in a far lesser degree to Gardiner's. Nevertheless, he retained his self-possession.

"If not entirely wrong," he said, "at all events premature. Of course," he added hastily, catching Helen's eye, "that is a joke. Sometimes one makes a joke about the most desirable object in the world."

"Mr. Brand," she said abruptly, "you are a mystery!"

The accusation seemed to take away the breath of every one but Brand.

"That may be," he admitted calmly. "Certainly I seem to have made a mistake. I'm sorry."

"Oh, never mind about that!" protested the girl hurriedly. "I want to know about you! The others wouldn't tell me anything, so I come to the fountain-head direct, you see. You don't mind, do you? Last night you descended from the moon, apparently; you tell us you came from Virginia to Tawmouth in twenty-four hours, and lastly, instead of finishing your dinner, you fall asleep over the table! Now this morning you look fresh and revived. But you're still wearing Stanley's clothes. And that isn't all! These two other people here are horribly, openly secretive. Larnby just shakes his head, and Chater is going about with eyes like saucers. Won't you be my friend and tell me all about it?"

It was an unusually lengthy speech for Helen Chetwood. Before either of the younger men could intervene with a laughing protest Brand took up the word.

"Of course," he said, nodding his head vigorously. "I must have come in amongst you like a rocket—and then naturally enough you must have thought I'd fizzled out all of a sudden. You see, last night I was too tired to take in much, and this morning I've been so occupied with my affairs that I declare I'd taken everything for granted—even down to these clothes. But if you'll just do me the favour of strolling with me, Miss Chetwood—there, I've got it right this time, haven't I?—I'll take every bit of the lid off the mystery at the same time."

Accompanied by Helen Chetwood, he began to walk towards the field where the "Red Kite" reposed, partly under the shelter of a barn, partly concealed by green rick-covers. Stanley Chetwood and Gardiner followed, a little surprised at Brand's eager haste to disclose his plans.

When the "Red Kite" was uncovered the machine looked even more formidable in the daytime than by night. After all, the aeroplane's name bore some relation to its appearance, for it was evident now that body and wings were painted a glowing red. The girl's first astonishment overcome, Brand found an appreciative audience in Helen; indeed, he took as much trouble in exhibiting his winged pet to her as though she had been one of the leading experts in air-craft.

At the end of a quarter of an hour Helen was almost as enthusiastic a worshipper of the machine as its owner. She was patting its red frame for the fiftieth time.

"But you must take me up in this wonderful bird," she urged. "I shall never be content until I have flown in her."

It was at this point that Brand justified his inclusion among the pastmasters of strategy. He placed his hand on the girl's arm.

"You shall fly in the 'Red Kite' not once, but a dozen times if you wish," he exclaimed. "But I shall look to you for something in return. Now, Miss Chetwood, if ever there was a persuader, you're one—or you could be one if you tried. I've asked these two gentlemen to join me in the 'Red Kite'; they'd like to, I flatter myself. But they're in two minds. It's new, you see, and sudden, and against red-tape. But a word from you ——"

"To join you in the 'Red Kite?' I don't quite understand."

"It's this way," persisted Brand. "Their enemies are mine, as it happens. With their help I can make a few flights in the 'Red Kite' that will make a good few Germans sorry they were born, and that will make a whole mob of others forget that they ever were born."

Helen's glance leaped from her brother to Gardiner. A little of her calm had fled.

"I see—oh, yes, I see," she cried, a little catch in her voice. "But tell me—won't it be a desperate thing to do?"

"It'll be livelier than sitting in an office totting up accounts," admitted the aviator.

Gardiner, availing himself of the aid of a step-ladder which had been brought upon the scene, climbed into the well of the aeroplane, and took his bearings from his new point of vantage.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "I'm as keen as mustard, really, so's Stanley. But what about my regiment? And, as you know, Stanley's on the eve of getting his commission. What about our leave? Mine, at all events, is nearly up."

"No; confound it," he muttered. "It wouldn't be easy. I can see that."

Brand turned to Helen again.

"You could do things in the 'Red Kite'," he said pointedly, "that not even the finest regiment in the British army could do. She's there to take her part in saving that Empire of yours. And—I just want two men—Britishers."

His voice had a ring in it now. Helen bent her head.

"Yes," she said in a low voice, "it would be a noble part to play—if it was clearly duty—the first duty."

Gardiner drew a long breath.

"My first duty," he said, "is to my regiment—or don't you think that I should jump at this chance? As it is, I'll run up to town, and see if arrangements can be made——"

"That's consent!" shouted Brand. "That's all I want; the rest is easy."

"You wouldn't say that," retorted Gardiner, "if you knew our War Office in the piping times of peace. It's different now—and there's a sporting chance for both of us, Stanley. If it comes to the very worst I may be able to bluff a medical board—but we'll hope it won't come to that."

"I hope not," said Chetwood, grinning. "Do you know, I have a sort of presentiment—I already see myself as one of the crew of the 'Red Kite.'"

"Then good luck to us all!" cried Brand, with enthusiasm. "I'll go with you to London, and get myself supplied with a proper outfit of clothes."

Some time later, as the four were walking slowly in the direction of the house, they met Chater. The man saluted, stared curiously at the figure of Brand in his ill-fitting clothes, and was about to pass on, when Chetwood stopped him.

"Remember, Chater," he urged, with some emphasis, "that you've neither heard nor seen that aeroplane! Never mind who asks. It's most important!"

Chater regarded him with an expressionless face.

"What aeroplane, sir?" he asked.

It was not until he had stared at him for some while that Chetwood caught the faintest twinkle in the man's eye. Then he laughed. Obviously Chater had learned his lesson well.

Just as they were about to enter the house Chetwood stopped dead.

"Supposing all goes well," he exclaimed, "what flag are we to fly?"

"Flag!" ejaculated Brand. "Must we have a flag?"

Gardiner squared his shoulders.

Helen broke a somewhat blank pause.

"Why not the flag of the Tawmouth Sailing Club?" she asked. "It's a blue ensign with a golden crown and sword—quite a pretty thing."

Her brother broke out into a burst of laughter. Gardiner joined in this for a few seconds. Then he pulled himself up suddenly.

"Upon my soul!" he declared. "If we are going in for any semi-piratical work, I don't see why we shouldn't fly that as well as any other."

AMELIORATION COMMITTEE'S WORK.

The sum of £200,000, consisting of £170,000 from Australia Day Fund and £30,000 from National Relief Fund, has been made available for the Amelioration Committee for the purpose of assisting returned wounded and invalided soldiers and sailors. Sums of money also reach the committee from time to time from persons who are interested in the work.

The Amelioration Committee decided that its scope would be limited to affording temporary, not permanent, relief to returned wounded and invalided soldiers and sailors by temporarily augmenting their incomes to a fair living wage.

In accordance with the following supplementary payments to augment incomes may be made in order to bring the total weekly income from all sources:—For single men up to £2 10s per week; for married men without children up to £3 5s per week; for the first two children 5s for each child; over the children 2s 6d for each additional child; for single men with dependents, scale to be proportionate to married men. No payment will be made in respect to any child over [illegible] years of age.

Facilities have been placed in the way of the Amelioration Committee for receiving and dealing with the returned men as soon as is practicable after they reach the Base Hospital at Randwick. Here an office has been placed at the disposal of the committee to enable representatives to get in touch with the men and ascertain their requirements. In the case of men who are unable to leave the hospital, their cases are sympathetically dealt with, and cash relief is afforded where necessary.

Up to date 1480 individual cases are being dealt with by the committee, and the majority of these are being assisted by cash payments at least once in each period of 14 days. The first payment allowed by the committee was made on November 8, and up to the present the sum of £7500 has been disbursed. At the present time the weekly expenditure approximates £950, and is likely to increase.

When it is ascertained that a man is likely to be discharged at an early date he is encouraged to seek employment in the rooms of the State War Council, which adjoins the committee's rooms. Where it is impossible for a man to obtain employment immediately after his discharge the committee will assist him with cash payments, but he is warned that if able to work, unless he procures a situation within a reasonable time, pecuniary help afforded by the committee must cease. Country cases are dealt with in the same manner as those arising within city limits. The precaution is taken to arrange for the applicant to sign the information card in the presence of the local postmaster, or of a J.P.

The committee realised that useful assistance could be afforded to some men by making small cash advancements rather than by continued weekly payments. Returned soldiers who desire to enter into the vegetable and fruit delivery business, woodcarting, sand-shifting, and many other activities of this nature represented that payment of £20 or £30 or so would provide them with all the help they would need to enable them to make a satisfactory living. By liquidating by one cash payment the amount that they would ultimately receive by instalments under the scale of allowances already referred to many individuals have been helped in the way indicated, and in practically every case no further assistance has been asked for.

Only one thousand copies are being issued, and the Publishers guarantee that it will never be reprinted.

A unique feature of this volume will be that it will contain the list of those who have subscribed for it before publication. Every subscriber's name will be printed in this volume, and the thousand names will be an authoritative "Who's Who" to the artistic and loyal supporters of Australian Arts and Letters.

This list of patrons will naturally be of great historical value and interest. From similar lists contained in art volumes published in the past, we are now able to learn who were the helpers, and those who were the talkers.

The list of Australian and English subscribers who have already sent in their orders is a long and valuable one. Naturally, those who subscribe to such a volume as this are those who are a force to-day in their own sphere. The subscribers' list in this volume is really a list of those who command the respect of all Australians, and will always be a directory of our best "Ten Hundred."

No painter in Australia is so well known as the subject of this book. He is easily the [illegible] notable painter, for he is the most accomplished and varied artist in Australia.

Judge, therefore, of the value of this book, which permits the chief canvases of such an artist to be seen in comprehensive and comfortable form.

Those who have never had the privilege of seeing the bulk of Mr. Frederick McCubbin's work can, from these pages, get a very complete idea of his artistic aim and scope. Even if it were possible to group all the originals together in a gallery, a better and more convenient means of comparison of periods would not be possible.

In this book one can requisition his collection, or any part of it at will, with a certainty of seeing the nearest approach to the real thing. One, at any rate, that should satisfy every connoisseur, for every plate has had to pass the scrutiny of the creator of the originals—a man jealous of the visible report of his hard won effects, and taking no risks that might go on and injure their fame.

The pictures that these fine plates so triumphantly render present unbroken the most important record obtainable of the growth of Australian art. Not only has he been the first Australian artist to paint Australia, but he was the first to interpret her both in point of time and in point of significance. No other individual work, the product of this country, can show to [illegible] like manner so continuous and sustained an effort [illegible] so high a flight. He is the Dean of the Chapter.

To make this book the success it deserves the Publishers hope that the art-loving public of Australia will see to it that the edition is exhausted before publication.

The opportunity is again taken of thanking those Two Hundred and Fifty odd subscribers who have already sent in their order form. If all those who [illegible] urge that Australia should have her own [illegible] art and literature will at once let the Publishers [illegible] their request that a copy of this book be reserved for them, they will have added a definite stimulus to a work which by its very greatness is sure to be the standard of criticism for many a long day to come.

SOCIAL.

All contributions and accounts of weddings or other social entertainments intended for the "Social" Column in Saturday's issue should reach this office not later than Friday morning, and be fully endorsed.

Work at the Red Cross Sewing Guild recommenced last Monday, and the attendance has been very good. A great deal of work has been done for the packing department, and some cotton shirts and bandages made. Everyone who wishes to help is welcome at the rooms, but no work can be taken home.

The First Battalion Comforts' Fund is holding a garden fete at the Motor Yacht Club grounds at Rose Bay, on March 18. One of the principal attractions will be a competition of aqua-planing, the latest water sport. All information may be obtained from the secretary, Mrs. Glanville, c.o. Eastway's, 330 George-street.

The A.S.C. Comforts' committee, 18 Barrack-street, took out a concert party to the showground on February 9, for the amusement of the A.S.C. men, and others in camp. The performers were Misses Esther Mitchell, Ailsa Craig, Cocks, Warre, A. Hedger, Lang, and Mrs. Cottingham; Messrs. Lapish, Mackey, Jack, Benecke, and Misses Cottingham and Scott accompanists. The concert was splendidly attended, and much appreciated by the men and their friends. Major Baxter, at the close of the evening, called for a hearty vote of thanks.

The Mining Corps Comforts' Depot is now in running order at Robson's, Canberra House, Elizabeth and Liverpool streets. The depot is open on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 10.30 till 5. The committee are appealing for workers and help of any kind. Meetings will be held at the rooms every Wednesday at 4 o'clock.

The Thirteenth Battalion Comforts' Fund are arranging for a sock competition. Mrs. Sargent has donated a prize of £1 1s for fine socks; Mrs. Shellshear (whose husband is on active service) has donated a prize of half a guinea for coarse socks, and a prize of 5s is being given for knitters under 13 years of age. All socks are to be in at the 13th Battalion Comforts' Fund rooms, Bull's-chambers, Moore-street, where all particulars can be obtained, by the 13th of March. Mrs. Finn, in conjunction with Mrs. Keith Jopp (sock committee), has kindly consented to judge the entries.

Under the same auspices Mr. Arthur Appleby took a concert party to the Mining Corps at Casula on Monday night last, which was highly successful. The artists were the Misses Gladys Bourk and Sawkins, and Messrs. Arthur Appleby, Bryce Carter, M'Burney, Wright, and Vern. Barnett.

Mrs. H. D. M'Intosh presided at a meeting at the rooms of the British Empire League on Tuesday, to organise a matinee at the Tivoli on February 1, in aid of Mrs. Edward Rainer, recently widowed and left with six young children. As the beneficiary has no claim on any patriotic fund, private help is the only way to afford relief.

The Waverley Sandbag Committee have already asked for and obtained space at the forthcoming Show at Easter. They intend holding a kind of jumble stall, to aid their funds. They will have erected at the Show a barricade of sandbags, a dug-out, and trench, and hope by these means to show how necessary it is for them to be asking for more and still more sandbags. They meet every Monday afternoon at the Methodist Church, Bondi Junction.

Under the auspices of the Soldiers' Entertainments, Miss Amy Bice took a concert party to the Garrison Hospital, Victoria Barracks, which was very much appreciated by the patients. The following artists assisted:—Mrs. Hempton, of Wellington, New Zealand, Mrs. Ridley Robinson, the Misses Goodridge, Joan Walford, Amy Bice, and Messrs. Shettle and Fisher.

At the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Bowker, Dungog, a number of the friends of Mrs. Bowker assembled for the purpose of saying farewell and making a presentation prior to Dr. and Mrs. Bowker's departure from Dungog for Sydney.

In the parish hall at Gordon on Wednesday evening the certificates were presented to the ladies branch of the St. John Ambulance Brigade. Mr. R. S. Burns was asked to give a demonstration of first aid work and present the certificates. Some ladies present gave a display of stretcher drill. Mr. Burns then presented the certificates to the successful members. The commandant of the brigade, Mrs. Allworth, has qualified for the medallion.

A very cleverly constructed and brightly performed revue, entitled "The Terrific," was produced on Wednesday evening at the Hotel Pacific, Manly, in aid of the War Chest and the 19th Battalion and the Cootamundra Battalion Comforts' Fund. The four front rows were sold by auction, bringing in £300, and all the total booking realised the handsome sum of £400. To Miss Dorothy Gordon, Mrs. J. B. N. Osborne, and Mrs. Fred Aronson is due the credit for planning the revue, while Mr. H. B. Burcher, the well-known London Gaiety producer, was in charge of the production. Local events served as a peg whereon to hang many laughable incidents and amusing songs. A surfing ballet was the opening item, the girls being prettily clad in scarlet and white costumes with short skirts and smart scarlet bathing caps, making an effective finish. Those responsible for most of the fun were Mrs. Roderick Cameron, Mr. Allison, Misses D. and B. Gordon, D. Galbraith, D. Alexander, M. Collins, B. and J. Gordon, G. Bray, and Patsie Russell, Messrs. J. B. N. Osborne, Montague Stephen, Keith Baine, F. Alford, B. Dodds, and Dunn. Miss Winifred Mitchell gave a solo dance to great applause. The audience included Mr. and Mrs. B. Willsallen, Mr. and Mrs. Sept. Levy, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. H. Osborne, Dr. and Mrs. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Galbraith, Mr. and Mrs. W. Dowling, Mr. and Mrs. J. M'Master, Mrs. Herbert Marks, Mrs. Owen Dibbs, C. Lindeman, Miss Olive King, Miss Enid Bayly, Miss Mollie Little, Misses Phyllis and Ruth Macarthur, Misses N. Fitz Hill, Jacques, L. Walford, and Dr. Stewart M'Kay.

The president and council of the New South Wales Amateur Ladies' Swimming Association entertained the Queensland lady swimmers at the Wentworth Hotel on Wednesday. Mrs. W. Chambers was the hon. secretary.

The Polish Relief Committee have been informed that the cases of clothing forwarded by Mrs. Greaves, of Waratah, and also the four cases from the Hamilton-street clothing depot, have arrived safely. The London committee received further donations from New South Wales amounting to £3000, from Allies' Day. The Vevey committee send, through the channel of the Sydney committee, "an expression of profound gratitude to all those who, through their gifts, have contributed to help a nation plunged in the deepest distress ever known."

A military wedding took place at St. John's, Darlinghurst, on Thursday, when Canon Beck solemnised the marriage of Lieutenant Kenneth Street, of the German concentration camp guard, eldest son of Mr. Justice and Mrs. Philip Street, and Jessie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lillingstone, of Grafton. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. William Ogilvie, of Ilparan, Glen Innes, wore a gown of ivory duchesse satin, veiled in Limerick lace, with a swathed belt of the satin, a long veil of lace being also worn. She carried a bridal bouquet of carnations. Miss Agatha Flower was bridesmaid, wearing white taffeta, veiled with white net, trimmed with bands of pale green ribbon; the bodice was finished with a bolero of the green ribbon, and she had on a smart little pink hat trimmed with black velvet. Her bouquet was of pink roses. The reception was held at the Queen's Club, Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvie taking the places of the bride's parents, who are away in England. Among the guests were Sir Thomas and Lady Hughes, Mrs. Philip Street, Colonel Sands, Sir Albert and Miss Gould, Mr. J. T. Walker, Mr. Justice Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dowling, Mrs. E. J. Brady, Miss Ogilvie, Mrs. and Miss N. Griffith, and Mrs. Roger Hughes.

A quiet wedding took place at All Saints' Church, Hunter's Hill, on January 12, when Charles Esmond Parkinson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Parkinson, of Rockhampton, Queensland, was married to Nancy, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jardine Parkes, of Longueville, N.S.W., and granddaughter of the late Captain C. B. Whish, of Brisbane. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore white tulle over palest pink satin, with a bolero of diamante and pearls, and a court train of white ninon tied with pale pink. The bridesmaids were the Misses Kathleen Parkes (sister of the bride), and Vera Parkinson (sister of the bridegroom). Messrs. Claude and Alec Parkes (brothers of the bride) acted as best man and groomsman. The reception was held at Moondarewa, Longueville, and later Mr. and Mrs. Parkinson left for Melbourne.

A very quiet wedding was celebrated on January 12 in St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church, Phillip-street, Rev. John Ferguson officiating, between Hubert Alfred Dulhunty, third son of the late A. M. and Mrs. Dulhunty, of Queanbeyan, and Edith Evelyn M'Keahnie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. M'Keahnie, of Booroomba, Queanbeyan. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dainty frock of ivory chiffon taffeta, with wreath and veil, and carried a bouquet of white roses and fern. The bridesmaid was Miss Grace Peden (cousin of the bride), who wore a white lace frock with wide belt of palest mauve and hat to match, and also carried a bouquet of mauve flowers and fern. Mr. George Harcourt acted as best man.

A quiet wedding was celebrated at Holy Trinity Church, Dulwich Hill, on January 13, between John, fifth son of the late Mr. George Paxton Dunn, and Mrs. Dunn, of 35 Westbourne-street, Petersham, and Nellie Elizabeth, daughter of the late James Archer, of Rockley, and Mrs. Corbishley, of Allerton, Hurlstone Park. The bride, who was given away by her stepfather, wore a frock of white crepe de Chine, trimmed with Honiton lace and pearls, white aerophane hat, and carried a bouquet, and also wore a diamond ring the gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaid, Miss Mollie Archer, sister of the bride, wore a frock of white voile, trimmed with Malines lace and insertion, carried a pink bouquet, and also wore a diamond ring and bangle, gifts of the bridegroom. The reception was held at Allerton, Hurlstone Park, the residence of the bride's mother, about 50 guests being present. The brother of the bridegroom, Mr. Stanley Dunn, was best man. Later in the evening the happy couple left for the Mountains, and the Jenolan Caves.

On New Year's night, the marriage of Miss Eileen Mary Carmichael, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Carmichael, of Gowan Brae, Killara, to Mr. Adrian Hildebrand, second son of Captain and Mrs. Hildebrand, of Goat Island, Sydney, was celebrated at St. Martin's Church, Killara, by the Rev. Leo Charlton. The picturesque little Church of England was decorated with white marguerites and soft green foliage. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of pearl embroidery, lined with white Charmeuse, the long tunic of silk marquisette terminated in a pointed train, composed of Brussels lace. Her tulle veil was drawn back with a spray of orange blossoms, and fell to the bottom of the long trained skirt. She carried a sheaf bouquet of white roses and Jessamine. She wore a pearl and aquamarine pendant, the gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids, Misses Grace and Jean Hildebrand (sisters of the bridegroom) were attired in pale pink crepe de Chine dresses; picture hats of pink ninon, and black velvet streamers. They carried bouquets of pink roses, and carnations, and wore the bridegroom's gifts, gold brooches and bangles. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. A. B. Carmichael brother of the bride. Miss Ethel Chapman, a friend of the bride, presided at the organ. The reception was held at Gowan Brae, Killara, where about 60 guests assembled. The young couple took their departure later for the Blue Mountains, where the honeymoon was spent. The bride's going-away dress was a tailored costume of cream silk Maltese, and cream crepe de Chine blouse. The black hat was of tagel straw, lined with silk and ornamented with black and white trimming.

STATE CONSERVATORIUM.

THREE NEW ARTISTS ARRIVE.

The director of the N.S.W. State Conservatorium, who recently left for Melbourne to meet the Medina, with his wife and family and three new artists for his staff on board, returned by the P. and O. liner yesterday, "bearing his sheaves with him." At midday the whole party joyously examined the new school of music. They formed a numerous group, consisting of Mrs. Henri Verbrugghen and four children, Miss Verbrugghen, Miss Jenny Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. Messeas and two children, and Mr. and Mrs. David E. Nichols and one child, with three nieces and a nephew, an orphan family thus unselfishly cared for. Mr. Verbrugghen and Mr. Stanley Warwick (registrar) did the honors, and the concert hall was much admired.

The three new artists have all been long associated with the director in Glasgow, where they were on the staff of that long-established Scottish institution, the Athenaeum School of Music. They have also supported him as the second violin, viola, and 'cello of the Verbrugghen string quartet during a varying period of years. Miss Jenny Cullen, violinist, a dainty embodiment of "Bunty" in Graham Moffatt's comedy, is the daughter of the headmaster of a school at Paisley, who until his retirement two years ago was also examiner in music for the junior teacher-students of the Scottish Education Department. All these budding dominies are now required to secure a certificate in music. Mr. Cullen also conducted the Pollokshields Philharmonic Society in oratorio, supported by the famous Scottish Orchestra, and he directed a madrigal choir of 24 professional singers in glees and Brahm's lieder. Miss Cullen thus had music very much in her family, and she soon became proficient as a violinist, touring in classic concerts with her sister Ailine, of note as a solo pianist. This was after she had studied under Mr. Verbrugghen, under whom she has taught violin for seven years on the staff of the Athenaeum. Miss Cullen frequently plays the viola for orchestral purposes, and accompanies her pupils on the piano. She possesses three valuable instruments, of which the Gugliano violin is used for solo purposes.

Mr. David Nichols and his wife both belong to Leeds, where the ultimate viola player studied the violin under George Haddock, a teacher of high local reputation in his day. Fourteen years ago Mr. Nichols met Mr. Verbrugghen, who engaged him for the summer season with the Colwyn Bay orchestra, and when the Belgian artist was appointed leader of the Scottish Orchestra under Sir Frederick Cowen he took young Nichols with him as principal viola. Mr. Nichols has remained in this great orchestra ever since, and played with it under Emil Mlynarski, its new Polish conductor, a fortnight before he sailed for Australia. Mr. Nichols was also during all this time on the staff of the Athenaeum, and now he has followed his friend and patron to Sydney. This artist uses a beautiful Stradivarius viola.

Mr. James Messeas, the new 'cellist, belongs to a Spanish family by descent, and is married to a Scotch lady born at Biggar. His father was a Spanish double-bass player, who lived a great deal in Amsterdam, where he married Senorita Valenca. Throughout his career his numerous art engagements in septettes and sympony orchestras took him to London every year. The son was born, as chance so ruled, in Amsterdam, where he studied the 'cello in boyhood, and was ultimately "finished" under Professor Klinkel at Leipsic. His early musical course was influenced by the great and beneficial interest which Mr. Verbrugghen took in him, so that he prefers the French school. About ten years ago Mr. Messeas was appointed to the staff of the Athenaeum, and during that time he has been with the Scottish Orchestra. He is happy in the possession of an authentic "Joseph Guarnerius filius Andreae" (circa 1700), a fine specimen which will be included next year in Hill and Son's new illustrated book of ancient instruments of repute.

SHOW ON GOOD FRIDAY.

ARCHBISHOP WRIGHT'S PROTEST.

Archbishop Wright has once more protested against the holding of the Royal Agricultural Show on Good Friday.

In a letter to the council of the society, the Archbishop writes:—"May I express the hope that you may see your way to dispense with the holding of your great agricultural show upon this coming Good Friday. I have addressed you upon the subject before, and not without deliberation. Each year as it has come round has deepened my conviction that the protest, which I make in the name of a very large number of your fellow-citizens, is a just one, and that we ask nothing unreasonable in urging you to respect our solemn religious convictions, which are wounded whenever this day, associated in the minds of many of us with the profoundest and most heart-searching truth in our holy faith, is turned into a day kept in the carnival spirit. In this dark year, when the Angel of Death has touched so many homes, and the elemental facts of existence are so largely made prominent, we press our protest with the greater urgency."

FIELD GLASSES.

1000 PAIRS RECEIVED.

It was stated at District Headquarters yesterday that exactly 1000 pairs of field glasses had been received since the Commandant first made his appeal to the sporting public a few weeks ago. These glasses, which will be handed to officers leaving for the front with new units and reinforcements, have each had the name and address of the owner noted, so that in case the officer to whom they are handed returns some time in the future there will be a chance of the glasses finding their way back to the donor, with, perhaps, a thrilling story as to how useful they were as well.

Though the thousand pairs are now in hand, the appeal is just as strong as ever, and it is hoped by headquarters that everyone who can spare their glasses, and by so doing probably save lives, will send them along to the barracks; or if an address is sent to headquarters the glasses will be called for and a receipt given.

Mr. Asquith, English Prime Minister, recently gave the figures of the British killed in the war. Disease kills far more. Clement's Tonic saves thousands of lives yearly. Get it and live healthily.—Advt.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

The real estate market still continues along the slow but sure and steady path, and everybody connected with the business is satisfied to find the market in so sound a condition. There are many things which affect real estate, but the most pleasing circumstance is the absence of droughts. Good rains mean everything to the investor, for the stability of the country is thus assured, and it is wonderful how this acts on the needle of the real estate barometer.

This was the off week for indoor auctions, and those which were held could not be said to have produced great results, but such a finding cannot be said to have far-reaching effects, for many a property is brought under the hammer but is passed in for private sale. In fact, the auction is often really the means of specially bringing a property before the public, and it leads to a more ready sale privately. However, there was spirited bidding for many of the properties offered this week, and salesmen were kept busy answering inquiries and preparing contracts for private treaty.

On Wednesday Messrs. Hardie and Gorman had a large attendance at their weekly auction. Bull's-chambers, Moore-street, came under the hammer, but there was an absence of bids. However, for such a property as this it is generally left to the auctioneer to negotiate privately with prospective buyers. But Mr. Gorman sold a house in Norton-street, Leichhardt, for £400, also a block of land which formed a quarry for the Waverley Council, in Randwick. This allotment was sold by order of the council, and realised £380. The firm also sold two residences in Challis-avenue, Potts Point, for £3500; a residence and grounds at Wahroonga for £3500; a residence, Old South Head-road, Waverley, for £925; five lots in the Collaroy Estate, Narrabeen, at prices ranging from £2/5/ to £5/10/ per foot (total £740); a lot at Epping, in the Eldrwwyn Orchard Estate, at 20/ per foot; and several lots at Kandos.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench, at their weekly sale yesterday, had not a very extensive nor a very attractive catalogue to submit, but Mr. Little secured good bidding for almost everything he submitted. He managed to sell, subject to approval, a small property at Brighton-le-Sands for £370, and for nearly every property offered the reserve was almost reached. In fact, for a property at Waverley £630 was offered, and Mr. Little proposed to take £640, but the lady would not advance nor the owner come down in price. It is likely, however, that several of the properties on this catalogue will find buyers privately. During the week the firm sold a cottage in High-street, Marrickville, for £225; two houses in Riley-street, Surry Hills, for £675; and three lots in the Federal Estate, Bankstown, for £108.

Messrs. Raine and Horne included in their sales for the week a cottage at Watson's Bay for £450; a block of land, 200 feet frontage to New South Head-road, Vaucluse, at £3 per foot; a block of 250 feet frontage at Northbridge at 30/ per foot; and 50 feet to Beresford-road, Rose Bay, at £5/10/ per foot.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. this week disposed of a residence in Roseville-avenue, Roseville, for £1500; a cottage in Darley-street, Chatswood, for £1050; a block in the Dockhurst Estate, Five Dock, for £100; and a cottage in Blakesley-street, Chatswood, for £835.

This week Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co., Ltd., sold by private treaty, a two-storey brick house in Bourke-street, Darlinghurst for £675. A lot in the Kurnell Park Estate, at 12s 6d per foot. Also by public auction, 11 allotments of the New Station Estate, Concord, at prices ranging from £3 6s to £2 per foot. Total sales amounted to £2055. By private treaty, in conjunction with Graff and Co., 5 lots on the Tait Estate, Drummoyne, at prices ranging from 50s to 45s per foot, total sales amounting to £504.

Mr. C. H. Crammond included in his sales for the week a cottage, Napier-street, Petersham, for £1030; a block of land, North-street, Marrickville, at £7 per foot; a lot in the Russell Lea Estate, Five Dock, at £2 per foot; and several allotments in the Matson City Estate, Yowie Bay, at prices in advance of those prevailing last week.

The Permanent Trustee Company, as attorneys for the London owners of a property at the corner of York and Wynyard streets, have decided to bring the property under the hammer, at the rooms of Messrs. Hardie and Gorman, during the month of April. The property is the centrally-situated store occupied by Messrs. J. B. Tickle and Son.

Federal-chambers, at the corner of King and Pitt streets, will be offered at auction next Thursday, at the rooms of Messrs. Raine and Horne. This is a very fine city property. At the same sale quite an attractive list of city and suburban properties will come under the hammer.

Messrs. M. and J. O'Reilly will on Monday, February 21, at their office, Cobargo offer the well-known farm, Springdale, at Quaama, seven miles north of Cobargo, and better known as the farm of the late John Boyd.

On February 15, the well-known Metropolitan Hotel in Cobar will come under the hammer at the rooms of Mr. M'Donald, of Cobar.

The Woronora River estates will come under the hammer on Wednesday, March 8, at the rooms of the association, Castlereagh-street, city, when Messrs. Batt, Rodd, and Purves will offer camping blocks and week-end sites, with access to Sutherland, Como, and Hurstville. There are several thousand feet of water frontage to be offered, also farming blocks, comprising hundreds of acres subdivided into lots of from 5 to 30 acres, suitable for poultry, pig, or mixed farming.

Next Wednesday Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will offer newly erected, modern, and up-to-date flats at Coogee, a good chance for investors.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will also offer on Wednesday, at their rooms, the Claylands Estate, at St. George's Basin, Jervis Bay, which is contiguous to the Federal port and naval bases. The land which has a frontage to the Wool-road, Island Point-road, and the waters of St. George's Basin (without reservation), is situated five miles from Huskisson, about 15 miles from Nowra, and about 2¼ miles from the site of the proposed railway station at Tomerong. It is said to be undulating and level land, fairly timbered, suitable for subdivision into farm and orchard blocks, week-end and tourist lots. There are 640 acres to be submitted.

THE PRICE OF THE GAS COMPANY'S PROPERTY.

Those in the real estate business who were acting as valuers in the matter of the resumption of the Gas Company's premises in Kent-street are pleased with the result, and glad to know that the matter is settled so satisfactorily. The price is regarded in real estate circles as a fair one. The estimates show that for the block of land, comprising about six acres, somewhere in the vicinity of £250,000 was the value placed upon same by valuers. The land has a water frontage, a frontage to Kent-street, and also to Jenkin-street, and the new thoroughfare, known as Hickson-road. The balance of the money for compensation went for the business side of the proposal, which included buildings, removal to Mortlake, and extending mains to city from Mortlake, and other such factors necessary in the change.

SUBDIVISION WORK.

LAST SATURDAY'S AUCTIONS.

There were two subdivision sales last Saturday, both of which proved successful. The two realised a total of over £4500, and one sale was held at Hurlstone Park where Messrs Richardson and Wrench disposed of 22 lots in the seventh subdivision of the Jeffrey's Estate at prices ranging from 26s to £3 17s per foot. This estate has always been in good demand, and very few allotments can now be obtained of the first six subdivisions submitted, except, of course, at considerably advanced prices. Buildings have gone up rapidly all over the estate. In fact, quite a population has taken possession of the Jeffrey's subdivisions.

The second sale of note last Saturday took place at Concord, where the New Station estate came under the hammer. The land is close to the site fixed by the Railway Department for the new railway station, hence the name of the subdivision. Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co. were the auctioneers. There was a good attendance at the sale. Bidding was brisk, and over £2000 worth of the estate was sold. The prices per foot ranged from £2 to £3 6s.

TO-DAY'S AUCTIONS.

There is but one subdivision sale this afternoon, and judging from the enquiries made during the week as to the nature of the property to be offered it ought to prove a very successful auction. It is the properties at Homebush in the estate of the late Mr. A. W. S. Gregg which are to come under the hammer. There were few if any men in Sydney who were better judges of real estate than the late Mr. Gregg, who as the head of the firm of Richardson and Wrench spent a lifetime in valuing and selling properties in and around Sydney. Mr. Gregg selected his Homebush estate many years ago, when the whole district was a huge meadow, but now it is a populated centre. Among the properties included in the catalogue for this afternoon is a very fine two-storey villa residence, an attractive cottage, three choice villa sites, four cottage sites, four more building sites, a very fine corner allotment, and eight allotments facing Underwood-street.

There is to be a sale at Lawson, on the Blue Mountains, this afternoon, when Messrs. Gordon Bros. will offer the residence known as "Philcarra," on the Bathurst-road. The house is five minutes from the local railway station, has six rooms, acetylene gas, fruit and flower gardens, and every convenience.

APPROACHING SALES.

Next Saturday there is to be a sale at Faulconbridge, and, judging by the demand for land, and the result of recent auctions at this centre of the mountains, this subdivision sale should prove successful. Mr. C. H. Crammond will conduct the auction, and will submit the Mount Ida Heights Estate, which is one of the highest points in the district. The estate comprises 42 good building sites, with liberal frontages and excellent depths. The position is a good one, and is about seven minutes from the station. Faulconbridge, with its historic past, possesses an ideal climate for both summer and winter.

Next Saturday Messrs. Badgery Bros., of Sydney and Newcastle, and Messrs. J. D. Wood and Co., of Moss Vale, will offer the home of the late Mr. F. A. Badgery at Exeter. The subdivision forms part of the Vine Lodge Estate, and there are 14 blocks, in area from two to five acres each, to select from. The land is situated about 10 minutes' walk from the Exeter railway station, which is 93 miles from Sydney, and enjoys a convenient train service. It is seven miles from Moss Vale, close to well-known properties. It is an ideal spot for Sydney people to build their country home at, for the climate is beautiful. It is one of the highest points on the southern line, 2400 feet above sea level.

The Russell Estate at Albion Park, in the Illawarra district, will come under the hammer on Wednesday next, when Messrs. Stewart and Morton, of Nowra, and Messrs. O'Donnell and Stumbles, of Wollongong, will submit to auction at Albion Park a subdivision of 20 blocks, comprising grazing areas and town properties. The sale is by order of Mr. M. Mathie, who is administrator in the estate.

On February 26 there will be another sale at Eastwood, No. 7 of the Eastwood House Estate. The land to be offered is on the hillside, in view of the Eastwood railway station, and a little to the north of Eastwood House. There is no doubt these are some of the picked sites in the estate of the late Edward Terry. It forms portion of the original grounds around the house. As a suburb Eastwood has made wonderful progress, and, together with Epping, is now the most progressive on the Hornsby to Strathfield line. There is gas and city water, and a good train service. Messrs. Richardson and Wrench are the auctioneers.

Messrs. Robey, Hanson, and Strong, of Manly, will conduct an auction at the Manly Literary Institute and School of Arts next Wednesday of a number of local properties, including several residences, and also vacant land in different parts of the district. Persons in search of a residence or a block of land in Manly have a very good opportunity of securing one at this sale.

There is to be a final realisation of the Berry Estate. All unsold properties in this well-known estate will be offered by Messrs. Stewart and Morton at the Berry showground on Friday, February 18. There are several dairy farms, a number of grazing areas, blocks of unimproved lands, also improved properties, cottages, about 50 building sites, and other lands; so that those who wish to purchase in this old-established and fertile country will have every opportunity of making a good selection.

On Saturday, March 4, the Township Estate, at Bankstown, which is right at the station, will come under the hammer, when Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will offer business and residential sites.

On Saturday, 26th inst., Messrs. Raine and Horne will submit a subdivision in an estate in a new but growing suburb at Bunnerong, on the Randwick side. This is the second subdivision of this estate to be offered. The first sold well. The land has about a mile frontage to the Botany and La Perouse trams. It is splendid building land, and within easy walk of the wellknown Yarra Beach, and it is right against the Botany railway in course of construction.

Messrs. Horning and Co. have arranged for two additional subdivision sales. The first is on March 11, the Silver Beach Estate, at Kurnell, close to the historic landing place of Captain Cook. The land faces the famous Silver Beach. At Pymble a fine subdivision on Telegraph-road will be offered at an early date; also at Taren Point, George's River, the new approach to Cronulla, a fresh subdivision, consisting of water frontages and eligible week-end home sites, will come under the hammer. This sale is being held as soon as the steam punt is established.

MILITARY PAY.

NEW SYSTEM ADOPTED.

The military authorities in New South Wales are discarding the money order system of payment of allotments by members of the A.I.F., and are introducing the card system. The payment by money order will cease as from February 18, and in the future payment will be made under the card system on every other Thursday, which days will be known as "Military Thursday," instead of twice a month as previously.

The card system is simple in the extreme, and will make for labour-saving in the department, and there can be no vexations delays as far as the allotees are concerned. Each allotee should, on their next visit to the local post or money order office, make a request for his or her allotment card, and identification card. The allotment card is made out in squares—one for each fortnight, until August 8, 1918, and on its presentation at the post or money order office on Military Thursdays the postmaster will stamp the square with the date stamp, and hand over the money. Particular care should be taken of these cards, which should be kept in a safe place, preferably under lock and key. In case of a card being inadvertently destroyed application for a duplicate should be made to the local postmaster, and not to the Expeditionary Paymaster, Victoria Barracks.

It will not be necessary either for any allotee to inform the Expeditionary Paymaster of any change of address. The local postmaster has been granted the power to transfer the allotment at the request of the allotee. Thus, if an allotee now residing at Bondi moved in three months' time to Manly, he would not communicate with the barracks, but with the postmaster at Manly. This transfer is provided for on the identification card. The military allotment certificate (or card) must on all occasions be presented on "Military Thursday" at the post-office, together with the identification card, which is accepted as the receipt for the money. With the payment of the money a blank identification card is also handed the allotee by the postmaster, so that he may be able on each successive fortnight to compare the particulars of the soldier who has made the allotment and the signature of the allotee.

Allotments previously paid into banks will be dealt with as formerly.

HORTICULTURAL GUIDE.

The thoroughly practical character of that well-known annual, "Sutton's Amateur's Guide in Horticulture," is well maintained in the 1916 issue which has just come to hand. Descriptions are given of a number of improved strains of vegetables, prominent among which are two marrow-fat peas, one, the V.C., being claimed to be the largest-podded pea in commerce. A large number of pages are devoted to flowers. Two coloured plates call for special mention. These represent the Southcote Beauty Aster and Giant Frilled Sweet Peas. The Guide is, as usual, printed and bound in excellent style. Illustrations appear at almost every opening, over 200 being reproduced from photographs, and there are [illegible]

LAW REPORT.

BANCO COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Sly, without a jury.)

APPEAL AGAINST LAND TAX.

Busby v Deputy Federal Commissioner of Land Tax.

Mr. Pickburn and Mr. Weigall, instructed by Messrs. Macnamara and Smith, appeared for the appellant; and Mr. Shand, K.C., and Mr. Pike, instructed by the Commonwealth Crown Solicitor, for the defendant. This was an appeal by Alexander Busby, the owner of Cassilis station, Cassilis, against the amount of the assessment made for purposes of land tax on the unimproved value of his property. The appeal was for the years 1910 to 1914, and the hearing took place towards the end of November last. The Commissioner assessed the unimproved value at 40s per acre, and the area involved was 27,800 acres. Appellant's valuation was 21s per acre.

His Honor now delivered his reserved judgment, and, after reviewing the evidence which had been placed before him, said that from his view of the land, and from the very inferior country in the sandstone portion of the station, and the very large area of rocky basalt country, and taking the evidence as a whole, he was of opinion that £2 18s per acre was the improved value of the property, £1 1s per acre the value of the improvements which left the unimproved value of the property at £1 17s 6d per acre. He reserved the question of costs.

(Before Mr. Justice Sly.)

THE MOSMAN ROBBERY.

APPLICATION FOR BAIL REFUSED.

Mr. Hodgson, instructed by Mr. W. D. M'Mahon, appeared for Joseph Christopher Fitzsimmons, Albert Lewis, and James Ryan, who are under committal on a charge of robbery at the residence of Mr. W. H. Kelly, bookmaker, of Mosman, and applied for bail. Mr. Bathgate, of the Crown Law Department, appeared to oppose the application. The matter was before his Honor last Wednesday, when affidavits by applicants were read, in which they stated that they had a good defence to the charge, and that they would be prejudiced if they were not released on bail to prepare evidence to rebut the charge. Further affidavits were now read in support of the application, one being by Emily Fitzsimmons, wife of one of the accused, in which she stated that she and her three children were absolutely dependent upon her husband, and that on the night of the robbery he was at home in bed. She was, therefore, in a position to give evidence that he was innocent of the charge. As to Fitzsimmons it was also stated that when arrested only £5 in gold was found in his possession. Additional affidavits on behalf of the other accused were filed, denying that they were present at the time of the robbery.

Mr. Bathgate, after recounting the facts as they came out of the police court investigation, pointed out that the offence was a very serious one, and took place at midnight at the point of the revolver. Two notes had been identified, and at the present time £300 of the money stolen had not been recovered, and probably never would be.

Mr. Hodgson addressed his Honor, submitting that the evidence of identification was weak as to all the accused, and more particularly in regard to Fitzsimmons, in whose possession very little money was found. He further contended that there was no evidence that if accused were released on bail they would not appear.

His Honor said he must refuse bail, but preferred not to give any reasons for his decision.

COURT OF MARINE INQUIRY.

THE TIME AND THE KEDUMBA.

Mr. H. E. Moore, of the Crown Law Department, appeared for the Superintendent of Navigation, and Mr. Russell (of Messrs. Sly and Russell) for Captain Robinson, master of the Time, a coastal cargo steamer, belonging to Howard Smith Company, Ltd. The case arose out of a collision which took place on September 11 last off Fort Macquarie between the Time and the Sydney Ferry Company's steamer Kedumba, by which the latter vessel suffered damage. At the inquiry into the circumstances attending the collision the Court found that the Time was to blame, and the master was now called upon to show cause why his certificate should not be dealt with.

Mr. Russell said that all he asked the Court to do was to hear the captain's evidence, and come to the conclusion that even if it thought that in fact he was in fault, he had merely committed an error of judgment. He asked the Court to give respondent credit for doing what he considered best at the time, under the impression that the ferry boat was taking her usual course.

Evidence was then given by the respondent, who said that at the time of the accident he went full speed ahead, believing that was the only way to keep clear of the Kedumba, if the latter was going her usual course. He also said that the present occasion was the first time any charge had been brought against him. Robert Murdock, manager of Howard Smith Company, Ltd., gave evidence that respondent had been in the service of the company for 15 years, with an unblemished record. He would not have the slightest hesitation in employing him again.

His Honor said the Court had given very careful consideration to what was brought before it at the inquiry, and saw no reason to alter the conclusion at which it then arrived. It had determined that the certificate of respondent must be suspended for three months, dating from December 1. The Court also expressed an opinion that it had dealt leniently with him, and that was because it desired to consider the proceedings in another court before finally dealing with the matter, a course which necessarily caused respondent a great deal of anxiety. The Court had also taken into consideration the fact that he had a very excellent record. It dealt with his certificate with very great regret, but it felt bound to do so for the reason that if ordinary seamanship had been used there would have been no accident. It was a stupid idea in cases such as this to go at full speed, and rush a vessel ahead, instead of slowing down or stopping, particularly at a spot which was one of the most dangerous places in the harbour. No doubt better control of the helm was secured, but that did not counterbalance the very great risk which was run.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Murray and a jury.)
Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.)

ACQUITTED.

Joseph Oliver was charged with receiving and fraudulently embezzling the sum of 4s 4d. The Crown case was that the accused was a breadcarter in the employ of Andrew M'Kye, a baker in business at Manly. It was alleged that the accused received 4s 4d from a customer, and that he failed to account for the same to his master. Oliver, who was defended by Mr. E. R. Abigail, pleaded not guilty. He stated in evidence that whatever moneys he had collected he had paid over to the prosecutor.

The jury acquitted the accused, who was discharged.

EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE.

Robert Hugh M'Millan, who on the 3rd inst. had pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzling £3 18s 2d, belonging to his master, Charles Bedford, was brought up for sentence. M'Millan made restitution of the money yesterday, and paid £3 18s 2d into Court. His Honor sentenced him to three months' imprisonment, but suspended the sentence under the provision for first offenders under the Crimes Act. M'Millan was required to find sureties for his good behaviour for 12 months.

APPEALS.

(Before Judge Docker.)

CONVICTION SUSTAINED.

Percy Dalton appealed against his conviction on November 25 last by Mr. C. N. Payten, S.M., at the Central Police Court, for driving a motor car without first getting the consent of the owner, Dr. Henry Herbert Bullmore. Dalton was fined £10, and ordered to pay £58 6d 5d for expenses incurred in consequence of the offence. The alternative was 12 months' imprisonment. Mr. Parker appeared for the appellant, and Mr. C. A. White for the Crown. His Honor sustained the conviction with £2 2s costs against the appellant.

STRUCK OUT.

David James Cooper, on November 15 last, was convicted by Mr. Macfarlane, S.M., at the Central Police Court of assaulting a constable, and also of inciting a person to resist the police. On the first charge Cooper was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, and on the second charge fined £5. At the hearing Mr. W. D. M'Mahon appeared for the appellant. His Honor held that as the notice of the appeals did not contain the grounds of the appeals, as required by section 122 of the Justices' Act, he had no jurisdiction to hear the appeals, which he ordered to be struck out, without costs.

BREACHES OF LIQUOR ACT.

Mark Lapin appealed against his conviction on November 26 last by Mr. W. Clarke, S.M., at the Water Police Court, for having, as licensee of the Port Jackson Hotel, permitted drunkenness on his premises. He was fined 40s. Mr. Parker appeared for the appellant, and Mr. C. A. White for the Crown. His Honor confirmed the magistrate's decision, with £3 3s costs against the appellant.

Maggie Teahan lodged an appeal against her conviction on November 8 last by Mr. C. N. Payten, S.M., for supplying liquor at the Rawson Hotel to two youths under the age of 18 years. She was fined £2 in each case. The appellant did not appear. The convictions were confirmed, with £3 3s costs against the appellant. Mr. C. A. White appeared for the Crown.

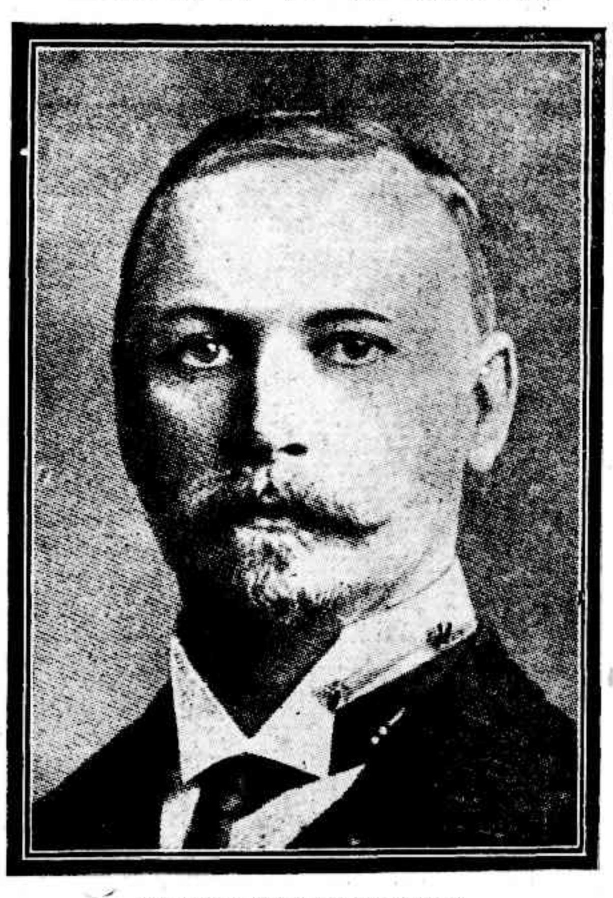
PRICES OF JAM AND CANNED FRUITS.

In regard to the latter, the commission wished it made perfectly clear that no increases in prices could be made until the commissioners' decision was arrived at.

GENERAL J. C. SMUTS.



SOUTH AFRICAN MINISTER OF DEFENCE.

Who has been appointed to the command of the British forces in East Africa in succession to General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien.

TRADES AND LABOUR.

Recently a notice signed by the secretary of the Letter-carriers' Union was posted on a board in the mail branch at the General Post Office; but, as in the opinion of Mr. Young, the Deputy Postmaster-General, it contained notice of a motion which reflected on Mr. Webster, the Postmaster-General, he caused it to be removed. This action was resented by members of the union, representatives of which interviewed Mr. Young, who decided to bring the matter before the central administration of the Postal Department at Melbourne. This was done, when the central administration endorsed his action. The members of the union were advised of the decision, and a special meeting was convened to consider the matter. It was decided that the action of the central administration in endorsing Mr. Young's action be not accepted, and that further representations be directly made to the Postmaster-General, through the central executive at Melbourne, and, if necessary, to Parliament. Messrs. O'Connor and Cross were appointed delegates to proceed to Melbourne to lay the matter before the executive.

PARRAMATTA SEAT.

POLLING TO-DAY.

Polling will take place in the Parramatta electorate to-day to fill the vacancy in the Legislative Assembly, caused by the death of Mr. T. R. Moxham.

There are only two candidates—Mr. Albert Bruntnell (Liberal) and Mr. F. Walford (Labor—to split the votes of the 12,896 people who are on the roll for the district. When Mr. Moxham was returned in the general elections of 1913, there were three candidates, but, in the second ballot that was necessary, there was a straight-out contest between Mr. Moxham and Mr. Walford, who is again contesting the seat. The successful candidate then received 5010 votes, against 4518 cast for his opponent. At the time there were 12,480 names on the rolls.

Votes may be cast between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m. There will be 18 polling places, as follow:—Annangrove, Baulkham Hills, Carlingford, Castle Hill, Dundas, Dural, Eastwood, Ermington, Glenhaven, Harris Park, Kellyville, Kenthurst, Parramatta, Parramatta North, Pennant Hills West, Rouse Hill, Rydalmere, Toongabbie, Wentworthville.

POLICE COURTS.

CONVICTED OF THEFT.

Myles Lawless, 28, who appeared in court in the uniform of a member of the expeditionary force, was charged, before Mr. Macfarlane, C.S.M., at the Central Police Court yesterday, with having, at Sydney, on the 4th inst., stolen 1s and a leather purse from the person of Albert Robson.

The case for the prosecution was that Robson and accused were in a hotel in Oxford-street, city, when accused was seen to put one of his hands in Robson's pocket, and take his property.

Lawless, in his defence, denied that he had touched the money.

Mr. Macfarlane convicted Lawless.

On being asked by the magistrate if there were any previous convictions against accused, Police-prosecutor Mitchell said that Lawless had been discharged from gaol but a very short time, after serving two months, when he committed the offence. When charged previously he was a member of the expeditionary forces, and on serving his sentence he was taken to camp to be properly discharged, but broke camp, and committed the other offence. He was not entitled to wear the uniform.

Lawless was sentenced to three months' hard labour.

LABOUR COUNCIL.

NEW PRESIDENT ON ARBITRATION.

Mr. Denis Guihen (Hospital and Asylum Employees' Union) was installed as president of the Sydney Labour Council at its meeting on Thursday.

In vacating the chair in favour of Mr. Guihen, Mr. W. O'Neill (past president) said that the council could be congratulated on its choice, for in Mr. Guihen they had a most capable man.

Mr. Guihen said that it would always be his endeavour to carry out his duties to the satisfaction of members and for the welfare of the organisation as a whole. He said that the council had always stood for industrial arbitration, and he personally believed that that method of settling disputes was better than any other. He considered that the time had arrived when the strongest of representations should be made to the Government to give effect to the promises and the platform it believed in, and make the Arbitration Court an instrument of protection to the workers.

ALLEGED THEFT FROM MILITARY.

MISSING SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

At the Central Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Macfarlane, C.S.M., William Chadwick Bassett, 23, was charged with stealing a case of surgical instruments, of the value of £25, the property of the Principal Medical Officer of the 2nd Military District, at Sydney, on or about November 9, 1915. Stanley M'Kenzie, 28, was charged with having received the case of instruments, well knowing the same to have been stolen. The cases were heard together, Bassett being defended by Mr. Levien.

Constable Toohey said that when he questioned Bassett as to how he came by the instruments he replied that they were given to him by a man named Jones, who had been in the Army Medical Corps, to which Bassett was also attached as a corporal. He gave them to M'Kenzie, who knew as well as he did that they belonged to the military. Bassett also made a written statement. When charged, Bassett said that he was sorry that he had anything to do with the instruments. When witness spoke to M'Kenzie, the latter said that they were given to him by Bassett, who told him that they belonged to the military. He also said that Bassett did not ask him to sell them. M'Kenzie said that he kept the instruments at his garage for some time, and then took them to his home at Bondi.

Lieutenant Bond, of the A.M.C., said that in company with two military police he went to a garage in Brisbane-street, kept by accused, M'Kenzie, who stated in reply to a question by witness with reference to the instruments that he knew nothing about them. M'Kenzie afterwards said that they were not there, but he knew where they were. He said a man named M'Millan had them for safe keeping. Witness asked him for M'Millan's address, and he said he could not give it, but he thought he lived at Bondi. M'Kenzie said he expected M'Millan to call at the garage that day. M'Kenzie then went to the barracks with witness, and when there he admitted that he had the instruments at his residence. He also made a written statement as to how he came by them.

Both accused reserved their defence, and were committed for trial.

Eighty returned soldiers testified to the nerve-strengthening powers of Clement's Tonic. All over Australia the public also testify and extol its many health merits. Get it to-day.—Advt.

AGRICULTURE.

HIGH SCHOOL COURSE.

MR. GRIFFITH'S DECISION.

The Minister of Education, Mr. Griffith, has been giving his attention to the question of extending the opportunities for agricultural education in connection with the high schools of the State. So far a foundation for agricultural teaching has been laid by the nature study and gardening of the primary schools, but the only instruction offered for boys who passed into the secondary schools was that of the Hurlstone Agricultural High School. This is a residential school taking day pupils as well and the demand for admission to it has fully taxed the accommodation provided.

Mr. Griffith has now decided to provide for agricultural teaching for boys in seven or eight of the country high schools distributed over different parts of the State. In these country high schools many boys attend for only two years and the ordinary secondary school course is not the most suitable for them, and moreover the school fails to qualify the boys for gaining a livelihood on the land. The courses of study in these schools will now be modified so that the opportunities at present offered only at Hurlstone may be made available in country districts. The boys taking the agricultural courses will omit the study of languages other than English, and devote about one-half of their school time to the theory and practice of agriculture. Their classroom work will include a study of elementary science in its relation to agriculture, and this will be supplemented by practical work on the school farm. Arrangements are now being made for the provision of an area of ground convenient to the school in each case on which experimental and demonstration work of a practical kind will be carried out by the boys under the direction of a specially qualified teacher.

Mr. Griffith has decided to commence this work at Bathurst and Orange and at Wagga and Albury schools, one special teacher being appointed to each two schools. The teachers first chosen for this work are young men who besides being trained as teachers have gained the diploma in agriculture at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College.

As soon as additional teachers are available it is the Minister's intention to extend the scheme to two high schools on the North Coast and two on the northern railway line. The Minister is confident that by increasing these opportunities, the number of boys looking to the main primary industries of the State for a career will be increased and will bring to their work an appreciation of the scientific principles underlying it. At the same time, these schools will give an excellent preparation for those who wish to carry their studies further at the Hawkesbury College.

MANLY ANTI-GERMAN LEAGUE.

At a meeting of members of the Manly branch of the Anti-German League, held on Wednesday at the council-chambers, Manly, the following resolution was unanimously carried:—"That the member for the district, Dr. Arthur, be requested to introduce a bill into Parliament as soon as possible, to disfranchise Germans and other alien enemies. That Mr. Joseph Cook, acting for Brigadier-General Ryrie, be requested to take similar action in connection with the Commonwealth Parliament, and that both be asked to treat the bill on non-party lines."

A motion was also carried to the effect that a telegram be sent to the secretary of the Miners' Union, Kalgoorlie, congratulating them on their action in refusing to work with alien enemies.

POSTAL MATTERS.

IMPROVING THE SERVICE.

MR. WEBSTER TO VISIT NEW ZEALAND.

The Postmaster-General (Mr. Webster), in his attempt to perfect the work of his department, intends visiting New Zealand to study various phases of postal activities there. He arrived in Sydney from Melbourne by the express yesterday, and will leave for New Zealand on February 17.

Mr. Webster stated yesterday that he hoped his investigations would furnish him with many means of generally improving the service over which he presides. He is inspecting various mechanical appliances in Sydney prior to his departure, so that he may compare and profit by the comparison. He expects to return about March 25. All matters of importance will be submitted to him by letter or cable during his absence; other matters will be in the care of Senator Russell and the department.

Mr. Webster referred yesterday to the consideration he had given to the matter of economy in connection with buildings. He had given a great deal of time, he said, to proposed alterations and additions, and also to the necessary remodelling of the post-offices.

"Here is an example of what I have been able to do," said the Postmaster-General:—"On assuming office I inspected the site and plans of the proposed new automatic telephone exchange for Sydney, on which the Works Committee had reported. I discovered that a large sum was required for the purchase of more land to provide adequate and safe access to or outlet from the building. In the plans that much space seemed to be wasted, and the co-ordination of the plant ill-devised. I called in assistance to prove my conclusions, and as a result hope to save at least £10,000 on land and plans, whilst providing a building which will better meet the purpose for which it is required. In organising so great a service as the one I control," proceeded Mr. Webster, "there are three great essentials. Firstly, adequate and modern postal buildings, which require the master mind to decide and design accordingly; secondly, the allocation and co-ordination of the branches and sections, so that neither time nor effort should be wasted in giving the best result; and, thirdly, the organisation of the staff and its work, so that nothing will come back on its tracks, automatic carriers displacing the usual army of messengers in conveying papers from section to section, and the perambulating of officers from room to room becoming a thing of the past."

WILL OF H. T. EDWARDS.

AN ESTATE OF £106,200.

Probate has been granted of the will of Henry Tollemache Edwards, late of Burnima, Bibbenluke, grazier, who died in November last. After bequeathing certain legacies to various employees, and annuities to two nieces, testator leaves the residue of his estate to his widow, and to his children and their issue in stated proportions, giving full power to his executors and trustees in regard to the management or disposal of the estate, the net value of which was sworn for probate purposes at £106,200.

TAHITIAN HAKAS.

DISPLAY AT THE SHOWGROUND.

Though rain fell intermittently all day, it was not allowed to interfere with the military sports held on the Royal Agricultural Show Ground yesterday afternoon. Soldiers, like sailors, must work and play under all weather conditions, and the dampness of the ground failed to damp the enthusiasm of the competitors and the hundreds of soldiers round the ground and in the pavilions.

The chief event on the programme was a series of hakas or physical exercises provided by the contingent of native Tahitians, who are shortly leaving for the front. The visitors paraded in native costume, their heads wreathed in trailing green streamers, white singlets on their bodies, while gaudy red and white loin cloths completed their dress. In two long lines they faced the banked masses of khaki in the Coronation pavilion, and to the strains of weird music, supplied by two of their members seated on the ground from native instruments, the islanders went through a number of exercises and extraordinary dances. They were most graceful performers, and their physique was the admiration of the members of the A.I.F. and the English Territorials present.

"Many of the exercises might well be included in our own system of physical training," remarked an onlooking officer, "they appear to keep almost every muscle in the arms and legs and body working at once."

It was an exhibition of perfect rhythm and perfect health, and at its conclusion these native allies received a great ovation from their khaki-clad comrades. But when it came to a tug-o'-war with members of the A.I.F., the islanders, though man for man half as heavy again as the Australians, had not the knowledge of using their weight to its best advantage, and the home team easily disposed of them.

EXPORT OF POLLARD.

PROHIBITION REMOVED.

The State Attorney-General announced yesterday that he had ordered the embargo on the export of pollard to be removed, supplies now being more than sufficient for the State's requirements.

The similar embargo on the export of bran, however, continues, supplies of this commodity being short.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.
TECHNICAL EDUCATION BRANCH.
COURSES OF SUPPLEMENTARY TECHNICAL INSTRUCTION.

The classes in the various courses of instruction in the different Technical Colleges and Trade Schools will commence on the 28th February, instant.

All the courses have been reorganised, with the advice and assistance of representative employers and employees in the various trades and industries, consequently the instruction available will be found very valuable.

Trade courses in any trade are open only to those who are actually engaged either as apprentices or journeymen at that trade during the daytime. Any youth not yet apprenticed will, however, be admitted to a Trade Course on the condition that his parents or guardian give an undertaking in writing that he will be apprenticed to that trade before reaching the limit of age of apprenticeship. Students must enter for a complete course of instruction.

Journeymen, however, will be allowed to take any part of a course provided they have sufficient preparatory knowledge to enable them to properly follow the course of instruction. Special nights in any course will be set apart for journeymen, providing sufficient enter, to form a class.

The following are the Trade Courses available:—

ENGINEERING.—Patternmaking, Ironfounding, Blacksmithing, Boilermaking, Fitting, and Machining, and Motor Construction.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING.—Electrical Fitters, Electrical Mechanics, Sub-station Jointers (Tramway Department), Telegraph and Telephone Mechanics.

BUILDING TRADES.—Bricklaying, Masonry, Woodworking, Machinery, Woodturning, Carpentry and Joinery, Staircasing and Handrailing, Rail-carriage, Coachmaking and Motor Body Building, Plastering, House Painting and Graining, French Polishing, Plaster Moulding and Casting.

MANUFACTURING TRADES.—Breadmaking, Bootmaking, Leather Dressing and Tanning.

ARTISTIC TRADES.—Architectural Modelling, Pottery, China Painting, Repoussé, Woodcarving, Cabinetmaking, Signwriting and House Decoration, Printing and Lithography: Composing, Presswork, Lithography, Bookbinding, Photo. Engraving, and Photography.

Dressmaking, Millinery, Tailor's Cutting (Trade Courses).

Correspondence Courses are also conducted for persons who wish to qualify for appointment as Sanitary Inspectors and for Licenses as Country Town Drainers and Water Fitters. A course of correspondence instruction is also given in Composing (Printing).

The following Courses are available, for which there is no qualification of trade occupation required. These courses are, consequently, open to all, and, having been re-organised, offer special inducements to those wishing to improve themselves:—

ELEMENTARY ART.—Freehand, Geometrical, Perspective and Object Drawing and Design.

SCIENCE.—Chemistry, Physics, Geology, Botany, Physiology, Entomology, Zoology, Mathematics.

Home Dressmaking and Millinery.

Domestic Science (which includes Cookery and Laundry work), Commercial Subjects (Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, French and German), Elocution, Surveying, Care of Animals, Window Dressing, and Hygiene.

Applicants for admission to Trade and other courses must satisfy the Teachers that they have the necessary preliminary education to enable them to take advantage of the instruction to be given.

A system of Scholarships has been established whereby students displaying sufficient ability will be assisted from the Lower to the Higher Trades Courses, thence to the courses of Higher Technical Education, and possibly on to the University of Sydney.

Anyone desirous of obtaining further information is invited to apply personally to the Inquiry Office, or by post to the Registrar, Technical College, Mary Ann-street, Ultimo, for the College Handbook and Syllabus of the Course of Instruction proposed to be studied.

Technical Colleges are situated at Ultimo, Newcastle, and Broken Hill. Trades Schools are located at Albury, Balmain, Bathurst, Erskineville, Goulburn, Granville, Kogarah, Leichhardt, and West Maitland.

REFRIGERATION. [illegible]
Concerning the [illegible]
"LINDE" REFRIGERATING AND ICE-MAKING MACHINE.
Above all things, the "Linde" is dependable, a very important factor to the small Butcher. We can quote cases of Butchers' Machines that have been running for upwards of 12 years, and yet only receiving the ordinary attention of Butchers. An equal virtue is the economy of the "Linde." A machine that is cheap in first cost is generally costly in upkeep. Butchers would do well to remember this. The running expense of the "Linde" is practically nil, and it is beyond doubt the most economical machine on the market, a fact proved by the sale of over 5000 machines. It is the combination of these two essentials that has made the "Linde" Machine famous. May we send you particulars?

BY SECURING A PROPERTY IN THIS SUBURB YOU ARE SURE TO HAVE A BETTER DESIGNED AND BETTER APPOINTED HOUSE THAN PERHAPS YOU NOW ENJOY, WITH PERHAPS NO GREATER OUTLAY OF MONEY.

A Building Authority said recently that a home built a few years back cannot be considered modern, because there has been such a marked advance along architectural lines. In fact, only homes which reflect newer and better things in architectural thought can be considered acceptable for the refinements of modern living as we find it.

The general tendency now is for greater beauty and art in designing even the small home, and a more skilful blending of the beautiful with the practical.

AT HABERFIELD
the blending is not only to meet the desire now, but also in years to come.

WILL YOU NOT ACCEPT THIS AS AN INVITATION to learn more about Haberfield, and no doubt whether it is not an enterprise in which you as a thrifty citizen will want to take part.

FARM CENTRE OF SYDNEY.

What will conditions be after the war? No one knows. They can only guess.

Some predict a boom; others pull a long face. The question is too complex for human brain to analyse, there being no precedent to guide us.

SAFETY is the watchword. And who is safe like the primary producer, growing his own milk and butter, poultry, and eggs, fruit and vegetables, corn and potatoes, on a compact farm, where the life is free and children strong and healthy?

Think it over, you fathers and mothers; work it out to the final analysis. If times are good, your property will increase in value. If they are bad, you will have something solid to depend on.

There is no question about it.

AUSTRALIAN TIMBERS.

(BY "TUART.")

The northern rivers of New South Wales were specially rich in commercial timbers. When a start is being made to conserve the forests or to re-create them a definite knowledge of the natural conditions will be invaluable. Some of our best and most useful timbers can be raised in almost any part of the coastal territory, but the trees will be longer in reaching maturity than would be the case in their native haunts. Rosewood, scrub hickory, or red bean might grow on the South Coast, but only in the same way as peaches and grapes will in Tasmania, or apples and cherries at Grafton or Brisbane. There is a distinct timber zone extending from the Brisbane River to the neighbourhood of Coff's Harbour. In that tract of country there was a wealth of timber before the settlers changed the appearance of the landscape. That was the home of by far the greater number of those timbers the shortage of which Australia to-day is lamenting. In a tangled mass of brush-wood, lawyer canes, and vines, the majestic, large, smooth barrels of the softwood trees rose and spread their branches over the jungle. Those who have seen the Clarence, Richmond, and Tweed river districts during the present drought are commencing to ask themselves whether, after all, it was good policy to clear the land. If the forests had been protected and only the matured trees cut neither droughts nor floods would have deprived the landholders of their annual crop of timber if they had diligently planted young trees to take the places of those removed. Bush fires would be a source of trouble and loss, for when these sweep through a forest much havoc is caused. But fires had little chance of spreading in the dense scrubs, where there was always an abundance of green vegetation to check the flames. It is a problem whether the return from these, the choicest districts in Australia, compensates for the amount of toil expended in the clearing, fencing, and annual cropping. The native timbers need no cultivation, and although their growth is slow there would be a more reliable crop than that yielded by sugarcane or maize.

After an absence of 20 years from the northern rivers I was privileged a few weeks ago to pass through a young forest on the way from Ulmarra to Glenugie Peak. The ironstone ridge along Washpool Gully was clothed with a dense forest of spotted gum when I first became acquainted with them about 35 years ago. As settlement extended nearly all the matured trees had been cut and the locality denuded of its useful timber. Apparently the indiscriminate destruction of timber has been restricted, for in the meantime a new forest has arisen, and the hills are again well wooded with picturesque groves of spotted gum, the trees varying in diameter from 4in to 18in. It is a real pleasure to ride through this remarkable timber belt, which provides a valuable object lesson in the usefulness of protecting the forests. The soil is poor and stony, and only capable of carrying stock in very moist seasons, and is then useful for high paddocks when the low-lands are flooded. Those who believe that our best lands are needed to produce timber will be convinced of their error if they visit this locality. Australian soft woods require good soil, but the hardwoods thrive on the poorest of the land on the mountain spurs and abrupt ridges. I have seen fine belts of ironbark decorating the slopes of rugged hills, which would not tempt even a German selector. Usually a slow grower, the ironbark tree quickly puts on wood when the conditions of soil are favourable. Even the bush fires have little effect on its strong fibrous bark, which acts as a protector. The mistaken idea that it takes a lifetime for trees to reach the cutting stage is vanishing since the thinning of the forests has given the young timber a chance to flourish. The crowding together in localities where suitable conditions exist prevents rapid growth, as the trees are stunted. The old Arabic saying that those who sow date seeds raise fruit for their grandchildren does not apply to Australian timber, with due respect to a once popular belief. Familiarity with the bush has been profitable to the timber cutter, as well as the seeker for land. Young trees have but a poor opportunity to survive in a wood already well packed with trees; consequently those which struggle through develop slowly. But give them space before they are stunted and they will push upward vigorously. The conviction that something like 50 years must elapse before a crop of timber can be harvested has discouraged reafforestation; but experience has taught that less than half that period is sufficient to give a return from some of our marketable trees. Much depends upon planting them in localities suitable to their peculiarities. For this reason the timber zone embracing the North Coast of New South Wales and the south coast of Queensland should be placed on record before its limits and the varieties of timber suited to it are completely obliterated.

Among the timbers which thrive luxuriantly on our northern rivers are those now highly prized for the making of furniture and fittings. The silky oak attains great size in the eastern slopes, and is one of our most valued woods for decorative purposes. Cut at different angles from the bark, half-a-dozen distinct figures can be obtained, revealing the remarkable grain of the timber. Only within the last few years has the stringy bark tree become popular in the furniture-making establishments. This is a light wood when dry, and for that reason many saplings were cut for slip-rails when about 3in in diameter. In Tasmania bedroom suites of stringy bark are to be found in quite a number of mansions. I know of one of these having been brought from Hobart to Broken Hill, where it was in use for two summers, and then sold for considerably more than the original price. This was a valuable test of the ability of the timber to endure a severe change of climate conditions—from the cold, moist region, to the hot, dry air of the interior. The articles emerged without a blemish. In the island State stringy bark is popularly known as Tasmanian oak. When polished it resembles English oak, and might pass for that wood. To tell a New South Wales settler that his furniture was made from stringy bark would be like offering an insult, for the uses of this tree are far from fully understood even in its native haunts in the forests of the Clarence and Richmond rivers. When the scrub pioneers erected their huts they used the bark of this useful tree for covering the roofs. It would be difficult to find, even in this age of tiles and slates, a roof giving a cooler shelter in summer, or warmer in winter, than that provided by the bark shanties.

Those who have travelled from Brisbane to Grafton by rail and seen the thoroughness with which the native timbers have been cleared from that rich belt of country, and the failure of the crops during the dry spell, can picture for themselves the hardships of the settlers who destroyed the forests to make way for the dairying industry. There are yet nooks in the mountain ranges and along the gullies where the beech, rosewood, maple, silky oak, and even red cedar are struggling for a foothold, and growing gracefully while the cultivated crops are perishing—just sufficient to illustrate the permanency of the timber crop in a protected forest, and the risks of relying on products incapable of resisting the droughts which periodically visit even those parts of our coasts usually favoured with a good rainfall.

FRUIT-GROWING AT YASS.

YASS.—There has been a slight fall of rain during the week, but not sufficient to assist the new shoot in the grass, and the rain was followed by wintry conditions. The fruit is very plentiful, and at Murrumbateman, where there are some of the largest orchards, a large quantity of fruit is going to waste. Orchardists complain that the charges which follow on sending fruit to Sydney are so great that it scarcely pays to pick, pack, and freight the fruit to the railway station, a distance of some 13 miles. On M'Clung's orchard there are tons of apples awaiting picking, but the proprietor confesses he is puzzled what to do. Within the last few years some really fine young orchards have grown up around Murrumbateman, where the soil is particularly adapted to fruit culture. Messrs. Watson, J. Greig, and W. Martin have now extensive fruit trees just coming into bearing, and Mr. Watson has added several acres of vines, which are making good headway. There has been but little damage from codlin moth this season, owing to the early precautions taken by orchardists in spraying with arsenate of lead. The Rutherglen fly has been in evidence, and the orchards also suffered from the visit of flying foxes, but not to a great extent.

THE WOOL TRADE.

A WEEK OF RECORDS.

Larger quantities of wool for the week, and far larger separate catalogues, have been offered in the Sydney wool market; but this week was unique by way of fresh record prices being established on each of the four selling days. All the records for greasy wool in the Sydney market this season transcend those secured in the "boom" year; but in the scoured section there are some descriptions still behind the famous 1899-1900 season. Up to the current season, all record prices in the Sydney market were gauged in comparison with the "boom" year; now the records are spoken of as being the highest paid "since the pioneering days" of the wool-growing industry. Exactly what had been paid in the early days, before records were kept with the exactness of to-day, will probably never be known; but it is certain that at no period in the history of the Sydney wool-selling industry has so much wool been sold at such a high range of values as during the current war-selling period, and particularly since the auctions were resumed after the Christmas-New Year recess. Never before has there been such free competition, with "buy-at-any-price" limits, as during the past few weeks; consequently record prices have been paid that were undreamed of 12 months ago.

When the war automatically shut down on enemy buyers in the Australian and all other British markets, the trade in Sydney and interstate centres had to make history afresh. The Germans and Austrians were prohibited from buying, and the French and Belgians were compelled to stay their hand, through hostilities paralysing the textile industries in their countries. The Continent, that was such a tremendous factor in the Australian markets prior to the war, suddenly ceased to exist; and the selling side of the trade had to watch and patiently develop what business it could, under adverse circumstances. The wool, through the drought, comprised a large proportion of carbonising sorts that had previously been treated on the Continent; these short, burry, tender wools had to be put on one side, and only a moderate proportion of good wools offered, according to the strength of the demand from time to time. This sound policy, together with an increasing number of buyers from other quarters, has now put the markets on a basis unparalleled in the history of the trade. Certainly, it is all due to the war, and to the British navy enabling practically the whole of the wool that is shipped reaching its destination. Still, the point is that our wool market, that previously relied so largely on German support, is now absolutely independent of the enemy in every shape and form. The Japanese are now buying as they never bought before, the United States has followed suit, while the local mills have had to secure supplies that will help Australian manufacturers to play a larger part in textiles than previously. Of course the United Kingdom has been at high pressure, and as much of the River Plate wool was secured this season by German agents the Empire's resources have had to be drawn upon more exclusively than before. Direct trade with Russia and to Russia through Japan, must follow as a consequence of the war conditions.

While we are looking at the booming wool market to-day, and admiring the record prices, it is equally gratifying to see that the trend of things is very decidedly against Germany and Austria resuming their former position in Australia—either as buyers of raw wool or as sellers of the finished article. Our wool went largely to clothe the millions of Germans and Austrians that were armed to subjugate Great Britain and our Allies; also to enable them to trade so profitably at our expense. Fortunately events have so developed of late that we shall easily be able to afford to expand the wool trade with our allies and neutrals without in the least missing or wanting the enemy again in our midst.

During the week 10 catalogues were submitted aggregating 31,374 bales, of which 28,095 bales were sold at auction. Since July 1 last 475,690 bales have been catalogued, and 483,471 sold by auction and private treaty; an increase in the sales of 248,294 bales. The non-issue of further permits to export crossbred wools to America or Italy had no adverse effect on the market conditions this week. Competition from the other sections was so keen that crossbreds sold at record prices, also scoured merinos. It is remarkable that scoured wool did not come into favour earlier, seeing that time is such a factor in the equipment of the forces. However, it is now at a high level. The Japanese and American buyers have been keen for suitable wools, also Yorkshire and the local mills, with values at boom heights.

OFFERINGS AND SALES.

On Monday two catalogues, totalling 6802 bales, were submitted, of which 6456 were sold at auction. It was an attractive selection in the grease; including a good representation of wools from the New England and southern tablelands; with a very fair showing of scoured, including one or two good parcels from Riverina. The market was buoyant, and competition keen for all descriptions, both merino and crossbred, greasy and scoured, with values at the highest point of the season. Greasy crossbred sold to /21¾ for 13 bales of RM/New England, from Bendemeer. This price exceeded the previous record. Scoured sold to /28¾ for 60 bales sup com of O/Groongal (Narrandera), 24 bales 1st com making /28½, a bright, fine wool, good bulk and condition.

Three catalogues, aggregating 8789 bales, were submitted on Tuesday, of which 8013 were sold at auction. The wools were mainly drawn from the northern and southern tablelands. It was a good average selection, chiefly of merinos, with a small proportion of crossbred. There was a fair display of scoured, several parcels coming from Bourke. Market conditions were equal to the previous day for greasies, and an improvement for scoured. The greasy crossbred record was taken from /21¾ to /22, and scoured merino to /30½ in one catalogue, which equalled the best in the boom year, and to /31½ in another, which is the highest since the early days.

On Wednesday two catalogues, totalling 7445 bales, were offered, of which 6699 bales were sold at auction. It was a medium to good selection, comprising a fair representation of attractive wools in the grease, with a large proportion of medium conditioned lines carrying seed and burr. There was a good display of scoured. The market was strong for practically all useful wools. Greasy crossbred sold to /20½, and scoured merino to /32, obtained for the leading lot of a line from Tilpa. This scoured record is the highest price in the Sydney market during modern times.

The week closed on Thursday with three catalogues, aggregating 8275 bales, out of which 7127 bales were cleared from the rostrum. It was a fair to good selection, including a number of attractive lines, bright and well grown, with a large proportion of medium to good useful wools, a number of which showed the effects of an adverse growing season. There was a moderate display of scoured, including one or two choice lines. The market showed a little irregularity in leading lines of greasy, if lacking length, otherwise values were well up to previous extreme rates. Greasy comeback sold to /21, which is a Sydney record for this description, and to /32½ for scoured merino, which was ½d higher than on the previous sale day. The greasy record was secured for 10 bales of JL Castle Rock, from Muswellbrook, and the scoured for 10 bales sup com of Bogewong (Walgett).

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

Auctions were resumed on Monday in Melbourne, and on Thursday in Geelong. The offerings in Melbourne included a larger proportion of wools from Western Australia than usual, owing to the difficulty of shipping to London for sale, and probably also because of the strong demand in Australian markets on Japanese and American account. The selections were average ones for the present season. Values were firm, but the upward trend of crossbreds was said to have been modified by the reimposition of the embargo to America and Italy. Sales will be continued in Victoria next week, with a limit of 18,000 bales in Melbourne and 8000 in Geelong.

The wools catalogued and sold in the principal centres to latest available dates compare with the corresponding period last season as follows:—

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

The quantity of wool coming forward by rail now indicates the drawing to a close of the ordinary season, and it is doubtful if as much autumn-shorn wool will be available during the next three or four months as usual. The receipts this week, compared to the corresponding week last year, show a marked falling off. This season the selling conditions were a great contrast to the first few months of the war. Wools were held back as long as possible last season, whereas this year they have been hurried forward; consequently this season's increase is now rapidly diminishing. The quantity for the week, and for the season by rail and by boat compares with the corresponding period last year as follows:—

BY RAIL.

Total seaboard increase for season to date, 32,934 bales.

STATE WOOL EXPORTS.

The return issued by the Sydney Customs showing the oversea exports of wool for the seven months ended January 31, compared to the corresponding period last year, is as follows:—

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Two vessels have cleared the Sydney Customs since last review with a total of 16,749 bales, the bulk going to America. During the corresponding week last year two vessels cleared with 4437 bales. The vessels, with quantity for the week, and total for the season to date, compares with the corresponding period last season as follows:—

FRENCH'S FOREST.

The Rev. H. C. Foreman, M.A., Manly, writes:—In such a vexed question as the suitability or otherwise of French's Forest for returned soldiers, the testimony of a disinterested person is sometimes of value. I am not a fruit expert, nor a land speculator. My only interest in French's Forest at the time arises out of a request for religious services in that district. A week ago, in the discharge of ministerial duties, I visited French's Forest, and in particular some well-known orchard properties. On Mr. Holland's fruit farm I found a fine selection of mixed fruit, of which citrus fruit is a special line. Some specimens of fruit, gathered without special care in selection, such as pears, passion-fruit, lemons, plums, and apples were worthy of exhibition in any show. At Mr. John Haigh's home I saw line after line of strong young apple trees, heavily loaded with fruit of fine colour, shape, size, and flavour. At this time fruit from these orchards is fetching high prices in the Sydney markets. I was given the strongest assurances that this fruit farm is inferior in soil qualities to the land now being cleared for soldiers' use. In Mr. Chaseling's orchard I saw in particular some fine examples of late peaches. My observation in one brief afternoon convinces me, that, given proper care and cultivation, French's Forest land will grow unlimited quantities of fruit. The matter of the size of blocks suitable for living areas is a matter for expert administration. French's Forest is unrivalled as a health centre. The elevation is good, and the air is bracing. The adjacency of Manly and Mosman as markets for choice fruit at first prices places French's Forest in a very fine position as a fruit-growing centre. It would be well for readers of the "Herald" to keep an open mind as to this scheme, and not to relegate it to a metaphorical waste-paper basket as a wild-cat proposal.

MODERN IDEAS.

MR. O'MALLEY'S CREED.

IMPROVING PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The application of modern ideas to the construction and alteration of Federal buildings is the desire of the Minister for External Affairs (Mr. King O'Malley), who arrived in Sydney yesterday from Melbourne by the express.

Mr. O'Malley stated that to-day he was to meet Mr. Griffin, the director of designs and construction for the Federal territory. "I've got a lot to talk over with him," he said. "We are going to reconstruct the Sydney Customs-house. What we want are modern ideas. In the light of the destruction by fire of the Canadian Houses of Parliament, I think no buildings should be allowed to go up in the city where people are working unless they are absolutely fireproof. I want to get the most expert opinions on these matters. The reconstructed Customs-house ought to be the most modern and up-to-date, and be worthy of the empire city of the southern hemisphere—Sydney."

While he is in Sydney Mr. O'Malley intends to endeavour to settle a number of cases in connection with purchases of land for post-offices, rifle ranges, etc., by his department. Under the previous Minister these lands had been purchased by compulsory acquisition, he said yesterday, and many of them were still outstanding through the differences of valuation. When he came into office there were over a thousand cases oustanding in Australia. "I've managed to settle a couple of hundred of them," he said. "I don't believe in courts, so I'm going to try to settle some more while I'm here."

Mr. O'Malley will be in Sydney until the end of next week at least. He intends visiting the Small Arms Factory at Lithgow with the Federal member for the district, Mr. E. Carr, next week, and before he returns to Melbourne he will pay a visit to the Federal territory, "just to see how things are getting along there."

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"So Long, Letty," is running as strongly at Her Majesty's Theatre as during the first fortnight, the farcical situation between the two married pairs being sustained with an intense earnestness which increased its humour and caused uproarious laughter. Misses Brunton and Ediss are admirably contrasted in their comic methods, and Messrs. Workman and Fisher also present different types of character; whilst songs, choral pieces, ballets, and stage tableaux supplement the entertainment.

CRITERION THEATRE.

At the Criterion Theatre "Under Fire" has opened a prosperous season, the new war-drama striking a novel vein in the realism with which the action takes the spectator to the actual invasion of Belgium, and to the field of battle where the latest incidents in trench and dug-out life, interrupted by violent explosions, bring the story up to date. Mr. Frank Harvey as Captain Larry Redmond, Mr. Ian Maclaren as the German spy, and Miss Lizette Parkes at the heroine are well placed in the leading characters.

"MAVOURNEEN" AT THE ADELPHI.

Mr. Gerald E. Griffin, a new Irish actor-singer from the United States, will be introduced at the Adelphi Theatre this evening by the George Marlow direction in the new comedy-drama "Mavourneen." As Terence O'Moore, a typical Irish lover, he will be heard in Griffin's love song, "My Kathleen," "The Kingdom of Love," and other ballads. Mr. Griffin is said to possess a particularly sweet tenor voice coupled with a ready acceptance in romantic Irish character. The part of the heroine, Kathleen O'Connor, will fall to Miss Ethel Buckley, and the cast will also include such well-known artists as Jean Robertson, Vivian Edwards, and Charlie Taylor. The plan is at Nicholson's.

PALACE THEATRE.—"FAC'TRY 'ANDS."

"Fact'ry 'Ands," which is to be produced at the Palace Theatre on February 26, under the direction of Mr. Charles Stanford, is a comedy-drama in four acts, and contains besides a heart interest plenty of rollicking fun. Two of the scenes are laid in Spatt's paper factory, and the other two depict Sydney Harbour by day and night, and a scene near the Hawkesbury Bridge. The plan opens at Nicholson's on Monday, the 21st.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

This afternoon and evening important changes at the Tivoli will involve the return of Ella Caspers, the favourite Australian contralto, and the first appearance for a limited season of Miss Pearl Ladd, a prima donna of the recent Gilbert-Sullivan Company, and Mr. Villiers Arnold, baritone and character actor of the same popular combination. The latter will sing "Shanghai" and "Will-o'-the-Wisp." Other additions to the company will include Athol Tier, comedian and grotesque dancer; Peggy Ross, soprano soubrette; Vaude and Verne, the noted topical comedians; and Charlie Rich and Elsie Robey, new English entertainers, in "Comedy and Caprice." Miguel Scherbels, the mighty Russian wrestler and iron-breaker; Bob Cooke and Dot Oatman, comedy and harmony singers; Benn Linn, and others artists will appear.

THE ASHMEAD BARTLETT LECTURES.

Mr. E. Ashmead Bartlett, whose correspondence from Gallipoli has stirred Australasian readers even more deeply than those in other parts of the Empire, will make his debut at the Town Hall to-night. His first lecture will be "With the Anzacs at the Dardanelles," and will be vividly illustrated with lantern views. Messrs. J. and N. Tait announce further appearances for Tuesday and Thursday evenings next. Soldiers in uniform and R.S.A. members will be admitted at half price. The plans are at Nicholson's.

THE NEW DANDIES, GARDEN THEATRE.

The week's new programme submitted by the Dandies at the Garden Theatre, Bayswater-road, will include Miss Florence Henderson in the humorous song, "Grow, Little Mushroom, Grow!" and Messrs. Benn Millar and Herbert Walton in the comic duet, "The Twins." Miss Dorothy Grace will sing, "Once on a Day," and Miss Mona Thomas will contribute "My Moon." The whole party will join in "The Wild Man from Borneo," and there will be vivacious interludes and sketches. Protection against rain is afforded.

CALEDONIAN SOCIETY'S CONCERT.

This evening (7.45) the Caledonian Society of Sydney will give their usual monthly concert, followed by a dance, at the Southern Cross Hall. Assisting artists in a programme of Scottish songs and melodies will include Misses Dorrie Ward, Ina Riley, Ivy Allen, Messrs. J. G. Yuill, G. Fiddes, the Two McColls, the Lorimer Dancers, and Piper Mackenzie.

WAVERLEY RED CROSS CONCERT.

The Waverley-Bondi Red Cross Society will hold a concert at the Coronation Hall, Bondi Junction, to-night, when Anthony Horderns' Choral Society of 50 voices, the Eastern Suburbs Orchestra, and the Waverley District Band will assist, as well as leading artists, in a bright entertainment of songs and recitations.

MRS. HAFFENDEN-SMITH.

Entries may now be sent in for Mrs. Haffenden-Smith's seventh annual free scholarship, entitling the winners in each section to 12 months' training free of all tuition fees. Mr. F. J. Davy is the hon. secretary of the competition, at which various influential people will be present. All details are notified in another column.

THE E. A. KELLY CONCERT.

Mr. D. Guihen, president of the Labour Council of New South Wales, will preside at a meeting at the rooms of the Professional Musicians' Union tonight in support of a proposed concert at the Town Hall as a benefit to the wife and family of the late Mr. E. A. Kelly. The deceased was highly esteemed by the members of the Sydney Wharf Labourers' Union, of which he was president, and the concert will be under the auspices of various union societies.

PICTURE BLOCK THEATRES.

In next week's programme at the Crystal Palace, "Sealed Lips," a five-reeled drama by the Equitable Co., will be the principal picture. The feature picture at the Lyric will be "Kilmeny," a modern gipsy story. "The Destroying Angel" is announced for the Colonial Theatre, where also Charlie Chaplin will be seen in "Recreation." At the Empress Theatre the seventh story in the "Exploits of Elaine" will be shown. This episode is under the title of "The Ear in the Wall."

WEST'S PICTURES.

At both the Glaciarium and Olympia to-day there will be two performances, and the feature picture will be "The Victory of Virtue." At the Glaciarium only, "The New Exploits of Elaine" (No. 5), will be one of the attractions. "West Wind," a special American feature story, is announced for Monday.

SPENCER'S PICTURES.

At Spencer's Lyceum Theatre on Monday next, another famous Cines production, "The Inside Life of Julius Caesar," will be shown. A recommendation of the film, which is 5000 feet long, is the mere fact that it was produced by the same company that was responsible for the two remarkable pictures, "Quo Vadis" and "The Last Days of Pompeii."

THE WHITE CITY.

Pleasure-seekers will be well catered for at the White City to-night. The various attractions of the place—there are 19 shows altogether to be seen—include forms of pleasure to meet all tastes. They range from the thrill of the scenic railway to the restfulness of a rickshaw ride.

On Monday night next a fancy dress fete will be held, and prizes will be given for the best costumes. For the next three Saturday afternoons special children's and photographic competitions have been arranged.

OLD-AGE AND INVALID PENSIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—If one gets hold of any of the daily papers one finds that the different labour bodies are making repeated application for an increase in wages, under the plea of the high cost of living; in almost every case the rise is granted. Even the State members of Parliament raised their own salaries almost cent. per cent.; besides having the free use of the railways for themselves and families. Now the poor old age or invalid pensioner feels the pinch more than anyone through the price of commodities going up, yet no one seems to have any thought about him; not even the members who could raise their own salaries, the public press, or anyone else. However, I trust that this letter will cause some one to have a bit of thought about us, and make a move in the matter.

I am, etc.,
Feb. 10. INVALID PENSIONER.

FOR THE INFORMATION OF THE PUBLIC.

Architects, Builders, and the General Public are hereby notified that, owing to a large number of Employees in the Electrical Industry having Enlisted for Active Service, and a further number being employed by the Commonwealth Government for Defence purposes, it is exceedingly difficult for employers in the Electrical Industry to carry out their Contracts for Electrical Installations, and to execute Extensions and Repairs within what would otherwise be reasonable time.

The Electrical Employers' Association therefore trusts that Architects, Builders, and Owners will exercise their kind forbearance if the electrical work is not carried out as quickly as they desire.

NOW, OR NEVER.

It is said that there comes in every man's life one supreme moment when he is called upon to make some great decision, and all his future hangs on that decision. The failure or success of his life depends upon it. And it never comes again. We must take the current when it serves, or lose our ventures. Such an opportunity comes to us now—to every young man whom God has blessed with health and strength. The Great War will not go on for ever—we believe that even now we may read the signs of the beginning of the end; and the man who would grasp the greatest opportunity that will ever come to him cannot afford to let the present moment slip by. Every Australian who is young enough and strong enough, and is not bound by the very strongest ties, should count it at once a privilege and a duty to join the new army of 50,000 men, and carry on the work so nobly begun by his comrades. Every man who has lost a brother, every man who has had a friend wounded or stricken down by illness in the war, should come forward gladly to strike a blow for the great cause for which so many of our bravest have suffered and died. Far off, on the hills and in the valleys of Gallipoli, rough mounds and little wooden crosses mark the last resting-places of thousands of brave Australians; and knowing the Turks for a fair and gallant foe, we share the confidence of General Godley that the graves of these men who have "fallen far from home, fighting gallantly in their country's cause," will be respected. But the real fight is not with Turkey, but with a people who have lost all sense of honour and decency, and care not by what methods they may win the war, so long as they do win it. We cannot, we must not, allow them to win it; and so Australia, with the rest of the British Empire, is called upon to put every available man into the field. The new army of 50,000 will raise our contribution to the fighting strength of the Empire by June next to 300,000 men. This for us is a large force—larger than the army which Britain had ready to throw into the war when the sudden call came; and the fact that it only represents a small proportion of the Grand Army of the Allies to-day bears witness to the amazing strength of the enemy. To be numbered among the Three Hundred Thousand should be the highest aim of every young Australian. Nor shall we stop there. We shall raise another 50,000, and another still, if need be; we shall go on raising armies till the fight is won and a lasting peace assured. If we have been slow in realising it, we know now what war means; and we know that there can be no turning back till victory is won. We cannot think of the heroic deeds on Gallipoli without thinking also that the land that has given so many brave men to the Empire has other brave men ready to come forward at the call of duty. If we had any doubts, they have been dissipated by the assurance of the organising secretary of the recruiting campaign in this State that "thousands of young men are waiting to be called to the colours."

Everywhere throughout Australia the recruiting work is proceeding. It is a vast business, requiring the best of organisation; and so far as this State, at all events, is concerned, we have reason to believe that the organising work is being well carried out. Mr. Catts has proved himself a great organiser of the Labour forces for political purposes in the past; now he is doing splendid work in organising our fighting forces, and in that he is doing this he is himself a great fighting force. But he must have the warm support of every local war committee in the State. For this thing belongs to no political party, and to no creed and no class; it belongs to us all. It is a nation's response to the appeal of the civilised and Christian world on behalf of truth and justice. It is a nation's sacrifice to the ideals of humanity. Major-General McCay, who has already rendered great service in the field, and who will be leaving for Egypt shortly to assume command of one of the new Australian divisions, has told us something of the sacrifices that individual soldiers have made. "The way, the cheerful, splendid way, they face death and pain is simply glorious," he wrote in one of his letters from Gallipoli; "and if no Australian ever fought again. April 25, April 28, and May 8 specially mark them as warriors. On the eighth of May I said in effect to them (my own brigade), 'Come and die,' and they came with a cheer and a laugh. They are simply magnificent." Like the individual, the nation must make its sacrifices. At Adelaide on Thursday General McCay repeated once again what he has been saying ever since he returned from the front—"Every man is wanted." Every officer and every private soldier who have borne their share of the fighting tell us the same thing. Only in yesterday's "Herald" was printed a message from a private of the 1st Battalion, who is now in hospital in Egypt, after having spent seven months in the trenches at Anzac:—"Good luck to all the boys in training. Six months will see the beginning of the end, but let us all be there. Every man is wanted." The harvest is over; there is another field to be ploughed, another harvest to be reaped. From all parts of the country come reports of the flocking of the young and vigorous manhood of the country to the colours. The camps at Liverpool and Casula are crowded with men; and there are half a dozen large district camps in the country, where thousands of men are being trained. Mr. Catts tells us that, whilst he cannot yet state the result of the appeal to date, the prognostications of the pessimists are not borne out by the facts. This is gratifying news. But we never doubted it. We never doubted that the hearts of our young men were in the right place—never doubted that thousands of those who remained behind through force of circumstances were made of the same stern stuff as those who have carved deathless names for themselves in a far-off land. And now they go forth to show the mettle of their pasture, to fight the great fight as their brothers have fought it. The great opportunity has come, and they are grasping it. To hesitate may be to lose it. Now, or never, they must come forward; and whatever fate may have in store for them, theirs will be the consciousness of duty worthily done. If they fall, they will fall honoured of men, and their names will be inscribed on the roll of heroes; and if they return home to their loved ones, whether scathless or with battle-scars upon them, they will be loved the more, and their country will know how to show its gratitude.

THRIFT AND THE WAR.

In any future history of the war there will be room for an interesting chapter on the manner in which the logic of events has destroyed certain beliefs stated with confidence at its commencement, and accepted as axioms by the lay public. Military theorists were always ready to state the percentage of losses which an advancing force would suffer without being compelled to retire. The limit has been exceeded many times in France, notably by the British when they took the trenches at Hooge. Financial theorists made a similar mistake in their estimate of the expenditure which a belligerent nation could incur without weakening its armies. Their estimates have been exceeded time and time again. The daily rate of expenditure has exceeded not merely the record of any previous war, but all expectation, and has done so without imposing the slightest check on the supply of necessary equipment to any of the armies. The theorists have left out of their calculations several important factors, and have been mistaken in some others. They were mistaken in what used to be called the power of international finance. It used to be thought that the great bankers of Europe were so closely connected and were so clear-sighted that they could stop a European war by their joint veto. Experts would point to the conduct of French investors who withdrew their savings from German banks at the time of the Agadir crisis, and to the failure of Bulgaria to raise money when on the brink of war with Turkey, and would conclude that a great European war could either be prevented or checked by the first strain on national credit. Events have proved that the great financiers were no less subject to national influences, and no less amenable to a central government than their humbler fellow-citizens. Great industrial States were found to be as ready to go to war with their customers as if the boundaries were identical with the national frontiers. The experts were wrong again in not allowing sufficiently for the momentum of war. They did not realise that a nation may spend so much in blood and treasure that it may fight on simply because the consequences of defeat are too appalling to contemplate. Again, they did not allow for the extraordinary development of national credit. Little more than a century ago Prussian Ministers would not go to war with Napoleon because their war chest was not yet full, and a loan was unheard of. It was natural that the enemies of Prussia to-day could not anticipate the system under which almost every private asset is pledged as a security for the national expenditure. Nor did they make sufficient allowance for the effect of patriotism on national finances. The French patriotic loan raised after the defeat of 1870-71 might have warned us of the sacrifices which the French people would make in order to drive an enemy from their soil. It could not justify us in anticipating their response to the appeal made to them last year, when they poured their savings into the loan of victory and unearthed their gold when it was needed by the Bank of France.

The writer of this chapter on lost illusions may note the difficulty which each nation has had in discovering the financial position of another at any given time, and the apparent lack of interest with which the citizens of any country view the state of their own figures. He will realise that finance Ministers are overcome by the need of presenting the affairs of their respective countries in the manner most likely to attract neutrals, and that private members of Parliament receive the figures of billions or milliards with as much respect as a child hears of the distance of the earth from the sun. He will, nevertheless, find one note emphasised in the speeches of the three Ministers who have made public statements towards the end of the year. Herr Helfferich in Germany, M. Ribot in France, and Mr. M'Kenna in England, have insisted that the strain of the war is being felt with growing force by each nation, and that after the war the burden of taxation will be enormously increased, whatever be the result. The French Minister, speaking after a successful loan, could welcome the signs of confidence in his country displayed by subscribers from Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Holland, North and South America, and Australia, and could testify to the permanence of the instinct for thrift among the peasants, workmen, and small farmers of France. Herr Helfferich, with the necessity of raising a new loan before him, could laugh at the prophets of Germany's exhaustion, and predict a response which would put Germany in funds until the Allies had rewarded her sacrifices by an indemnity. But each had to warn his hearers of the need for public and private thrift and of the prospect of new taxes. Mr. M'Kenna cannot claim that the poorer classes have subscribed to the British loan with anything like the readiness they have shown in France and Germany. He may answer Herr Helfferich by showing that in Germany there has been compulsion and in England none, but he must admit that his devices to induce workmen to subscribe to the loan have failed. How thoroughly the importance of this failure has been realised is shown by the proposed import regulations and by the scheme for working class subscriptions promulgated by the advisory committee on thrift. The new regulations may inculcate a habit of saving among the rich, who, according to a well-known authority, spend about four hundred millions per annum on articles that can make no man either better or happier. But the scheme for working-class subscriptions has the serious defect that it was devised by a committee who knew far more about banking than about working-class psychology. Under their scheme an investor will get a great reward for the use of his pound if he waits for five years to redeem it. But the prospect will hardly induce an Englishman to economise on war bonuses until he has exchanged his love of sport for the frugal habits of his Allies. In his present mood he would be more likely to respond to such an appeal as General Joffre addressed to the people of France through the soldiers at the front, or to such a rebuke as General McCay addressed to the Australian people who enjoy the comforts of home while their comrades suffer in the trenches.

WAR TIME ECONOMY

MR. COOK'S PLEA.

WASTEFUL GOVERNMENTS.

A plea for straight economy—both private and public—to help the nation to victory in the war was uttered last night by Mr. Joseph Cook, leader of the Federal Opposition, in an address at Parramatta, in support of the candidature of Mr. Albert Bruntnell for the vacancy in the State Legislative Assembly.

The great outstanding questions of the moment, said Mr. Cook, were not the questions of dealing with local matters. Those questions could wait until it was seen whether we had any money left, when the Germans had been beaten back into their own country. Five and a half years of Socialistic Government had given this State the highest cost of living of any State in Australia, and the highest taxation of any State, and yet it was the State most desperately in need of money. To crown it all, the people were told that unless the Government could have more money to borrow, and squander, then bankruptcy was staring them in the face.

"I am going to keep on urging economy while this war lasts," said Mr. Cook. "We have a long way to go yet. The most imperative duty of the moment is to economise, both in public and in private. The nation which best exercises economy is going to win—the nation that saves its money so that it can spend it on the war, and does not fritter its money away on things that can wait.

"It is time that this State swung back to gravity in public finance," went on Mr. Cook. "We want to control the resources necessary for the prosecution of the war until we have won victory and made it possible to live in comfort in Australia afterwards. I am pleading so that you will have as little as possible of the legacy of debt. I am pleading for economy, and the first condition of economy is efficiency. Get men who can control our affairs, and who know what they are about—not men who have to get other men in to help them to do the work and govern the country—not men who are wasting our money in junketings. I plead for honest and economic government; for the postponement until after the war of all those things we can do without; for the conservation of our resources to meet the stress and strain yet to come upon our shoulders through this war for life and liberty. For all these things and for the future of our children I plead."

PERSONAL.

VICE-REGAL.

Amongst the callers upon the Lord Mayor yesterday were Mr. King O'Malley (Minister for Home Affairs), and Mr. W. H. Mahoney, M.P.

Major Maguire, who received his majority on active service in New Guinea, and has since been Chief Staff Officer to the Director-General of Medical Service in Melbourne, has been promoted to Lieut.-Colonel and given command of the Field Ambulance in connection with the New South Wales division of the new Australian army. He returns to Sydney to take up his new duties at the end of next week. Prior to the war he held the position of lecturer in the Medical School at the Sydney University, which position is still being held open for him. He is the only son of Mr. G. A. Maguire, the headmaster of Kensington Public School.

Mr. W. P. Baldry was entertained at dinner by the staff of John Hunter and Son, Limited, Redfern boot factory on Thursday on the occasion of his relinquishing the management of the factory. Mr. James Rose presided. Mr. Baldry was presented with an illuminated address.

Bro. Frank Bucklé, who has just retired from the presidency of the Masonic Club after a successful year of office, was last night presented by the members with an illuminated address, a silver salver, and other souvenirs.

Judge Roseby, of the New Hebrides Condominium Court, the acting Public Prosecutor (M. Borgesius), and the interpreter and translator (Mr. Wilson le Couteur), arrived in Sydney by the Pacifique yesterday.

MR. ADRIAN KNOX.

RED CROSS WORK IN EGYPT.

GIFTS THAT GO ASTRAY.

After five months of "active service" in Egypt, Lemnos, and Anzac, as honorary commissioner of the Australian Branch of the British Red Cross Society, Mr. Adrian Knox, K.C., returned to Sydney yesterday afternoon. Several officials of the Red Cross Society went on board the Medina to welcome the commissioner, whose duties are now being performed by Mr. Eric Lloyd Jones and Mr. Norman Brookes.

Replying to a question about the going astray of gifts to Australian soldiers, and the alleged sale of Red Cross goods, Mr. Knox said:—"In the nature of things, I have heard many complaints, and I have received a number of letters—letters which were evidently written under the misconception that the Red Cross Society handles and distributes gifts of all kinds which are sent from Australia. I should like to make it clear that our society has nothing to do with gifts to soldiers. The distribution of these articles is the work of the War Chest, and similar organisations—not ours. With the exception, perhaps, of an occasional parcel sent by post to some soldier in hospital, we did not handle the gifts. If any came our way by mistake on the part of the sender they were passed on to Mr. Budden, the War Chest administrator. We had quite enough to do looking after the sick and the wounded. Personally, I know nothing of the sale of presents to the Red Cross Society. In all probability the instances which have been made public were cases in which some article of clothing was served out by us to a soldier, and sold by him a little later. In this way the article might easily reach a third person, who would think that he was obliged to pay for something the Red Cross should provide for nothing. I am happy to say that there was very little of this sort of traffic when I left Egypt. My observations led me to believe that there was little dishonesty among the soldiers, who had the first handing of the much-talked-of gifts. But as I have said I cannot speak with personal knowledge, as the custody and safe delivery of the gifts did not come within the operations of the Red Cross Society.

"My headquarters," Mr. Knox went on to say, "were at Cairo. Still, I managed to visit Lemnos and Anzac to see how our boys were getting on. Here let me say that I omitted to mention to the Red Cross Council in Melbourne on Wednesday the purchase of games for the sick and wounded soldiers. We spent about £500 on this means of amusement. The games were bought in England, and were distributed among the military hospitals. I think it was money well spent. The games seemed to be highly appreciated alike by sick men and convalescents."

Asked if the convalescent hospital at Montazah, formerly the Khedive's summer palace, was still being used, Mr. Knox said: "Yes, but the demands on it are not as great as they were some little time back. I was told that the magnificent building was secured for hospital purposes by Lady Grahame, whose husband is a high official in the Egyptian Government. Before I got to Alexandria Colonel Barrett had arranged with the British Government to pay half the cost of the necessary alterations and equipment on a basis of 600 beds. That is to say our Government would bear half of the cost of establishing the hospital. The Imperial Government also agreed to pay a capitation allowance for each man in the hospital, besides providing the Commandant and medical staff. The rest of the cost of maintenance was to be divided between the British Red Cross Society and the Australian branch. Beautifully situated in 200 acres of grounds, with boating and fishing in the harbour, the place did not seem to be popular with some of our men for the reason, I suppose, that it is 10 miles away from Alexandria. The arrangement was that the patients were to be half British and half Australian. At times the number of Australians fell below our quota, and not through any fault of the hospital authorities, as far as I was able to find out. We paid half of the cost of the extension when accommodation was provided for 1000 beds. The additions ran into £5000, while the first alterations, including drainage, cost about £4000. Besides our share in this expenditure, we bore our share of the cost of erecting three rest houses in Alexandria for the overworked nurses of the hospitals.

A question about the value of the Red Cross stock in Egypt brought forth the information that the present value is roundly estimated at "many thousands of pounds."

"You ask if the Red Cross hospitals in Alexandria and other places are to be continued now that the end of the Gallipoli campaign has been reached? That is a very difficult question to answer, as no one can tell when those hospitals may be in full swing again. I must admit that there was a falling off in the number of patients towards the close of last year. For instance, the average number of convalescents at the Palace Hospital of which I have just spoken was 600, while there is provision for 1000. As to the cost of Red Cross administration over there—I mean in the stores department—it would surprise you if I gave the figures. Including the honorary workers the staff is a small one. Everything was going very smoothly when I left.

"I should like it to be known," said Mr. Knox, in conclusion, "that I had many opportunities of seeing the activities of Mr. Budden, who is looking after the War Chest and other funds. Mr. Budden is doing extremely good work—at times under great difficulties."

LAST DAYS ON ANZAC.

The following letter has been received by Mr. Justice Ferguson. It was written from Mudros on December 23. The writer says:—"I am requested by the C.O. to convey to the executive and members of the — battalion committee the thanks of the officers and men for the grand manner in which they are looking after their comfort. Thirty-four cases have arrived to date, and there are more awaiting delivery. Eight cases were received at Anzac, and the balance were received on the arrival of the battalion at Mudros. These came at a very opportune time, as the battalion, in supplying part of the rear party in the evacuation from Anzac, was compelled to travel light, and thus had to leave a quantity of necessaries behind, which were replaced through the goodness of the committee. The battalion was in the trenches three months, and a month in reserve.

"During the period the battalion was in the trenches it occupied Russell's Top, one of the most important positions in Anzac, and when the evacuation of Anzac was contemplated it again took up the same post, and held it to the end. It was in taking up the position the second time that the regrettable loss of our three field officers occurred, Majors Jenkins, Harcus, and Uther being killed by a shrapnel shell. Lieut. Dodwell was killed two days after, and Lieutenants Bailey and M'Donald were wounded, the former seriously. This loss of officers was severely felt by the battalion, as up to that date no officers had been lost through wounds.

"In the evacuation the battalion was given the post of honour, viz., the holding of Russell's Top and the inner line of defence, Walker's Ridge, and were the last unit to leave Anzac. The battalion's part in the evacuation has been most favourably commented upon by the Army Corps divisional and brigade commanders, and the behaviour of the men in this difficult and delicate operation was of such high order that it made the officers proud of them. Since the battalion has been on service all the officers and non-coms. of the battalion, which originally left Sydney, have been promoted for their services, and it is thought that the committee would be pleased to hear that the — have supplied the following:—Brigadier of — Brigade, Col. —; C.O. of — Battalion, Major —; A.D.C. to the Divisional Commander, Lieut. —; A.D.C. to Brigadier Lieut. —; and seven non-commissioned officers as subalterns to the — Battalion and — Battalion."

HIGH FINANCE.

AUSTRALIA'S WAR BILL.

LESSENED NATIONAL INCOME.

INCREASED EXPENDITURE.

I.

In the days when wars were fought by standing armies that represented but a fractional part of the population, they could be carried on almost indefinitely without the likelihood of economic ruin. The ordinary activities of the country were conducted much as usual, the cost of equipping the men at the front was not very great, and their absence from the fields of production was of comparatively little consequence. Now all this has changed. Armies no longer consist of a few hundreds of thousands of men; they may number millions. In countries that have adopted conscription every man who can fight is either at the front or busy making munitions for his comrades to explode. So the whole industrial activity of the nation is disturbed in a very real way. This means a mighty shrinkage in the national income, and at the same time it means a vast increase in the national expenditure; for whereas the small armies of the past were comfortably maintained, the millions of the present wars have become most costly; while at the same time the possibility of paying them out of current revenues has been rendered impossible.

Applying this general statement to the position of the Commonwealth, and assuming that the national income is about 250 millions a year of which 25 millions is normally saved, it would not surprise us to learn that the withdrawal of 300,000 men from their ordinary occupations has had the effect of reducing the national income to 200 millions, and reducing the national savings to 15 millions. It is true that other factors come into the question, such as seasons, but the principle is the same. If a year of plenty follows a year of drought the national income may actually increase even though the year of plenty were a year of war, and the year of drought were a year of peace. But the point is that in such circumstances the increase would have been much larger had there been no war. The position is not one for argument; it follows in natural sequence from the facts stated.

We may carry the analogy still further. The Commonwealth is obliged to find between [illegible] and 60 millions sterling of additional money this year to enable it to finance the war, but must do so with a national income appreciably smaller than it would have had had there been no war. Besides cutting down the national income through the withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of able-bodied men from industry, the national savings are reduced through the prevalence of higher prices for so many necessary commodities. In part, these higher prices merely connote the transference of money from one pocket in the community to another in the community, as, for instance, where the artisan is forced to pay the dairy-farmer more for the butter he consumes. In other cases, however, it is a dead loss to the community as where the higher prices are caused through higher freights ruling oversea, thus enhancing the cost of thousands of lines of imported goods. From a national point of view there is some compensation for this in the higher prices that consumers oversea are prepared to pay us for our surplus wheat and our surplus wool. On the whole, it is probable that the higher prices current have operated disadvantageously as far as the national income is concerned and will continue to do so till our exports once more begin to exceed our imports, when the pendulum will swing in the other direction, and the higher prices go, the larger will the national income be.

It is well to consider a little more fully the effect of war on the national income, not of this country only, but of all the belligerents. As soon as the army is mobilised and men are withdrawn from their usual occupations, it is clear that they no longer contribute to the national wealth. If a man in times of peace is employed in a factory producing cloth, the product of his labour is presumably more valuable than the wages he receives. Looking at the matter in its broadest way, the community pays him so much a day and receives in return so much cloth o. a more or less equivalent value. So, too, with the man who ordinarily grows potatoes. He hands over potatoes that are needful for the community and the community gives him money in return that is an order for anything he likes to buy up to the value of the potatoes he has supplied. Then war breaks out, and the artisan in the factory and the farm labourer in the fields are both called to the colours. They are still paid by the community, and the community takes care that they are well fed and clothed. Besides, it arms them and does not look too closely to the cost. But what do they do in return? They drill, fight, endure incredible hardships, but they produce nothing. Instead of producing anything, instead of giving the community anything back for the wages they receive and the food they eat, they use up much of the community's munitions of war, which have been made at great cost, and these they promptly destroy. They are not only non-producers, but they are also lavish consumers. So much for the soldier.

Now, let us consider the position of the munition worker. Does his case differ in any way from that of soldier proper? Before the war an artisan was making, say, sewing machines, and the community paid him for the sewing machines, and so kept him and his family, and enabled them to save a little if they were so inclined. Then war breaks out, and his employer, without in any way consulting him, takes him off his usual task of making sewing machines, and puts him on to turning out shell cases. He is paid as before, but, being a patriotic man, he works harder than usual, knowing that every additional shell case he can produce may [illegible] the saving of the lives of his brothers in the trenches. But what does the community get in the return for his wages? Merely shells, which are exploded as soon as practicable, and then are no more. In reality, the community has received nothing tangible from the munition maker's extra efforts. He is in reality no more productive than the soldier.

But is this strictly true? How can we differentiate between the case of the munition worker, whose product is consumed with a roar, a splutter, a few scattered pieces of shrapnel, and some smoke, and that of the tobacco-worker, whose product also goes up in smoke, but in a more peaceful and less noisy fashion? The tobacco-worker gets paid by the community, also, and in the course of a few weeks or a few months the tobacco is no more, and no one appears to be much better off. The life of the plug of tobacco will in all probability be just about as long as that of the shell. It is true that there is not much to distinguish the two cases if we consider tobacco as a luxury. But if it is regarded as a necessary, then the community really does get something in return for its money. It surely cannot be argued that the maker of, say, oatmeal is in the same plight as the maker of munitions, because in a few weeks the porridge is consumed, and there is nothing tangible to represent the labour of the maker, for which he was paid? The difference lies in the fact that the oatmeal is a prime necessary: that the community would expire without oatmeal and other foods that may be classed with it, and one of the primary objects of all labour is to supply the primary needs of food and clothing for the community. The difficulty in some cases is to draw the line between pure luxuries that may, and in time of war should, be dispensed with, and legitimate necessaries, which make the community stronger and fitter, and better able to survive. What should be done in time of war is to cut out luxuries as far as possible, and devote our whole attention to the output of war materials, or at least of such commodities as increase the national income, and so strengthen our financial position for war.

THE EAST

RUSSIA'S STRENGTH.

SERVIAN ARMY.

WONDERFUL RESCUE.

ACTIVITY IN WEST.

According to an unofficial Petrograd message the recent successes at Uscieczka (on the Dniester), illustrate the importance of the recent reconstruction of the Russian artillery.

Formerly the German artillery overwhelmed the Russian. The Russians, who are now provided with ample shells and guns, are threatening Czernovitz Plateau (north-east of Czernovitz).

The French continue to make progress in the Artois. It is reported from Amsterdam that German troops, mostly from the Balkans, are concentrating between Roulers and Courtrai.

The Allies have saved 150,000 of the Servian army for further activity.

Germany has issued a memorandum to neutral countries, stating that armed merchantmen will be regarded as belligerents, and warning neutrals not to trust persons or property on such vessels.

AIR RAID.

GERMAN SEAPLANES

BOMBS ON RAMSGATE.

LONDON, Feb. 11.

The German seaplanes which dropped bombs on Ramsgate (Kentish coast) made a target of a tramway car, full of women and children. The bomb exploded harmlessly; other bombs fell in some fields.

The Broadstairs raider dropped a bomb on a large school for girls. The bomb fell through the roof and exploded in the upper story. Some material damage resulted to portion of the ceiling, and two children were slightly injured.

"HEROIC ACTS."

SUBMARINE WAR.

APOLOGY TO HOLLAND.

A message from the Hague says that Germany has apologised for torpedoing the Dutch steamer Artemis while bound from Rotterdam to London, and has offered to pay an indemnity.

AMERICA AND AUSTRIA.

Advices from Washington state that Mr. R. Lansing (Secretary of State) has demanded from Austria an apology for the attack without warning on the American oil tank steamer Petrolio by an Austrian submarine in the Mediterranean in December last, punishment of the commander of the submarine, and an indemnity.

The submarine, it is said, continued firing although the steamer stopped. The captain of the Petrolio refused to sell the submarine provisions. Thereupon the submarine crew forcibly helped themselves.

THE ARMENIANS.

MASSACRES RECOMMENCED.

Geneva newspapers state that the massacre of the few remaining Armenians has recommenced. Men and boys are shot, and the younger women and girls are sold in the open market in Constantinople.

CROWN PRINCE.

VISITS ALSATIAN FRONT.

FRENCH AEROPLANES ACTIVE.

BERNE, Feb. 11.

The German Crown Prince, who is visiting the Alsatian front, arrived at Saint Louis, near Basle. Suddenly French aeroplanes from Belfort appeared. There was a terrified rush for indoors. The Crown Prince took refuge in a cellar, and motored to Altkirch when the airmen passed on.

GERMAN EDITOR IMPRISONED.

BERLIN, Feb. 11.

Herr Ernst Meyer, editor of "Vorwaerts," has been prosecuted for inciting class hatred by publishing a pamphlet entitled, "Who is Responsible for the War?" and another, "The Annexation Mania."

The Public Prosecutor demanded that Meyer be sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment. Meyer was sentenced to a week.

WESTERN FRONT.

GERMANS FROM BALKANS.

"MANY MERE BOYS."

LONDON, Feb. 11.

A French communique says:—The artillery duel in the Artois was continued from Hill 119 to the Neuville-Thelus road. Hand grenade fighting enabled us to expel the enemy from some communication trenches occupied by him westward of La Folie. The Germans at nightfall strongly attacked our positions along the Neuville-La Folie road, but were repulsed. The enemy only obtained a footing in a crater previously recaptured from him. During minor engagements, southward of the Somme, we captured a number of prisoners, two quickfirers, and a revolver gun.

We continue to progress in the Artois. We bombed communication trenches west of La Folie. Two German attacks west of Hill 140 were completely repulsed. The Germans exploded a mine north of the Neuville-Thelus road. We occupied the crater.

The enemy tried to debouch south of the Somme, but were driven back to the trenches.

ENEMY CONCENTRATING.

An Amsterdam message says that many trains filled with troops passed through Louvain, and are concentrating around Roulers and Courtrai. Most of the troops are from the Balkans, and many are mere boys.

ALLIES' AIR RAID.

General Sir Douglas Haig reports that 18 aeroplanes made a successful bombing raid on enemy huts. Several were damaged, and a steam lorry was wrecked. The aeroplanes returned safely.

GERMAN COMMUNIQUE.

A German communique, received via Amsterdam, says:—We captured a large section of a trench north-west of Vimy, and recaptured, in the neighbourhood of Neuville, a crater in the enemy's occupation. We captured 52 prisoners and 22 machine guns. We repulsed local attacks south of the Somme. The enemy, north of Bacquincourt, obtained a foothold in a small section of our foremost trenches.

MERCHANTMEN.

CARRYING GUNS.

TREATED AS BELLIGERENTS.

GERMAN MEMORANDUM.

Germany has issued a memorandum to neutral countries stating that henceforward armed enemy merchantmen will be treated as belligerents, and warns neutrals not to trust persons or property in such vessels.

The memorandum states:—"Britain prior to the war gave shipowners guns, ammunition, and personal necessities for drilling gun crews. It was argued that such ships would maintain the character of peaceful merchantmen while they carry arms solely for defence. In accordance therewith the Ambassador at Washington on August 25, 1914, gave America far-reaching assurances that British merchantmen would never fire unless first attacked.

"On the other hand, Britain held that armed vessels under other flags should be treated as war vessels. The German Government does not doubt that merchantmen equipped with guns acquire a warlike character, whether such guns serve in defence or in attack; also that such activities are contrary to national law."

"Germany, however, takes into consideration the contrary conception by treating the crews as belligerents, not as pirates. Some of the neutral nations concurred in the British view, and others held that armed merchantmen were really war vessels. Reports of German naval officers show that British merchantmen are not only offering armed resistance, but even attack the Germans under the repeated use of false colours. Britain's Allies are copying Britain's example. A memorandum by the British Admiralty instructs merchantmen to wage war mercilessly on German submarines without awaiting war-like action whenever and wherever they meet the submarines."

The memorandum concludes: "In view of these circumstances, the enemy merchantmen, after a short interval, in the interest of neutral nations, will be treated as belligerents. Germany has notified the neutral nations in order that they may warn their subjects before entrusting their persons and properties on armed merchantmen."

PIRATICAL OUTRAGES.

MR. FISHER.

ENTERTAINED IN LONDON.

The Imperial Industries Club entertained Mr. Andrew Fisher (High Commissioner for Australia) at lunch to-day. Among those present were Captain R. M. Collins, the Agents-General, Mr. F. Flowers, M.L.C., Mr. D. Fell, and Professor Fremantle.

The Lord Mayor, who presided, said the Empire and Australia were to be congratulated upon Mr. Fisher's presence to assist in unravelling the difficult postwar problems.

Mr. Fisher, responding, said there were no political parties in Australia during the war. Australians realised that the struggle would determine the destinies of the human race for centuries to come. They were determined the British system of equity and freedom must be maintained against all aggressors. They were prepared to throw in everything they possessed. The Commonwealth had already exercised the fullest powers against enemy trade, not with a view to the degradation of enemy peoples, but in the interest of a just cause. The cadet movement, which had been found beneficial in Australia, might be given a trial in Britain.

Sir George Reid, M.P., proposing the toast of "The Visitors," warmly welcomed Mr. Fisher to London.

EASTERN FRONT.

RUSSIAN ARTILLERY.

RECENT RECONSTRUCTION.

GERMAN FIRE BEATEN DOWN.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 11.

Fuller reports emphasise the importance of the success at Uscieczka, which was an enemy stronghold on a high ridge between the Dniester and the Zurin, near the point of confluence. From here the enemy had been able to pour in a galling fire on the Russian positions on the east bank. The precipitous slopes, covered with dense undergrowth, were converted into a miniature Gibraltar.

The Russians drove numerous saps, from which they assailed the enemy with hand-grenades and batteries, and poured in high explosives and shrapnel with unerring precision. The first Russian success occurred at the end of January, but, heavily reinforced, the enemy kept the Russians at bay for a week. Then the Russians won a position which enabled heavy guns to bombard the reserves across the river.

DESPERATE BATTLE.

Finally, after four days and nights' desperate fighting the Russians rushed the bridgehead on Tuesday, and crossed the Dniester, though the opposite bank was equally precipitous and strongly fortified. It is reported that General von Bothmer was wounded during heavy fighting.

Uscieczka was the point of connection between General von Bothmer's armies operating north of the river, and the armies of General Pflanzer, and the Germans between the Dniester and the Pruth. The Russians thus thrust a wedge between two parts of the enemy's armies.

The Russians are also threatening Czernovitz plateau (north-east of Czernovitz). This has been the scene of strenuous fighting, which is not yet decisive, and has not been mentioned in official bulletins. The successes illustrate the importance of the recent reconstruction of the Russian artillery. Formerly the German artillery overwhelmed the Russian. Now the German fire is beaten down.

The Russians are provided with ample shells and guns of the pattern of the French "seventy-fives." These do not require concrete platforms, whereas the Germans are forced to work their guns from two or three positions, connected laterally by rails, which the Russian gunners readily pick out.

RESULT OF A THAW.

Owing to the overflow of the Oginski Canal, the result of a sudden thaw, the Germans have evacuated the whole of the second line of trenches, sacrificing great quantities of ammunition.

Reports received in Bucharest show that a 20-inch howitzer was being tested at the Skoda arsenal, at Pilsen (Bohemia), in December, when it exploded during the initial tests. There were numerous victims.

AUSTRIAN REPORT.

An Austrian communique reports increased activity in Eastern Galicia. The fighting has been particularly fierce north-west of Tamopol.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.

HEROIC SACRIFICES.

WIDOW'S EIGHT SONS.

LONDON, Feb. 11.

The King and Queen received in audience Lieutenant Clutha Mackenzie, son of Sir Thomas Mackenzie (High Commissioner for New Zealand), who lost his eyesight during the great attack at Suvla Bay. He was accompanied by his father. The King sympathised with Lieutenant Clutha Mackenzie's bad luck, and expressed the warmest appreciation of the New Zealanders' achievements.

Sir Thomas Mackenzie mentioned he had received a letter from the Rev. Mr. Featherstone, of Inglewood, relating that a widow, although she had four sons killed and three wounded, went to Wellington to wish God-speed to her eighth son who was going to the front.

The King instructed Sir Thomas Mackenzie to convey his admiration of the widow's patriotism, self-sacrifice, and the courageous resignation with which she had borne her heavy loss, and the willingness with which she had given her eighth and last child at the country's call.

MERCHANT SHIPPING

The A.M.S. Sierra has left San Francisco for Sydney. The Am. 4-m schr Spokane has left Puget Sound for Melbourne. The bqtne S. N. Castle has left Gray's Harbour for Port Pirie. The Am. schr Annie Larsen has left Gray's Harbour for Lyttelton.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Queen, Princess Mary, Princess Victoria, and Prince Albert paid a surprise visit to Horseferry-road. The Queen served tea to the Australian soldiers, and was given a rousing reception.

Sir Peter M'Bride (Agent-General for Victoria) in reply to an inquiry by Mr. J. G. Jenkins, states that a person residing in Britain deriving an income of £10,000 a year from property in Victoria would, under the Triple Income Tax, pay 3s 8d in the pound.

The Baptist handbook shows a decline in membership of 3176, which is partly owing to the war.

Many Anglican training colleges have been closed for similar reason. A movement is afoot at the instance of Bishop Welldon, Dean of Manchester, to enable parish clergy to officiate in more than one parish.

Mr. Asquith, replying to a deputation, refused to reconsider the closing of museums. He agreed to keep open the manuscript room of the British museum for the use of students and the popular side of the National History museum for the use of wounded soldiers.

Evidence given in the Folkestone Police Court showed that cocaine is sold in the Canadians' camp. Forty men in one camp were suffering from the drug habit. Cocaine was known as "snow."

THE BALKANS.

POLICY OF GREECE.

NEUTRALITY.

STATEMENT BY PREMIER.

LONDON, Feb. 10.

Mr. Martin Donohoe, correspondent for the "Daily Chronicle," writing from Athens says that the Greek Premier, M. Scouloudis, made a long statement to Parliament on the policy of the Government, which, he said, had been endorsed by the Chamber of Deputies. The keynote of the statement was neutrality. This policy, as the evolution of events had shown, was the best safeguard to keep the country from disaster. He hoped he would be able to save Greece from the dangers menacing her, owing to the colossal international struggle. Pressure had been brought to bear to induce her to depart from neutrality. Such pressure might increase, but whatever the influence, and whatever the coercion, it was the intention of Greece, and her indisputable right, to remain outside a struggle which was foreign to her national interests. He protested against the violation of Greece's sovereign rights involved in the occupation of Kara Burnu and Corfu.

ROUMANIA.

The Roumanian Export Committee has decided to sell 100,000 waggons of cereals to the Central Powers.

SERVIAN ARMY.

M. Vesnitch, the Servian Minister in Paris, in the course of an interview, thanks France and the Allies for saving 150,000 of the Servian army for further activity. The Premier (M. Aristide Briand) and General Joffre, he says, have secured for France the devotion of the Slavs.

The "Gaulois" says that Britain and Italy participated in the marvellous operation of rescuing the Servian army, to which they brought activity and devotion above all praise. Everything was achieved silently and without a hitch.

CONSULS RELEASED.

An Athens message says that the Austrian and German Consuls who were arrested in Mitylene have been released at Toulon.

PERSIA.

KURDS AND TURKS.

A French wireless message says the Russians in Persia are continually pushing back mixed bands of Kurds and Turks under German officers.

HAPSBURG DYNASTY.

INFLUENCE ON THE WAR.

PARIS, Feb. 10.

Professor Masaryk, a former member of the Austrian Reichsrath, who was exiled at the outset of the war, emphasises the necessity for wiping out the Hapsburg Dynasty.

If Germany were deprived of Austro-Turkish support, he says, she would be too weak to menace the Western Powers. Had the Allies at the outset declared that Austrian Slavs would be liberated, and the monarchy abolished, Austria-Hungary would have been a millstone round Germany's neck, and the entire course of the war changed.

It was a fatal mistake to imagine that Austria would ultimately oppose Germany. Pan-Germanism was rampant in Vienna and Budapest, and outnumbered the Czechs and Slavs. Germany's one aim was supremacy over Central Europe, thus effectively holding the Allies in check. If the Hapsburgs were wiped out, Germany's dream would be shattered, and the Berlin to Baghdad scheme would be a thing of the past. She would never again be able to devastate Europe.

UNITED STATES.

SECRETARY FOR WAR RESIGNS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.

Mr. L. M. Garrison (Secretary of War), and Mr. Breckenridge (Assistant Secretary), have resigned. The resignations are due to a large majority in Congress opposing the scheme for an army on Continental lines.

FRENCH MINISTERS.

VISIT TO ITALY.

LONDON, Feb. 11.

The French Cabinet Ministers, who are visiting Rome, were enthusiastically welcomed, the crowd acclaiming France and the Allies.

M. Thomas (French Minister of Munitions), in the course of an interview, said that by spring France will possess a colossal reserve of munitions. The Allies were hastening the output to the utmost.

M. Aristide Briand (the French Premier), said he was hopeful of securing the most serious support from Italian statesmen for the purpose of bringing the joint work of the Allies to a successful issue by establishing closer and more fruitful co-operation.

WAR NOTES.

THE SOUTHERN RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE.

The second phase of the new Russian offensive in Bukovina has opened well with the success at Uscieczka, which is at the confluence of the Dniester and Zurin rivers, about 40 miles north-west of Czernovitz, the Bukovinian capital. But the Russian advance, as far as it has gone, does not in itself quite justify the important claims made for it in the cables. One message yesterday suggested that the Russian grip of the Dniester at Uscieczka would make the whole Austrian position in Bukovina untenable, but this is altogether too extravagant an estimate of the position. There is a railway running eastward to Czernovitz, roughly parallel with and about 30 miles south of the Dniestor, and as long as this line is in Austrian hands their position in Bukovina is eminently tenable. If the Russians could strike down in a south-westerly direction from Uscieczka on to this railway, then the enemy's grip on Bukovina would fail; but the Czar's troops have so far only got a bare footing on the southern bank of the river at Uscieczka and some very bloody fighting must inevitably take place before they can accomplish that south-westward march. Still, the Russian offensive, or rather the second phase of it, has only just opened, and the next few days may really see a state of affairs similar to that which is being prematurely claimed for the position of to-day. It is evident that the Russians are determined to render this southern offensive of theirs something more than a flash in the pan, and it is very significant that the Austrian communique of this morning speaks of particularly fierce fighting to the north-west of Tarnopol, in eastern Galicia. We must perforce watch these operations with the greatest interest, not only because they will afford us an indication of what the Russians can do now that, in this sector at least, their munition problem has ceased to trouble them, but also because of the effect those operations may be expected to have upon the Balkan situation.

GERMANY AND ARMED MERCHANTMEN.

The decision of Germany, which is now announced with a great flourish of trumpets, to treat all merchantmen carrying guns as ships of war, is of more interest in relation to the motives that prompted it than anything else, though it must be admitted that those motives are not altogether obvious. The whole matter of merchantmen carrying guns—which must not be confused with merchantmen converted into auxiliary cruisers—is somewhat mixed up at present. Before the war guns were mounted on some steamers for purely protective purposes, a fact which was demonstrated by the position of the weapons—at the stern. It was because such vessels were not supposed to use their armament for attack that, after the war broke out, they were allowed to enter and depart from neutral ports in pursuance of their ordinary trade. But when Germany threw overboard all the accepted obligations as to the rights of non-combatants at sea, and set out on her career of murder, by the sinking of vessels without search or warning, she upset the old order of things in more ways than one. The merchantmen, as could only have been expected, found that the best form of defence against the murderous attentions of the submarines was attack—and they have put this into practice very effectively in a number of cases. The Germans raised a wild protest against steamers daring to fire at the submarines, claiming that by so doing they were violating the rules of war. But they seemed to be curiously blind to the fact that they themselves were responsible, through their cynical disregard of all the rules, in the first instance. Still the new development—that of merchant ships attacking warships—did represent the beginnings of a very involved position, which will take a good deal of straightening out on an international basis later on. We have already got an earnest of this in the American threat to prohibit merchantmen which mount guns from entering United States harbours except under the conditions attaching to regular ships of war.

THE "CAMPAIGN OF PIRACY."

As to the German decision now promulgated, it, of necessity, cannot alter things very much as between their submarines and our merchantmen, because all along the Teutonic treatment of the latter, whether they carried guns or not, could not have been much different had they actually been full-blown ships of war. When a submarine falls in with an enemy warship she promptly attacks her, and in all too many cases this is exactly what the German submarines have done with the merchantmen. It is for this reason that we say the main interest in the German memorandum lies in the motive for it. The cables state that some of the English newspapers interpret the memorandum as preparing the way to "another campaign of piratical outrages," while the "Daily Mail" construes it as a reprisal in connection with the Baralong affair. But the original campaign of "piratical outrages" has not ceased. The only thing about it is that it has wofully decreased in effectiveness. The effort has been sustained all along, but the results have dwindled. The mere indirect announcement of a new campaign will not produce greater effectiveness. The only way to do that will be to overcome the anti-submarine measures of the Allied fleets. And these, unfortunately for Germany, are becoming more instead of less certain in their operation as time goes on.

A POSSIBLE MOTIVE.

There is, however, one consideration which seems to suggest a motive for Germany's action in proclaiming to the world that she will henceforth treat merchantmen carrying guns as warships. Her little trouble with the United States is now definitely fixed up, and she is exerting all sorts of influences to impel President Wilson into more serious depths in this dispute with Britain regarding the treatment of neutral shipping. Her agents are boldly intimating that there was a sort of bargain that if Germany undertook to preserve the interests of neutrals at sea the United States would force Britain to relax her blockade. There was no such bargain, but the cry is serving its purpose. Now, while this dispute with Britain is developing, Germany naturally does not want further to antagonise the United States. But at the same time Germany wants to go on sinking British merchantmen in her own way whenever she gets the opportunity, and she may now be seeking to forearm herself against any trouble in the event of American passengers or property being involved. She is assuming that a very large proportion of British merchantmen are now carrying guns, and thus her proclamation will cover a wide field of activity and also allow her room for argument where a doubt can be raised. It seems obvious that the attitude of a neutral or neutrals was one of the German preoccupations in sending out her memorandum in the form in which she has. In the light of Germany's actions at sea in the past the attitude of Britain in the matter doesn't seem to be of much concern. And as the United States is the one neutral above all others with whom Germany does not want to become involved in a dispute at this juncture this seems to supply the motive we are seeking.

AUSTRALIAN SPELTER.

CO-OPERATION SCHEME.

TO OUST THE GERMANS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

An important conference, representing the spelter interests of Australia, was held at the office of the Federal Attorney-General to-day. The Acting Attorney-General (Mr. Mahon) presided, and there were present Messrs. D. M'Bride (Broken Hill Proprietary Company), J. L. Wharton, M. Cohen, E. H. Shackell, and W. L. Baillieu (Amalgamated Zinc), D. G. Lumsden (Mount Lyell), W. S. Robinson (Association Smelters), F. King and T. B. Birkbeck (Zinc Corporation and British Broken Hill Company), W. M. Hyndman (North and South Broken Hill), Alex. Campbell (Block 10 Company), and A. E. Bright (Sulphide Corporation).

Further consideration was given to a proposal to form a co-operative association to deal with the spelter output of Australia. The object aimed at is to unite all Australian producers of spelter in one organisation, so that their views on the steps to be taken to establish the industry permanently in Great Britain on a firm and lasting foundation, can be communicated to the Imperial Government, through the Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, during his visit to England. The association of the producing companies is aimed at with the object of making permanent the present eradication of German influence from the metal trade, and of enabling Great Britain to secure her supplies of spelter from entirely British sources after the war.

An indication of the importance of the matter may be gathered from the fact that the production of the world amounts to 998,000 tons of spelter a year, and of this 461,000 tons were absolutely under German control prior to the war. Great Britain was dependent on Germany for 135,000 tons per annum, her consumption being 195,000 tons, and her production only 60,000 tons. Australia alone produces over 50,000 of zinc concentrates, from which 20,000 tons of spelter were obtained. As the price of spelter, quoted in the press to-day, was £91 a ton, the importance of any scheme affecting the whole of the Commonwealth output can well be imagined.

PRICE OF BREAD.

REDUCTION IN MELBOURNE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Success has attended the efforts of the Minister for Agriculture (Mr. Hagelthorn) to bring about a reduction in the price of bread. The official price of bread will be reduced to-morrow from 8½d the 4lb loaf to 7½d in all industrial suburbs.

ASHMEAD BARTLETT

ARRIVAL IN SYDNEY.

"FINEST IN THE WORLD."

Mr. Ashmead Bartlett, the famous war correspondent, who arrived in Sydney last evening by the Niagara, has a tremendous opinion of what he terms the superlative fighting qualities of the Australians. For bravery, initiative and resource, they have no superiors in the world, he says.

Mr. Bartlett is a brisk, breezy conversationalist. "Let us get this interview over quickly," he said to the Herald representative who met him in the brief interval between his arrival at the hotel Australia a few minutes after 8 o'clock and the reception tendered by the Returned Soldiers' Association soon after.

"What have I to say about the Australians? Well, I have been in wars as a correspondent for the last 15 years and have never seen a finer body of troops than those heroes you sent to Anzac. They were simply wonderful. Nothing could have been more admirable and more stirring than the way these men—civilians only six months before—made that landing that will live in all history. Oh, they're the finest fighters in the world! I never ceased to admire their wonderful physique, their daring, their initiative. Yes, that is one of their great points. They never get stuck. It is undoubtedly sad that the effort did not succeed—but in the end we shall probably attain the result that was aimed at because, in the grand settlement, once we have defeated Germany we shall be able to dictate our own policy to the Balkan States. But I have not come here to harp on the mistakes of the past, and I want to make that clear at the outset. I would rather dwell on the great and the grand future that I am fully confident is in store. What I have come to tell is the story of the courage, the heroism, and the truly wonderful work of those brave fellows who have made so great a name for Australia. We are all proud of them.

"The people in the old land have an enormous opinion of, and admiration for, the Australian soldier. Well they might! They hope that Australia will send as many more men as possible. We hope that these men with such splendid fighting qualities will be used in a position where they can attain some great result. There will be plenty of work yet. Egypt has got to be held, they may be wanted in Mesopotamia, or employed on the western front. I read in the papers that some of your men were being employed against the Senussi. Well, I'm sorry for the Senussi. That's all! If we win on the western front and in Mesopotamia, we may make a big drive through Salonica. It has been a disappointment that we have not got Constantinople yet, but I am one of those who think that we shall have it before this war is over.

"I don't see any end of the war at present. It will last a long time, I think. You see, the power of defensive is so tremendous that even Germany, with diminished numbers, if she acts on the defensive, can maintain her strong position. Victory lies in a grand offensive. With the combined pressure of Russia, ourselves, and the French, we may push the Germans back to their frontier. Afterwards there will be a long drawn out struggle, in which we must win, if only the economic side is reckoned. Yes, we must win, and there is no doubt about it. We shall, though, need all the men we can get, because the wastage is so great, even without any big battle. I forget the figures of the reinforcements required on the western front alone, but I know they are quite surprising to anyone who does not know the extent of wastage that goes on in war."

Mr. Bartlett was asked his opinion as to the attitude of Greece and Roumania.

"I never expected Greece to come in after our failure in Gallipoli," he replied. "If you read Greek history, you will find they have played this game right through. I do not believe Roumania will come in at the present time. They are waiting to see how the cat is going to jump, and you really cannot blame them for that. My notion is that unless Russia can support her with a large force, Roumania, though she is undoubtedly pro-Ally, dare not come in at the present time. They are friends of ours all right, but it would not be good for the Roumanians, they themselves think, to step boldly into the arena just yet."

AUSTRALIA'S ACHIEVEMENT.

"WRITTEN IN FADELESS LETTERS."

Last night Mr. Ashmead Bartlett was entertained at dinner by the Returned Soldiers' Association. Held at Baumann's Cafe, the dinner was under the patronage of General E. T. Wallack, C.B., Colonel R. N. Owen, C.M.G., and Lieut.-Colonel Heritage. Mr. William Brooks, president of the association, occupied the chair.

In proposing "Our Guest," after the toast of "The King" had been honoured, the chairman said that Mr. Ashmead Bartlett had chronicled the deeds of the Australian Boys of the Dardanelles in a way which would not be forgotten in this part of the world. (Cheers.) He believed that the visit of the brilliant war correspondent would help not a little in raising the additional 50,000 men who had been promised by the Prime Minister. (Applause.)

Mr. Bartlett, who was received with cheers, said that his admiration for the Australian and New Zealand troops was boundless. With an experience of many nations, he had to confess that he had never seen a better body of soldiers than the Australians who landed at Gallipoli in April, 1915. If the landing was a great achievement, the four days' fight which followed soon after was even finer. Despite what some critics had written, the Dardanelles campaign was one of the great events of the war—(cheers)—and the courage of the Australians and New Zealanders would be written in fadeless letters with the military history of the British Empire. (Renewed cheering.) In this regard he would like to have it widely known here that the splendid help which had been given by Australia and New Zealand was most gratefully and affectionately appreciated in the old country. (Applause.) No nation, he ventured to say, could have done more against the monstrous German military organisation than England had done. (Hear, hear.) Australians should not allow the idea to get into their heads that no more men were wanted. Every single able-bodied man who could be spared was needed. (Cheers.) He hoped that the response of Australia to the new appeal would be in proportion to the magnificent valour of our soldiers in the Dardanelles. If he had done anything to make the military side of the Australian character known to the world he was extremely proud of the part he had played. (Cheers.) Nothing was to be gained by talking of what had been attempted—of the things in which they may not have succeeded. (Hear, hear.) Even if the British Empire had, in a sense, lost Gallipoli, on the principle of compensation it had found the Australian soldier and the New Zealand soldier. (Cheers.)

Colonel Owen (who was announced as the new president of the Returned Soldiers' Association) proposed "The Empire." In a reference to the guest the speaker said it was due to Mr. Ashmead Bartlett to acknowledge that he had given the Australian soldier his proper place in chronicles of the greatest of all wars. (Applause.)

The toasts of "Army and Navy" and "Fallen Comrades" followed.

In proposing "The Returned Soldiers' Association," Corporal Davis stated that Mr. William Brooks, who had been active as a civilian in the formation of the association, was now gracefully retiring, so that Colonel Owen might be president. (Cheers.)

After the singing of "The Old Brigade" by Mr. R. H. Trevor, the whole company joined in the National Anthem.

Mr. Brooks presented the guest with a framed group of the first committee of the association. The dinner was carried out under the direction of Mr. T. L. Bathurst (hon. secretary) and Mr. G. Davis (hon. treasurer).

ANZAC DAY.

Alderman Joynton Smith, M.L.C., has given notice of motion for Monday night's meeting of the City Council in favour of making arrangements for the suitable commemoration of "Anzac Day" (April 25).

ITALY.

PLEDGED TO NATIONAL FREEDOM.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

The position of Italy in regard to the war was explained in the Italian Chamber of Deputies by Baron Sonnino, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in December last. A translation of this speech, by the Italian Consul-General for Australasia, M. Eles, shows, to use the Consul's own words, "that Italy, as well as the other nations of the Quadruple Entente, is pledged, not only to secure the realisation of her own special national aspirations, but also to ensure to Europe and to the whole world by the united victories of their armies the survival and extension of the principles of liberty and of justice. Italy's place in the war is now marked out in the most definite way," says M. Eles, "and, faithful to the word she has given, she will hold that place with honour until common victory has been attained."

"As the result of the situation created by the violation of the essential stipulations of the Triple Alliance on the part of Austria-Hungary," said Baron Sonnino, "and by her premeditated aggression against Servia, it was necessary to provide by arms for the defence of our interests and security. After the declaration of war against Austria-Hungary, Germany notified us that she would consider her diplomatic relations with Italy broken off. On August 20 we declared war against Turkey. The violations of the Treaty of Lausanne committed by that Government ever since the signing of that Treaty are well known. The acts of hostility fomented and directed by Turkey agains us in Lybia,, the continual sending of officers and of arms into our colony, the failure to return prisoners, and, further, the unjustifiable hindrances to the departure of Consular functionaries, the unjust impositions against Italian citizens who sought to return home, the negotiations patiently conducted up to the limit imposed by our dignity, are all circumstances already known, which, together with our desire to proceed in perfect harmony of purpose with the Allies in the Balkan peninsula and in the East, led us to our declaration of war against the Ottoman Empire.

"Italy has carried on in the Balkans her traditional policy, continued now during many years, inspired by the principle of nationality and of the independence of the Balkan peoples; our action was strongly directed to this end in full accord with the Allies. But, if the policy of the Quadruple Entente was directed to the union of the Balkan States, that of the Central empires, on the other hand, fomented dissension and rivalry.

"The members of those Governments, preoccupied solely with recent hatreds, put aside the greater and more vital considerations of the political and economic independence of the nations. Bulgaria scorned the advantages offered by the Quadruple Entente, and turned her arms against Servia, when she saw that gallant little nation assailed with the enormous machinery of war by the united armies of the two Central Empires. In these circumstances Italy's path was clearly marked out. We have declared war against Bulgaria, in conjunction with the Allies, with whom we have been constantly united in endeavours for a settlement. Thus, in the development of events, in the common unanimous effort of diplomatic negotiations, in the unflinching struggle of arms carried on in the various theatres of war, the complete and admirable solidarity of the Allies has been strengthened.

"The political and economic independence of Servia has always been one of the pivots of Italian policy in the Balkans. It is a vital necessity to the very existence of Italy as a a great Power. The political and economical absorption of Servia by Austria-Hungary would represent a grave and constant danger to Italy, raising at the same time an insuperable barrier to our economic expansion on the opposite shore of the Adriatic. By agreement with our Allies we regard as an indispensable aim of this war the restoration of the heroic Servian people to the plenitude of their independence. To-day the Servian army, under the weight of the double aggression, seeks a way of escape towards the sea, notwithstanding the praiseworthy efforts of the Anglo-French corps landed at Salonica; and Italy cannot remain indifferent to the appeal of anguish which comes across the Adriatic.

"The presence of our flag on the opposite shore of the Adriatic will serve also to reaffirm the traditional policy of Italy in regard to Albania, which represents now, as in the past, an interest of the first importance to us, inasmuch as her destiny is intimately bound up with the settlement of the Adriatic. It is of the utmost importance to Italy that the independence of the Albanian people should be maintained.

"For the reconstruction of the natural frontiers and for the conquest of the gates of Italy the valour of the Italian arms is providing with tenacity and self-sacrifice, no less than with dash. Together with these wa shall obtain the redemption of the people of our race, who for long years have sustained an unequal struggle against the underhand and persistent work of denationalisation pursued by the Austrian Government.

"Finally, the Government has greatly at heart the jealous guardianship of our vital Mediterranean interests. When about four years ago the equilibrium of the Western Mediterranean was threatened, Italy was constrained to go to war for the conquest of Lybia, and our people well understood its high political significance. And when the settlement of the Eastern Mediterranean was necessary it was impossible for Italy timidly to stand aloof, and by her detachment submit to every exclusion and sanction every renunciation.

"Italy is firmly resolved to carry forward the war with all her power and at any sacrifice, however great, until her national aspirations, as well as of those general conditions of independence, security, and mutual respect of the nations, which alone can form the basis of a lasting peace, are realised."

ALLEGED SPY.

ASKED AWKWARD QUESTIONS.

FRENCH RESERVISTS' WARM WELCOME.

The "New Zealand Herald," of February 5 contains an account of the arrest of a man in Wellington who was suspected of being a German spy. He was arrested before the steamer Manuka left Wellington for Sydney.

The man had been in Wellington for some time, and suspicion was aroused by the pertinacity of his inquiries among the French reservists travelling in the Manuka as to the nature of the defences in the Pacific islands.

The military authorities were communicated with, and the man was placed under arrest. It is understood that he was trying to get away from the Dominion in the Manuka.

The Frenchmen got excited, and the German was handled roughly by them until rescued by the authorities.

When the announcement was made in the Anti-German League's rooms that a supposed spy had been arrested there was great excitement among the members present. One of those who heard the news with interest was Madame Boeufve, wife of M. Boeufve, formerly French Consul for New Zealand.

"As soon as I heard of the arrest," she said, "I went straight down to the steamer, accompanied by Mr. J. Payne, M.P. There I interviewed the French reservists, and also spoke to the police sergeant, obtaining from the former the following story:—This man, they said, was one of the first persons to go aboard the Maitai when they arrived by her last Sunday; he took pains to make himself most amiable to them, and accompanied them wherever they went. Incidentally he asked them all sorts of questions, and in a quiet way sought to discover as much as he could about them. It was, however, noticed that he spoke French with a strong German accent, and they became suspicious of him and his apparent friendship. Still, they made no sign, and in their way led him on still further. When they were all together on the boat, he said to them: 'Have you any naturalised Germans among you?' Thinking to put him to the test, one of the reservists replied: 'Yes, I am a naturalised German.' The reservist at once found his hand seized and wrung with effusion by his 'friend.' Thereupon several others announced that they also were naturalised Germans, and every one of them was shaken by the hand and greeted. This, however, proved to be altogether too much for the reservists, whose anger had been steadily rising. They became most excited, and then there was trouble. They crowded in upon the man, and began to beat him and kick him till others on the ship had to intervene. Had he not been taken away he would probably have been thrown into the harbour, so angry were the reservists. But his removal saved him from harm."

PREMIER AT PARRAMATTA

EVE OF THE POLL.

A REPLY TO CRITICISM.

The contest for Parramatta seat between Mr. Bruntnell and Mr. Walford, the Liberal and Labour candidates respectively, has been growing keener each day.

Last night in the Liberal Institute, Messrs. J. Cook, M.P., C. G. Wade, M.L.A., and Senator Millen addressed a meeting. From the hotel balcony on the corner the Premier (Mr. Holman), the Minister for Education (Mr. Griffith), the Attorney-General (Mr. Hall), and Mr. H. Jackson (Minister for Works in South Australia) addressed a big crowd. Between the two meetings, so close that the voices of the rival speakers could be distinctly heard, Mr. John Haynes, M.L.A., addressed a meeting from a lorry.

There is every probability that the poll today will be easily the heaviest in the political history of the constituency.

Mr. Jackson (South Australia) claimed that Labour had demonstrated its capacity to govern Australia in the interests of the citizens. Its aim was to make Australia so good for every man who was prepared to take his coat off and work as to induce a constant stream of workers from other parts of the world.

The Premier had a splendid reception. The presence of Mr. Jackson, said Mr. Holman, was an indication of the steady growth of Labour principles throughout Australia. Three years ago, he said, South Australia did what Liberals were asking New South Wales to do now—they turned a Labour Government out of power. But three years of the change was enough, and six months ago the people of that State put Labour into power again. (Cheers.)

"The Liberals have no policy," said Mr. Holman. "Their attitude is of such a character that if they were photographed in that attitude you would say it was a caricature. Their whole political stock-in-trade is a continuous tirade of abuse of the Government now in power. We have our shortcomings, we do not deny it. But we do say that we have at least attempted to deal with the great economic and public works problems of the State. There are only two great acts with which Mr. Wade's name will ever be associated, and they are the Coercion Act and the second ballot, the latter designed to cripple the political activity of the Labour party. We repealed the first, as soon as we got into power, and now the only legislation Mr. Wade promises you in this campaign is the repeal of the second ballot, which he has found to be a two-edged sword, thus wiping out the only two big things with which his name has been associated."

Mr. Holman then proceeded to deal with the question of the expenditure of public money on refreshments for the entertainment of visitors to the State. "No Government," he said, "can entertain public visitors without spending a little money, and no Government has ever yet refrained from it. But never before has there been any attempt on the part of either the press or the public to criticise it. It has now been discovered," he said, "that there are four or five small items included in the public accounts for occasions on which we spent small sums in entertaining public guests. One of these sums was an amount of 15s spent in entertaining the American Consul, and there were three or four others of a similar nature, and the Liberal papers are screaming in their criticism of our action. Now, I must say that I loathe and detest the necessity of going into things like that. We are the first Government that was ever condemned for doing it. When the Liberals were in power, even in the days of the bitterest struggles between the parties, we never descended to the trumpery, pettifogging tactics of searching out these little things and prating about them in the streets."

Mr. Holman then read out the list of expenses paid by the last Liberal Government for refreshments. "There is a host of these things," he went on, "all charged up in the public accounts by Liberal Ministers, and quite right too. But nobody ever dreamed of attacking them for it, and I am here to-night to protest against this idea that what is sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander."

Referring to the statement that the Government was wasting money, Mr. Holman said it was quite wrong to say that even the lavish expenditure of public money at such a time as this was not sound or economical. "We have not dismissed any men from their work," he said. "We have kept the wheels of industry going in this State, with the result that unemployment is at a very low ebb here. But if we had followed the advice of our opponents there would by now have been a menacing mass of unemployed stalking throughout the country. Victoria was the one State left with a Liberal Government, and it adopted the other policy, with the result that already 1800 men had been dismissed, and there were many more to follow. That was the inevitable and only result of the stop your public works policy, which his Government had determinedly set its face against." (Cheers.)

SOLDIERS' LETTERS.

WITHHELD FOR MILITARY REASONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

During the past couple of weeks there has been a considerable falling off in the number of letters delivered in Australia from soldiers at the front. The reason for this was explained to-day by the Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce), who stated that the letters had come to Australia all right, but there had been a military reason for withholding them from the addressees for the time being. As there was now no further necessity to detain the correspondence, it was delivered to-day.

OTTAWA FIRE.

MESSAGE FROM CANADA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

On learning of the destruction by fire of the Houses of Parliament at Ottawa, the President of the Senate (Senator Given), and the Speaker of the House of Representatives (Mr. M'Donald), on behalf of the Commonwealth Parliament, cabled a message of sympathy. They have now received the following reply:—"Your telegram of sympathy has been read to the Senate, who request me to convey to you the expression of their deepest gratitude for the kind interest shown to them in the loss they have sustained. (Signed) Phillipe Landry, President of the Senate; Albert Sevigny, Speaker of the House of Commons."

NEWCASTLE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The post-office authorities have decided to omit the Newcastle and country subscribers from the large telephone book, and to supply the Newcastle subscribers with the country book only. By making this alteration, they estimate an annual saving of £770.

COAL TRADE DULL.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The coal exports for the week ended to-day totalled 81,186 tons, as against 114,254 tons for the corresponding period of last year, and 97,811 tons for the second week in February, 1914. The prospect for the coming months are very uncertain. A great deal depends on the shipping available, as well as the continuity of work in the district. The miners have given an assurance under the new agreement that they will not strike, and if the agreement proves the success hoped for some big contracts will be made in the near future.

NEW ZEALAND CENSUS.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

The Cabinet decided to proceed with the taking of the census, probably early next year, instead of April next, which is the termination of the quinquennial period.

MR. HUGHES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

At the last general meeting of the Glenhuntley branch of the Political Labour Council, the following resolution was carried unanimously:—"That this branch of the P.L.C. no longer has any confidence in the Prime Minister, Mr. W. M. Hughes, as a Labour man."

RECRUITING.

ENLISTMENTS.

As a rule recruiting returns generally drop towards the end of each week, and yesterday proved no exception. At the barracks only 43 men were accepted, at the Town Hall 25, while at the Board of Health at night 26 were added, making the day's total 94.

COUNTRY FIGURES.

The following figures of country enlistments from Monday to Thursday have been supplied to the Premier by the military authorities:—Goulburn, 27; Armidale, 20; Narrabri, 5; Dubbo, 31; Cootamundra, 29; Lithgow, 10; Newcastle, 30; West Maitland, 47; Lismore (credited to Queensland), 38. Total, 237.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

During the seven days ending to-day, 87 men volunteered, and of that number 47 were accepted as fit for service. There are now 1021 men in camp.

IN OTHER STATES.

The number of recruits enlisted in Victoria to-day was 234. There were 426 volunteers.

BRISBANE, Friday.

There were only 95 volunteers in Queensland to-day, including 70 from Brisbane, and 77 were accepted for active service. Enlistments to date total 31,775.

PERTH, Friday.

INSPECTION OF TROOPS.

The District Commandant, Colonel A. Ramaciotti, was to have held an inspection of troops in the Outer Domain this afternoon at 4.15. The inspection has been postponed until next Saturday.

RETURNED FROM THE FRONT.

STATE COMMANDANT AT ARMIDALE.

ARMIDALE, Friday.

Colonel Ramaciotti paid a visit to Armidale military camp yesterday, when over 1000 men paraded. The Colonel spent most of the day at the camp, and expressed pleasure at the complete arrangements. He also installed Major C. Richardson, M.C., officer in command of the New England Battalion.

NORTH COAST MEN.

TAREE, Friday.

The North Coast men arrived at Taree yesterday. They had splendid receptions throughout the Manning district. At Kew 24 men volunteered, and 11 were accepted; while 18 offered at Coopernook, and 13 passed. Taree was reached last night at about 5 p.m. A procession went out to meet the marchers at the border of the muncipality, where an arch of welcome had been erected. The Mayor welcomed the men. The men are delighted with their reception en route. They number about 200, and on the march so far have recruited over 500 men, the balance of the number proceeding to camp at convenient times. Mr. H. D. Morton, M.L.A., is endeavouring to arrange for the contingent to go by train from Maitland and march into Sydney, returning to Maitland camp afterwards.

NEW DIVISIONS.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The new scheme for organising the divisions of the new army does not find favour with those engaged in the work of raising recruits in Queensland, and it is understood that a protest has been made against the scheme, on the ground that it will destroy the territorial basis, which has proved so satisfactory, and will exclude Queensland officers from due promotion. It has been pointed out that there was one brigade of four complete battalions in camp, and to break them up would be unfair to the State and disturb recruiting in Queensland.

Mr. George Wall has received a cable from his son, Captain George Wall, who left Sydney with the 3rd Battalion, informing him that he has been promoted major and garrison quartermaster.

The teachers and pupils of the Superior Junior Technical School at Rozelle made a presentation to a member of the staff, Mr. Harold B. Kay, who has enlisted in the Australian Field Artillery. Mr. P. J. Nelligan (headmaster) stated that three members of the staff were now in action, and he was proud to say that scores of the old boys were doing their duty at the front. Mr. Kay was presented with a radium wristlet watch and other gifts.

Captain J. T. Paton, who has been officer commanding No. 2 Auxiliary Hospital, at Blackheath, has been transferred by the military authorities to Armidale.

Gunner Jack Londregan was entertained at Bondi last week. He was presented with a radium wristlet watch by Mr. J. W. Alldis, on behalf of Alldis and Co., Ltd., and J. Frank Cox and Co., Ltd., and with a fountain pen by Mr. Jack Adams on behalf of the staff.

WALGETT, Friday.

The Rev. J. Hannan, Presbyterian minister at Walgett, who has resigned his charge and enlisted as a private, was tendered an enthusiastic send-off on Thursday night, and presented with a purse of sovereigns, subscribed by the Walgett people. Private Hannan, who is a native of Scotland, had seen previous service with a Highland regiment, and at the outbreak of war tried to enlist, but was turned down owing to defective hearing. During his stay in Walgett he became very popular with all classes, and has done good service in the interests of recruiting.

IN EGYPT.

GIFTS FOR THE SOLDIERS.

Mr. H. W. Alderson, one of the members of the Master Builders' Association of N.S.W., who is assisting Mr. T. Henley, M.L.A., in organising the distribution of comforts for the soldiers, writing from Alexandria to a friend in Sydney, says:—"We have had rather a heavy week getting the Christmas gifts away for the Australian boys at the front. Mr. Henley went down to El Dabar, at the rail head on the western frontier (where our boys are fighting the Arabs) with comforts, Christmas cheer for 1000 soldiers, and I believe he had a lively time right out in the desert. He left me in charge here, getting the stuff ready for despatch elsewhere. Christmas Eve we got the transport waggon to take plum puddings, chocolates, and billies for 400 lads out to Medina camp, about six miles out. Henley addressed the lads. Then the goods were given by two Anglo-Egyptian ladies, on behalf of the ladies of Australia, as they marched past. You should have heard the cheers they gave for the ladies of Australia. The boys in the hospital speak well of our nurses, and they deserve it. You should see the work they are putting in, and always smiling and cheering up the lads. There are only the two of us here in Alexandria—Henly and I—and there is no red tape about us. We took it upon ourselves to give the Australian nurses something, and I am sure the people of Australia would never object to our action, if they only knew what brave women they are. If any of your friends want me to see their boys in hospital in Cairo or Heliopolis, send me word—cable or letter—and I will find them."

BARRIER STRIKE.

COURT TO SIT ON MONDAY.

VICTORY FOR ARBITRATION.

The claim of the Broken Hill branch of the Australian Miners' Association for a forty-four hour week will come before the Federal Arbitration Court on Monday, when a motion will be submitted that the hearing of the case be expedited. The Amalgamated Society of Engineers, the Federated Society of Boilermakers and Iron Ship Builders, and the Barrier and Port Pirie branches of the Federated Enginedrivers and Firemen's Association have also been cited to appear on that day.

Mr. Mitchell, the general secretary of the Enginedrivers and Firemen's Association, stated yesterday that it was pleasing to know that the workers at Broken Hill had thought fit to accept the offer made by the Commonwealth Government to intervene on their behalf and to ask the court to give them what the court offered them several weeks ago, a forty-four hour week. It was also gratifying to see that the majority of members of the Sydney Labour Council, representing nearly 200,000 unionists throughout the State, had decided not to carry a motion endorsing the action of the A.M.A., which had chosen the method of strike in preference to that of arbitration in settling its industrial dispute.

"It is only a question of history repeating itself," added Mr. Mitchell, referring to the action of the A.M.A. in taking its case to the court. "In nearly every instance where a strike has taken place it has ended by being settled by some form of arbitration. I am of the opinion that if the Labor Council had passed the motion, which was one to condone the action of the miners' leaders at the Barrier, it would have stultified itself, for it had previously voted in favour of arbitration. Having travelled throughout all the States of the Commonwealth I have met prominent unionists and conversed with them on the matter of arbitration versus strikes to settle disputes, and I am convinced that the vast majority of the workers favour the arbitration method in preference to striking.

"I feel sure that if the members of the Labour Councils at Adelaide and Melbourne had been advised of the true position which led up to the strike at Broken Hill when they took their respective votes there would have been a sufficient majority of delegates at both councils who would not have condoned the action of the men at the Barrier, as was the case with the Sydney Labour Council."

PICKETS WITHDRAWN.

MUNITION WORKS START ON MONDAY.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

Mr. W. D. Barnett, secretary of the A.M.A., announced officially to-day that the strike had been declared off from 1 o'clock this afternoon, when the pickets were withdrawn from the various mines. The news was received very quietly.

A brief statement was also made by the secretary of the Mining Managers' Association, to the effect that the various companies had received instructions from Melbourne to start work under the terms of Senator Pearce's offer—four days per week productive operations.

The several mines to-day issued notifications calling on the men to report and register with departmental heads.

PROCEEDINGS IN THE COURT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A motion was filed to-day in the Commonwealth Arbitration Court on behalf of the Commonwealth Government, that the hearing in the court of the case arising from the dispute between the Broken Hill mineowners and their employees be expedited. The motion has been set down for hearing, and will be called on on Monday morning.

WHEAT TRUCKING.

SHIPPING DELAYS.

The Premier has received from the Railway Commissioners the following reply to statements which have recently appeared concerning the shortage of trucks for handling the wheat harvest:—

"Up to the present the department has been able to bring more wheat forward to the seaboard for shipment and to the local mills than can be dealt with by the consignees. Owing to the lack of shipping freight, the wheat agents have been unable to take full advantage of the resources placed at their disposal by the Deputy Chief Commissioner. One of the largest operating firms stopped loading throughout the country absolutely for the 31st ult., and 1st and 2nd inst., while other agents have also considerably curtailed wheat loading for some time past, owing to their inability to ship the wheat. The flour millers have also experienced difficulty through the profuse supplies of wheat coming forward, and Messrs. Brunton and Co. made a request that no wheat should be accepted for them from the 1st to the 4th inst. inclusive.

"The railway facilities available would permit of the Deputy Chief Commissioner bringing the wheat forward at a much greater rate than he has been called upon to perform, and it is presumed that the comments referred to are the outcome of the fact that so much wheat is stored at country stations, for which no demand has been made for transport."

FISHING INDUSTRY.

PROSPECTS OF NORTH COAST.

KEMPSEY, Friday.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Black (Minister for Health), Mrs. Black, Mr. Stead (Inspector of Fisheries), and Mr. H. D. Morton, M.L.A., visited the Macleay District Hospital. Representatives of various public bodies later laid before the Minister the necessity for a big water scheme for Kempsey district and Lower Macleay for irrigation, domestic, and stock purposes.

Mr. Black, in reply, agreed that a gravitation scheme was advisable. Referring to the Government's fish scheme, he said it was intended to establish a refrigerating depot at Jerseyville, and a distributing station, smokehouse, and canning works later in Kempsey.

Mr. Stead said there was great prosperity in store for the district as regarded the fishing industry, and the species of sprat found in the mouth of these rivers, when tinned, should obviate the necessity for importing sardines. Trawlers could be permanently employed on this coast, and when the railway came along a fish train could be run to the south in connection with the trawlers. The department was spending £3000 per month, and employing 120 men, yet had not asked the Minister for one penny, the receipts paying all expenses.

FACTORY BURNT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A destructive fire occurred at 5 o'clock this morning at the warehouse of Thomas Mitchell and Company, Lonsdale-street, hardware and general brushware merchants. The building, which was of four stories, was swept from top to basement, but a considerable quantity of the goods may be salvaged on account of their non-inflammable nature. The firemen were handicapped by dense smoke, which came from piles of brushware and jute, but they prevented the flames spreading to the adjoining warehouses of James Munday, leather merchant, and John Cooper and Sons, ironmongers, whose stock suffered slightly by water. Mitchell's stock was insured for £17,800, and the building for £6900 in the Norwich Union Company. It is not known how the fire originated.

QUEENSLAND MEAT.

BRISBANE, Friday.

There have been frequent conferences recently between the Premier (Mr. Ryan), the Minister for Lands (Mr. Hunter), and representatives of the meat works. The conferences up to the present have been abortive, and it is understood that both Mr. Ryan and Mr. Hunter have adopted a threatening attitude, hinting at what may be done if the cattle men do not agree to some of their suggestions. It is believed that one of these is that the meat works should guarantee to supply 12,000 tons of meat, at a price considerably below that paid by the Imperial Government, and to hold it to suit the convenience of the Queensland Government. These 12,000 tons of meat are not wanted, it is stated, for British requirements, but for the proposed State butchers' shops. Meanwhile no satisfactory arrangements have been arrived at, either for local or Imperial supply.

SCIENCE INSTITUTE.

PRELIMINARY ARRANGEMENTS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) announced that the following gentlemen had been invited to constitute a preliminary advisory committee for the proposed Institute of Science and Industry:—Interstate Commissioners: Mr. A. B. Piddington, K.C., Chief Commissioner, and Mr. G. Swinburne. Representatives of Universities: Professor C. E. Fawsett and Professor R. D. Watt (N.S.W.), Professor D. O. Masson and Professor T. S. Laby (Victoria), Professor A. J. Gibson (Queensland). Metallurgy: Mr. G. D. Delprat and Mr. J. M. Higgins. Other members, representing science and industry: Professor T. R. Lyle, Mr. W. T. Appleton (president Associated Chambers of Commerce of Australia), Mr. W. W. Forwood (president Associated Chambers of Manufacturers of Australia; Mr. W. P. Wilkinson (Federal Analyst), Mr. W. Russell Grimwade and Dr. Elliott (manufacturing chemists), Mr. J. Winter Irving (pastoral industry), Mr. F. Leverrier, K.C., Mr. F. B. Guthrie (N.S.W. Technical School), Mr. E. A. Mann (Chief Inspector of Explosives and Government Analyst, W.A.), Mr. Donald Clarke (Director of Technical Schools, Vic.). A member from Tasmania has yet to be chosen. The Ministers of Agriculture of the several States are to be ex-officio members, the Prime Minister (and in his absence the Vice-President of the Federal Executive Council) is to be the Chairman of the Preliminary Advisory Council.

It is suggested that the following problems, amongst others, are pressing, and should receive early consideration by the Advisory Council:—The sheep fly pest, improved methods of extracting zinc from Australian ores, including the commercial manufacture of electrolytic zinc; the utilisation of brown coal, with the recovery of by-products; the introduction of a mechanical cotton picker; the eradication of the prickly pear; the production of aluminium and ferro alloys; the recovery of potash; the manufacture of alkali, and the condensation of sulphurous acid which was at present being wasted; the cultivation of useful, indigenous grasses and saltbushes, the manufacture of fine chemicals, drugs, and explosives in connection with investigations directed by the council. It is expected that it will, above all things, take the necessary steps to co-operate with scientific research and experimental work now being carried out by existing institutions, also to direct the efforts of these institutions so as to prevent undesirable overlapping, and to suggest to each the definite lines on which its activities may be most usefully employed.

It is desired also that the Advisory Council will undertake the following work:—(1) Make an assessment and analysis of the existing scientific researches, including the staff, apparatus, and equipment available in departmental, University, technical, and other scientific institutions throughout the Commonwealth. (2) Draw up a classified statement, showing in what respects these institutions are lacking in apparatus and equipment, with a view to their being supplied. When this is ascertained the Government will favourably consider the question of making good the deficiencies.

An executive committee is to be appointed by the Advisory Council, and will give all or nearly all its time to the work. Members of the executive council shall each receive a fee of two guineas for each sitting, and shall be provided with free railway conveyance to and from their homes when travelling in the performance of their duties as members of the executive committee. The total expenditure in respect of fees payable to members of the executive committee is not to exceed £2000 per annum.

It is desired that sub-committees be appointed by the advisory council, consisting of those members of the council who are able to devote any substantial amount of their time to the work. The members of such sectional committees will not receive a fee, but are to be provided with free railway conveyance, and in addition to be reimbursed expenses actually incurred in connection with the performance of their duties, the latter not to exceed 25s per day. Members of the advisory council will not be paid for their services as such, except as provided above.

LIGHT HORSE.

CARNIVAL IN AID OF FUND.

The first general meeting of the committee of the Light Horse Comforts Fund, in connection with the patriotic carnival to be held next month, was held in the boardroom of the Mutual Life and Citizens' Assurance Company, Limited, yesterday afternoon. In the absence of Sir Charles Mackellar the chair was taken by Mr. H. Y. Braddon.

The Premier (Mr. Holman) said that the soldiers were dependent upon the public for many things, which in better organised and older countries were provided by the Government and military authorities. Instead of making a donation to the fund, or making any definite offers of help, he would like, when the affairs were more advanced, for a sort of sub-committee to draw up any proposal the members might think fit, and he would do his best for them.

The chairman outlined the purpose of the carnival. All the money raised would be used for Light Horse comforts; 75 per cent. of the proceeds were to go in comforts for the New South Wales Light Horsemen abroad, and the remaining 25 per cent. was to be devoted to the men of the Light Horse in camp.

An executive committee was then elected as follows:—Messrs. E. H. Eslick, R. L. Baker, E. S. Marks, H. M. Somer, W. C. Bucknall, Crossman, A. R. Mintner, J. J. Smith, Joynton Smith, M.L.C.; the Inspector-General of Police (Mr. Mitchell), Colonel Lenehan, Captain Cooney, Major MacMahon, Lieut.-Col. G. Rourke, Captain Downes, Captain Lowther Crofton, Lieut. Baxter, hon. secretary; Captain Phillips, Captain Bentley, Major Staples, Major Horley, Captain F. Smith, Captain Wilkner, Major MacLane, Lieut.-Col. Jobson, and Lieut.-Col. Jacobs; Mesdames Vernon, Arnott, Hamilton, Marshall, Holdship, Roger Fitzhardinge, and A. Allen.

The following subscriptions were made into the fund during the afternoon:—Mr. D. M'Farland, £25; Ex-Senator J. T. Walker, £5; Mr. R. L. Baker, £5; Mr. H. Y. Braddon, £5; Mr. Eslick, £5; Mr. Bucknall, £5; Mr. J. J. Smith, £5; and Mr. C. R. Crossman, £5.

The carnival will commence at the Stadium on the night of March 10, and will be continued next day at the Agricultural Ground.

HOSPITAL CARNIVAL.

POLICE AND FIREMEN'S EFFORT.

Sergeant C. T. Ferguson, the honorary secretary of the police and firemen's carnival and art union, to be held on February 26, has received the following letter from the boards of the various hospitals:—

"We, the undersigned, have been requested by our respective boards to convey to the committee of the police and firemen's hospital carnival, an expression of their grateful thanks for the kindly thought which prompted the organisation of this function in aid of the hospitals of this State. It must be known to all classes of the community that the public hospitals of this State have suffered considerably owing to a large percentage of revenue usually received by them being diverted to the various war funds now in existence. The hospital authorities do not complain, and feel that the claims made by these patriotic funds are justified by the immediate needs, but they would point out that there is a responsibility which the generous-hearted public has for a time at any rate forgotten; that is, of the necessity of continuing to support the hospitals in their endeavour to assist in the alleviation of suffering in our midst—of helping sick children who cannot help themselves, and who in time have to take the places in our civic life of those brave men who are now being sacrificed for the nation's honour—of caring for the fathers, mothers, sisters, and brothers our soldier heroes have left behind them, and in every way of helping to conserve the life in our midst which our nation can ill-afford to lose.

"We are all deeply sensible of the public-spirited generosity of the police and firemen, and all their splendid help in connection with the various war funds, and it is pleasing to know that their public spirit is broadminded enough to realise the needs in our midst, and their effort on behalf of our local hospitals will not be considered one whit less patriotic than their previous efforts.

"Trusting that the carnival will be the means of raising a very substantial amount for the hospitals, and wishing the function the success it deserves.

"We are, on behalf of our respective boards, William Epps, secretary Prince Alfred Hospital; A. G. Golledge, Acting Secretary Sydney Hospital; Clarence R. Moss, Secretary Children's Hospital; Arthur C. Russell, secretary North Shore Hospital."

Entries for the athletic events for amateur members of the Police and Fire Brigades Association will close to-day with Sergeant C. T. Ferguson, the honorary secretary, at the police department, Hunter and Phillip-streets.

IS HE INSANE?

CASE OF W. J. CHIDLEY.

"A CULTURED MAN."

The inquiry into the question of the sanity of William James Chidley was continued at the Reception House, Darlinghurst, yesterday, before Mr. J. M'Kensey, S.M., Mr. J. W. Abigail appeared for Chidley, and Mr. Bathgate for the Crown.

Mr. Abigail raised the point that, as Chidley when arrested was following his ordinary vocation, in no sense could he be said to be "wandering at large," as specified in the charge. Mr. M'Kensey overruled the objection.

Dr. Arthur Aubrey Palmer, first Government Medical Officer at Sydney, deposed that he had special experience in mental diseases. He saw Chidley last week. He thought Chidley insane, and had been of that opinion for a long time. He was a proper person to be taken charge of and given care and treatment in a hospital for the insane. He suffered from a chronic systematised delusion, which coloured his whole life and affected his judgment. His delusion was that he had made a great discovery, which was the great discovery of the world, and that it answered all the unanswered problems of ethics and philosophy, which if adopted would abolish all crime, sin, insanity, disease, and war. His form of insanity was known as paranoia, which is a very dangerous form of lunacy, and difficult to cure. Witness had a lot of conversations with Chidley when he was under restraint. He was certainly a conscientious man, and thought he was doing good.

John le Gay Brereton, librarian at the Sydney University, said that he had a number of conversations with Chidley about his book, of which he gave a very succinct and intelligent account. Witness did not discover any insanity or impaired intellect on his part. He always spoke reasonably and logically. Chidley's book was deposited in the University, in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright Act.

Dr. Robert Lee Brown, visiting surgeon at Long Bay Penitentiary, stated that he had been practising 23 years. He had a fair amount of experience with insane patients. At Long Bay Chidley was twice under observation. Witness, from his own experience and conversation with Chidley, had found him perfectly right and perfectly sane, rational, and intelligent. He did not discover any symptoms of paranoia.

To Mr. Bathgate: He did not agree with a great deal in Chidley's book. Assuming that the patient were so absorbed in the book as to allow it to colour his whole life, witness would say that he was suffering from paranoia.

To Mr. Abigail: From his knowledge of Chidley personally, witness would not say that he was a paranoic, but from reading his book he would say he was one.

Mrs. Emily Letitia Paul said that she hoped she was a broad-minded woman. She had studied art and travelled, and was a rationalist. She did not consider persons to be rational who wore coats and vests in this climate. She did not think that Chidley's book coloured his whole life. He realised that there was a great deal to be done in the direction in which he was working.

CHIDLEY EXAMINED.

Everyone in the Court-room was interested, if not excited, when Chidley, garbed in his well-known neck-to-knee costume began his statement. And he seemed to be the least perturbed man in the court—"serene and calm and still and self-possessed." So he remained all the time he was giving his evidence, which occupied over an hour. When his depositions were read by the clerk, he pointed out several things which conveyed a different impression from what he had intended; and he seemed to be letter perfect in every sentence of his evidence.

He began his statement by saying that there were five editions of his book; the last one having been officially submitted, either to Mr. Hall or to Mr. Black. He had been wearing his present style of costume about four years in Sydney. When in Melbourne, he had worn similar costume. He wore it, because he advocated it in his book, and because it kept him in better health. The newspapers would not accept his advertisements, so that the only way he had of selling his book was to go round the streets in the costume. He wore the costume so that he might practise what he preached. He objected to being examined by Dr. Chisholm Ross and Dr. Cahill, because they had sent him to Callan Park, and they were likely to be prejudiced. About two years ago, he was discharged, after seven weeks' detention, on condition that he kept quiet and wore ordinary costume. He conformed to this condition for two months. There was no time limit expressed in the bond. Twenty-eight years ago he was stricken with consumption, and Dr. Gardiner sounded his lungs and gave him two years to live. The reason why witness had to go into the Domain was because he could not rent halls. His relations with Drs. Ross and Cahill were anything but friendly. Dr. Cahill had very seldom spoken to him. Dr. Palmer never examined him for insanity, and Dr. Cahill never conversed with him, he just looked at him.

Referring to his arrest by Sergeant Robertson on January 28 in George-street, witness said to the crowd:—"This man is arresting me illegally; he admits that he has no warrant, and he won't even tell me what he is arresting me for." Robertson then said, "I arrest you for lunacy." Chidley said, "They are springing this silly business on me, are they?" The reason witness tried to destroy the addressed envelope at No. 3 Station was because he did not want a lady's name dragged into these court proceedings. At the time he was arrested he was on his usual day's routine. He was selling his book. He had several places of business to call at; he had a letter to post, and a typewriter to see, and he had to get his lunch. The present was the third time he had been brought up for medical examination. He had been discharged, as the doctors refused to certify as to his insanity. His book was an important philosophical work.

To Mr. Bathgate: He had been a student all his life. Before starting his present work he had been a draughtsman and a portrait drawer. He was afraid of getting his second edition destroyed in Melbourne, and he came to Sydney, thinking that he would get a fair hearing.

When asked if he had had a fair deal here, Chidley ironically replied, "Yes; if passing most of my time in gaols and in asylums is having a fair time and fair deal."

Witness went on to say that Dr. Palmer had said to Dr. Paton that he thought "Chidley was mad on his book." "They all," said witness, "think I am mad on my theory, without going into the matter." Continuing, he said he was interested in poetry and philosophy, ethics, physiology, literature generally, and in the arts and painting; also in surf-bathing and swimming, athletics and boxing. He went bathing or swimming every day. He had devoted his life to the promulgation of his work for the good of humanity.

MR. MEREDITH ATKINSON'S OPINION.

Meredith Atkinson, M.A., of the Oxford University, said that he was now director of the tutorial classes at the Sydney University. He had taken his degrees with honours in sociology. He had known Chidley for about 18 months, and had conversed and corresponded with him. Besides his book, he had also discussed music and art with him. Chidley was a man of above the average intelligence; a cultured man, and a close student of the subjects which he had discussed. He had rationally and reasonably entered into discussions with witness. Some of witness's students were friends of Chidley, and held him in esteem. Chidley was not particularly egotistical or self-assertive. He was keen about his propaganda, but otherwise his ego was not overdeveloped. The general influence of his book, in point of social science, would be in the direction of inducing greater moral restraint among the people.

The inquiry was adjourned till Monday next at 2 p.m.

NORTH SHORE GAS.

RATE OF INCREASE LESSENED.

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS CRITICISED.

The annual meeting of shareholders of the North Shore Gas Company was held yesterday. Mr. P. T. Taylor, in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, particulars of which have already appeared, said that owing to the addition of 4d per 1000 cubic feet to the price of gas and to some economies in the works effected, the company had been enabled to make a profit sufficient to pay the rate of dividend recommended; but in other respects the condition was not so satisfactory. Instead of the rate of increase being, as in former years, from 12 per cent. to 15 per cent., it had fallen to 3.61 per cent., and there were indications that during the present year the output of gas would not be as much as that of last year. The Sydney Municipal Council was making preparations to supply electricity for light and power purposes on North Shore, but it was not anticipated that the effect of this opposition would be serious, as the quantity of gas used for domestic lighting in the better-class houses was small when compared with that used for other purposes, such as cooking and heating. A contract had been made by the company with the North Sydney Council to light that municipality by inverted incandescent burners for a further term of five years from the 1st January, 1916. The lamps will be lit and extinguished by clock-work controllers. It was expected that the installation of electricity in Lane Cove and Willoughby would have been completed by the end of last year, but the necessary plant not coming to hand these councils asked the company for an extension of their agreements. These requests the company granted at the former prices.

With a view of assisting the dependents of those men who have enlisted, the board decided to make up the difference between the pay of married employees going to the front, and the allowance they receive as soldiers. During the last six months the sum of £111 had been disbursed in this way. About 90 men, including six from the office staff, had joined the colours. A donation of £100 was forwarded by the company to the "Australia Day" Fund. The industrial agreement with the Gas Employees' Union and the wages board award having expired, the wages board was now considering claims by the employees for another increase in wages. These claims include an advance of at least 6d per day per man, payment for a fortnight's holiday and public holidays, in all 24 holidays per year on full pay, and time and a half for work performed between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. There are other claims—heat money, dirt money, wet money, and height money. It was felt that the time had come when demands for further increase in wages, and shorter working hours, could not be conceded, unless there were created conditions which would inevitably lead to a financial and industrial crisis. There had been an increase of 815 consumers during the year. The total number was now 17,525. Of these 14,264 used gas through ordinary, and 3261 through prepayment meters. There had been an increase of 18 street lamps for the year, making the total number of lamps at present erected 2078. The total output of gas during the year was 724,482,794 cubic feet—an increase of 3.61 per cent. over the previous year.

The motion was carried.

Mr. James W. Watt was re-elected a director, Messrs. J. M. Dixon, F.C.P.A., and W. E. Booth, F.C.P.A., were appointed auditors.

SPORT AND THE WAR.

CRICKET OVAL IDLE.

The Central Cumberland Electorate Cricket Club, which has over 30 members at the front, applied to the Parramatta Park Trust, asking that body to forgo the rent of the ground. The park trust refused the application, and it is now proposed to ask the Government to resume the oval and dedicate it as a sports ground, with the municipal council as trustees. The club has decided to forward its cricket material to the late secretary, Private R. C. Coogan, for the use of the boys at the front.

GERMANS IN TONGA.

SUPPLIES FROM SYDNEY.

IMPERIAL AUTHORITIES NOTIFIED.

The question of trading with Germans in Tonga is still occupying attention in New Zealand, according to advices received by the R.M.S. Niagara last night.

Dr. Pomare, who is well acquainted with the islands, stated in an interview recently that the New Zealand Government had done all that was in its power, and that there was only one effective measure to be employed, and that was within the reach of the commercial community of Australia and New Zealand.

"Many people blame the Government of New Zealand," said Dr. Pomare, "for not taking action in regard to the trading by Germans in these islands. As a matter of fact, the New Zealand Government cannot interfere in any way. All it can do is to advise the British authorities that there is such a thing as German trading in these islands. That it has already done. The quickest way to stop Germans trading in Tonga is for the merchants of New Zealand and of Australia to stop sending goods to the Germans in Tonga to trade with. Speaking from personal observations in Tonga, I know that merchandise of all kinds used to go from New Zealand and Australia to the German traders. I do not know whether any Auckland merchants are still supplying goods to Tonga, as the alteration in the steamer services gave the Sydney shippers an advantage in the freights."

These remarks called forth a reply from Mr. E. Anderson, president of the Auckland Chamber of Commerce:—

Apparently the views held by Dr. Pomare do not agree with those expressed by the Prime Minister on this subject," said Mr. Anderson. "New Zealand merchants would welcome any restriction of German trade in Tonga, but they wish this restriction to apply to other countries as well as to New Zealand. The fact that both the Auckland and the Sydney Chambers of Commerce have taken this matter up is proof that the merchants in both cities are ready to have the trade restricted. But it would be sheer madness to allow our island trade, which has been built up only by many years of strenuous exertions, to be snapped up by enterprising neutrals. The position of the New Zealand Government in the matter is perfectly understood, and all our representations have been made with a view to persuading it to ask the Imperial authorities to end the present unsatisfactory state of affairs.

"However, the matter has been discussed ad nauseam, and as it has been referred to the Imperial authorities, we must await their decision with whatever degree of patience we may possess."

TOWN-PLANNING ASSOCIATION.

At the annual meeting of the Town Planning Association last evening the following officers were elected:—President, Mr. John Sulman, F.R.I.B.A.; vice-presidents, Messrs. R. Stanton and G. A. Taylor; council, Messrs. J. J. C. Bradfield, J. W. Bragg, A. R. Bluett, J. R. Clamp, E. H. Cowdery, H. H. Dare, J. Garlick, W. B. Griffin, F. F. Hall, H. F. Halloran, G. Sydney Jones, J. Leitch, W. Lister Lister, E. Milner Stephen, J. H. Maiden, W. H. Myers, A. Spain, F. E. Stowe, W. Williamson, and Wells; hon. treasurer, W. De Putron; hon. secretary, W. Scott-Griffiths.

The annual report referred to the fact of town-planning schemes having been gratuitously prepared for Manly and Vaucluse. Three schemes for new radial roads had been discussed, a site had been selected for a noxious trades area, and a scheme for a civic centre (prepared by the president) was under consideration. A practical scheme of co-partnership housing had been considered, but under present financial conditions it was not thought politic to make it public.

At the conclusion of the business of the meeting Mr. W. H. Myers, B.E., a member of the council, read a paper on "The Application of Electricity to Town Planning."

FOR ST. VALENTINE.

My Khaki lad is far away
In the Empire's firing line,
But I've sent him a bolt from Cupid's bow,
My heart, in a Valentine.

I pointed the shaft with Australia's words,
The words of many, and mine.
"All of my heart is with my boy,
"To-day, in the firing line."

Time is short when the shooting's quick,
Yet I know he'll read the sign,
And charge for St. Valentine.

SOUTH COAST MINES.

EXTENSIVE DEVELOPMENTS.

RAPID RISE OF A COLLIERY.

(FROM OUR OWN REPORTER.)

All the collieries on the coast have been busily engaged since the commencement of the year, and there is a keen demand for coal. The success of any great industry, however, largely depends upon a suitable and convenient outlet. In regard to the South Coast, it is admittedly a great coal-producing centre, and the strides made during the past few years have been most remarkable. The mountains abound in rich seams of coal, and, judging by the development work being carried out at nearly all the collieries, the proprietors are fully satisfied there is a very bright future for the trade. The coke industry is also expanding rapidly, with the result that the main difficulty is to get the output away in time to meet all requirements. The railway is fully taxed, and what is really needed is a harbour to relieve the congestion. Nature has provided a splendid site at Port Kembla, and although the work of constructing suitable breakwaters was commenced many years ago, the progress has been very slow, when the importance of the work is taken into consideration.

Electricity is playing an important part in the development of the collieries on the South Coast, and this power is fast superseding steam. It is already in existence for haulage, ventilation, coal-cutting, and other purposes at a number of the collieries. Not so many years ago practically all miners on the coast worked with the open flare lights. After the Mount Kembla disaster oil safety lamps were used, and now it is proposed to go one better with the introduction of electric lamps. The conditions for the men, therefore, have greatly improved, as immunity from accidents could not be expected to continue with the use of naked lights in collieries where firedamp was sometimes found, and where the conditions as to dust favoured the extension of an explosion throughout the workings in the event of a small ignition of firedamp taking place.

In the way of improvements to increase the output it may be mentioned that at Mount Kembla new haulage roads and additional bendings have been opened up. At Mount Pleasant the new electric plant nearing completion is expected to double the present output. A new section was recently opened at Mount Keira to provide for additional miners. Corrimal and South Bulli are already splendidly equipped electrically, and extensive improvements generally are being carried out at the mine at Bulli. North Bulli colliery is improving rapidly. A number of new working places in this mine have been recently opened, and the output has increased to 1000 tons daily where only a few years ago it was 500. South Clifton is one of the oldest mines on the coast, and in connection with this colliery a tunnel mine is being developed. Coalcliff mine is splendidly equipped with all the latest machinery, and the general layout of this colliery is considered to be equal to anything of its kind in the State. The Metropolitan at Helensburgh is a colliery that is noted for the up-to-dateness of its plant. The mine that has made the most rapid progress is that of the Excelsior at Thirroul. Some nine years ago this colliery was only producing about 14 tons of coal daily. The miner's pay was then about £20 per fortnight. At the end of last year the fortnightly pay totalled over £1700, the present output being from 750 to 850 tons daily.

In connection with this mine there are two tunnels. Each tunnel has been worked in a distance of about three quarters of a mile. The seam being operated upon is that known as the Bulli seam, practically the only one worked throughout the whole district. The coal has proved of excellent quality especially for steaming purposes. There are no bands in either of the tunnels now being driven, and on the whole very little foreign matter is met with. The height of the seam varies from 4ft to 6ft, and the area of coal-bearing land leased is about 2000 acres. At the present rate of output it is estimated that coal will be available for the next fifty years. From the interior a new connecting tunnel is being driven out to the surface for the purpose of bringing all the main haulage through. An electrically driven fan is to be installed to drive in up to 100,000 cubic feet of air per minute. Lately some difficulty has been found in dealing with the water soakage trouble. This has now been overcome by the installation of two pumps, capable of removing over 5000 gallons of water per hour.

The improvements which the railway authorities are at present carrying into effect by duplicating the main South Coast railway line and providing more accommodation at the loading screens will materially assist in the matter of quick despatch. There will be three lines capable of storing upwards of 1000 tons of coal. The employees total 260, of whom 160 are miners.

Most of the collieries on the coast at the present time are inconvenienced as a result of the shortage of wheelers, which since the recent stoppage of work has become even more pronounced. It is estimated that some hundreds of wheelers have left the district during the past few months, the majority having gone to the war.

GOOD COASTAL RAINS.

VERY DRY INLAND.

GALES AND ROUGH SEAS.

Coastal and highland rains continue in eastern New South Wales, light to heavy falls being reported yesterday morning from the coastal parts and also the southern tablelands, and one or two places on the south-west slopes of New South Wales.

Many substantial amounts were included in the totals. Robertson, in the Sydney water supply catchment area, received 215 points; Bateman's Bay 189 points, Woolgoolga 142 points, Nimitybelle 124 points, and Braidwood 120 points.

The recent rainfall was produced by the southerly winds, now sweeping the seaboard of New South Wales. The wind has attained moderate gale force on parts of the central and South Coast, and considerable sea disturbance has resulted.

In Sydney 26 points of rain occurred during the 24 hours preceding 9 a.m. yesterday; the heaviest showers in the city being experienced shortly after 7 a.m.—17 points of rain falling in about 20 minutes. The metropolitan rainfall this year, however, though greater than during the corresponding period of 1915, is still substantially below the average.

The latest reports received last night showed that strong south-easterly winds and rough seas were being experienced along practically the whole coast of New South Wales, and also that unsettled, cloudy weather, with showers, continued over the coastal and highland districts. Inland, however, though in parts cloudy, the weather is almost generally fine and dry, and little, if any, rain is expected west of the Mountains.

In Sydney yesterday a series of light showers between 9 a.m. and 9.30 p.m. resulted in 10 points of rain being registered.

Immediate prospects favour a continuance of strong squally winds, reaching gale force at places along the coast, and causing rough seas. Further light to heavy showers are likely on and east of the mountains, and also in the north-east quarter.

VESSELS SHELTERING.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The North Coast Co.'s steamer Coolebar, bound from the Tweed to Sydney, put into the port this afternoon on account of the heavy sea. The steamers Murray and Audrey D., which left this morning for Sydney, returned, owing to the rough weather.

The schooner Cavan, in tow of the steamer Pelaw Main, left the port early this afternoon for Sydney, but, owing to the rough sea, had to return. Later the Pelaw Main made her departure for Sydney.

SHELLHARBOUR.—Squally weather from the south set in on Thursday afternoon, accompanied by light showers of rain. Up to 5 o'clock on Friday 55 points has been registered. A heavy sea is running.

SINGLETON.—Steady soaking showers have fallen, and it is still raining. Locally 50 points were recorded, but at St. Clair there were 114 points, at Sedgefield 100, and at Carrowbrook 95. The fall is welcomed, as matters in connection with dairying and agricultural pursuits had assumed a serious outlook.

TROUBLE BETWEEN UNIONS.

BRISBANE, Friday.

A Trades Hall quarrel was the subject of a deputation to the Minister for Lands (Mr. Hunter) to-day. Representations were made to the Minister some time ago by the Australian Building Industry Employees' Union that the Trades Hall board would not allow it to conduct its business and meetings at the hall. Representatives of the board stated to-day that the complainant union was not a bona-fide body, but one consisting of persons who had broken away from the existing building trade unions in Brisbane, on quite indefensible grounds. Mr. Hunter said he would look into the legal aspect of the matter.

TWO BOYS DROWNED.

NURSE'S GALLANT ACTION.

CASINO, Friday.

Yesterday afternoon a drowning fatality occurred at Rappville. Two boys, Keith M'Kenzie Readman, 11, and Thomas Murray, 9, went, in company with Nurse Newcom, to a water hole known as Rapps. They were playing on a log, when it floated out into the stream, and they fell into the water.

Neither of the boys could swim, and Miss Newcom, seeing they were in difficulties, jumped in fully dressed, and got hold of both boys, who clung to her, pulling her under. She was almost exhausted, when a boy named Norman M'Donald, of Clearfield, rushed in and rescued her. Meantime the two lads had disappeared. Several people dived after the boys, but when the bodies were recovered life was extinct.

CASUALTIES.

BABY GIRL FATALLY BURNED.

After being burnt while playing in the back yard of 65 Belmore-street, St. Peters, on January 26, Edna Winifred Meech, aged 2 years, died at the Marrickville Cottage Hospital on Wednesday morning.

BOY INJURED WITH STONE.

A boy named Frederick Marrs, aged 9 years, was admitted to the Sydney Hospital on Thursday suffering from concussion of the brain. The police report sets out that he was struck on the head by a stone thrown by another nine-year-old boy.

KILLED BY A TRAM.

A middle-aged woman named Lizzie Hayes, was knocked down by a tram in Oxford-street on Thursday. The Civil Ambulance took her to Sydney Hospital, where life was pronounced extinct.

SOLDIER'S FATAL FALL.

The City Coroner, Mr. H. S. Hawkins, held an inquiry yesterday into the death of Henry Carvall, about 52 years of age, a sapper in the Western Australian Miners' Battalion, lately encamped at Casula. The man was found lying badly injured outside Mount Lachlan Hotel, Waterloo, about 1.30 a.m. on February 2, after having retired to his room at the hotel about 10.45 on the previous night. A verdict of accidental death was recorded.

WOMAN'S DEATH.

A magisterial inquiry into the death of Margaret Hackett, 55 years of age, lately residing at 20 Glebe-road, Glebe, was held yesterday. The City Coroner, Mr. H. S. Hawkins, found that she died on February 2, from the effects of poison administered by herself, at her late residence, but whether accidentally or otherwise, the evidence did not enable him to say.

MAN HANGS HIMSELF.

A verdict of suicide was returned by the City Coroner, Mr. H. S. Hawkins, yesterday in connection with the death of Frank Biun, 53 years of age, a man of German descent, lately living at 105 Fig-street, city. He was found dead on January 31, hanging, with a clothes line round his neck, in his bedroom at his late address.

WHARF-LABOURER INJURED.

A wharf-labourer, named Frank Sport, 30 years of age, living in Barcom-avenue, Darlinghurst, had his left leg fractured while working at the wheat wharf, Darling Island, about half-past 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Civil Ambulance conveyed him to Sydney Hospital, where he was admitted.

SIGNALMAN'S DEATH.

WEST MAITLAND, Friday.

On Wednesday night a signalman named John Meehan, 28, was on duty at the East Greta signal cabin, and after being relieved at midnight left to go to his home in Maitland. Next morning at 5.30 he was found unconscious under the railway bridge, about 100 yards from the signal cabin. Apparently he was walking across the bridge and fell through the opening on to the solid concrete below, a distance of about 15 feet. He was removed to the hospital in a serious condition, and died without regaining consciousness. Deceased leaves a widow and two young children.

FATAL DRAY ACCIDENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

An elderly man, named William Selby, was driving a dray through the street, when the winkers came off, and the horse bolted. The dray turned over on Selby, who was badly injured. He was then taken to the Armidale Hospital, where an operation was performed, but the man died this afternoon.

NORTHCOTE CUP.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

This afternoon the first heat for the Northcote Cup, the championship race for six-metre boats, was sailed over a course three miles to windward and back, twice—12 miles. The starting and finishing line was off the Gellibrand Pile Light.

The competitors were:—C. A. Hack's Killara, which won the Cup last year in Sydney, and defended on behalf of the St. Kilda Yacht Club, and W. S. Dagg's The Rip, which challenged on behalf of the Royal Yachting Club of Victoria. The Killara had Mr. V. Parker as her skipper, and he had with him Messrs. R. Atkinson and W. Clark as his crew. Mr. J. D. Douglas was in charge of The Rip, and had Messrs. W. S. Dagg and W. T. Hogg with him. There was a good fresh southerly breeze. The Rip held the better wind, and after getting the worst of the start was 15s ahead at the first time of rounding the windward mark. After that she gradually increased her lead, and eventually won by 1m 53s.

The second heat will be sailed to-morrow over a square course off St. Kilda Pier.

FRENCH'S FOREST.

"A poultry farmer who wishes to remain anonymous, has given 2400 chickens in the form of 60 pure bred white leghorn chickens for the first forty farms to be utilised in connection with the Voluntary Workers' Association," said Mr. George Fitzpatrick, honorary organising secretary, yesterday. The donor also offers a number of incubators and foster-mothers. The typists of Sydney are being organised by Miss Clare Tindall and Miss Elsa Hales, and it is proposed that every typist in Sydney shall give one fowl or its equivalent to returned soldiers or the widow of a man who has fallen so it would seem that the returned men are to be well started in the poultry business. Dr. Arthur would be glad to hear of any one who will help a soldier to start on a bee farm.

In addition to the very practical interest the Governor has evinced in the scheme, the Lord Mayor (Alderman Meagher), the Premier (Mr. Holman), and the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. C. G. Wade), have also been elected patrons. Mr. Layton, Deputy Town Clerk, has also accepted a position. The next meeting of the committee will be held on Thursday, when the Governor will preside.

Motor lorries and motor cars to convey workers to the ground will leave to-day at 11, 12.35, 1.35, and 2.15, from junction of Manly and French's Forest-roads—a church is on one corner, telephone and school house on the other. If voluntary aids take the tram to the Spit, cross over on punt and get into tram at Manly side, ride to top of hill—penny section—the tram conductor will direct workers to where the motors are waiting about 150 yards away. Motors will leave French's Forest at 5 o'clock.

WATERSIDE WORKERS.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

As a result of a conference between representatives of the Waterside Workers and the employers increases in wages have been granted to the men in Wellington which will mean an increased payment of £70,000 per year.

THIEVING AT LIVERPOOL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The letter which appeared in Tuesday's "Herald" under the above heading prompts me to give my own experience. I am a member of Carmichael's 1000, and arrived here on the 5th January. About four days after my arrival, while on picket duty at Liverpool, my military overcoat was stolen from the hut in which I am quartered. On reporting the matter to the O.C., he stated the usual practice in such cases was that the victim of the theft should appropriate a similar article from someone else. Needless to say, the suggestion was not acted on. That is over a month ago, and, although I have made repeated applications for a new coat, I have not yet received one. While the men are on parade, the huts containing their property are left unprotected, consequently pilfering is wholesale, which is well known to the staff, but they do nothing to remedy it.

I am, etc., OVERCOAT.

H.M.A.S. PARRAMATTA.

GIFTS FROM AUSTRALIA.

SAILORS' APPRECIATION.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The following letter, dated January 2, has been received by Chaplain Hudson, of the Naval Depot, Williamstown, from Lieutenant Commander Warren, of H.M.A.S. Parramatta:—

"The Christmas gifts arrived on board yesterday. I don't know how we can sufficiently thank you and all the kind friends who sent them. I only wish you could all have been here to see how much they were appreciated, as were the kind thoughts that they conveyed. We felt as if we had all received a wireless message saying, 'Cheer oh; we have not forgotten you.' Being a [illegible] afternoon, everything was laid out on the forecastle head, divided up in lots, and then drawn for. I read your letter to the ship's company, and we gave three hearty cheers for the ladies of Australia. The stocking-opening business caused immense excitement and amusement, and the din when all the whistles were brought into play you can imagine. We have been at sea for some time, and only received our first mail for three months yesterday. With the arrival of that and the presents yesterday was indeed a red letter day. Will you please convey to the kind donors the heartiest thanks of all the 'Parramattas,' and our very best wishes for 1916."

ENGLISH BILLIARDS.

LONDON, Feb. 11.

A well-attended meeting of the Adult Deaf and Dumb Society was held in the society's rooms, Protestant Hall. Mr. P. Forbes, chairman of the deaf mute committee, presided. The deaf mutes annual balance-sheet, showing a credit balance for the year, was received and adopted. The balance-sheet of the bazaar recently held in aid of our wounded soldiers showed a balance of £79 1s, which has been deposited for the time being in the Government Savings Bank in the names of three trustees, viz., Mr. T. S. Hooper, Rev. F. Barclay, and Alderman G. T. Clarke. The election of office-bearers for the deaf mute committee resulted as follows:—Chairman, Mr. P. Forbes; vice-chairman, Mr. F. S. Booth; hon. secretary, Mr. S. Phillips; joint treasurers, Messrs. Brennan and Burgess; hon. lay reader, Mr. F. T. Booth; committee, Messrs. S. Winn, D. Rankin, W. Molloy, Emerson, M'Nevin, Morehouse, Fairweather, Beswick, Graham, and Arthur. Representatives to the board of management, Messrs. F. T. Booth, D. Rankin, and S. Phillips.

POSED AS RETURNED SOLDIER.

BRISBANE, Friday.

George Day, alias Long, 37, a labourer, was charged, in the City Police Court to-day, with being an idle and disorderly person, and with having no lawful means of support. It was said that defendant went about town pretending that he was a returned soldier. He went up to the pickets and told them he was a deserter, and he got them to arrest him. Defendant had been in camp, but was discharged about seven weeks ago. He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

SINKING FUNDS.

WHERE EXPERTS DIFFER.

INTERESTING ANALOGY.

The report of the Tasmanian Royal Commission on sinking funds affords a curious illustration of how markedly it is possible for experts to disagree. Witnesses were examined in Sydney and elsewhere, orally and in writing. Treasury officials, Commonwealth and State, bankers, University professors, public accountants, business men, and journalists each added their quota to the stock of knowledge upon this somewhat intricate problem of sinking funds as applied to public finance. About one thing they were all in striking agreement. They all concluded that what the Tasmanian Government had been doing was distinctly wrong and mischievous. On that point there was no difference of opinion. In most other respects there was but little unanimity. Some portion of the differences was due to the confusion of thought arising from the absence of proper definitions of terms. What is a sinking fund? Are redemption funds and sinking funds one and the same thing? Two terms are used in statutes as though they were synonymous. A part of the divergence of opinion was due to the different points of view of the witnesses. The Treasury official regarded the matter just as a Treasury official might be expected to do. The banker did not forget that he was a banker, the accountant that he was an accountant. The professor remembered that there were authorities, the man of business remembered that he was a man of business and not a banker, a professor, or an accountant. Each looked at the subject from his own point of view. In the result a mass of interesting information was gathered, and if the last word has not yet been said the report will at least clear away many misconceptions.

Most of the witnesses merely answered the questions that were put to them. Mr. H. Y. Braddon, of this city, did more. He wandered along a speculative path of his own creation, where he painted a picture that should endure. The analogy he drew between the position of a State sinking fund and the operations and the various accounts of an ordinary joint stock company was exceedingly interesting. Space forbids our telling the tale in full, but here is a fair condensation, preserving as far as possible Mr. Braddon's own words:—

"I accept it as axiomatic that the Government of a country is just a big business, and that if it were possible—how far it is not possible I am not in a position to say—those broad principles which are salutary in the case of business undertakings should apply in the case of Governments, if you can fairly apply the analogies. When you consider a big private concern in the light of those funds, which, roughly, are in the nature of a sinking fund and which it would regard itself beholden to provide, the position would present itself somewhat as follows:—Many big concerns start with a goodwill item, and some with a preliminary expenses item. Those figure on the asset side of their balance-sheet, but of course they are not sound or true assets. In the case of a business concern those items would be paid off as quickly as possible, ex profits. It would not be a question of establishing a sinking fund. They would get rid of them as quickly as possible. Then there are other assets of a vanishing or reducing character, incidental either to wear and tear, or effluxion of time. Take buildings for example. If the concern owned its buildings, or its buildings and the sites, they would merely depreciate the buildings. They would write off a reasonable amount for depreciation. If, on the contrary, those buildings were on leased lands, which would ultimately revert to the landlord, you get the first instance in that business where you would necessarily have a sinking fund. Plant, of course, would be subject merely to depreciation. Is there any analogy for that particular type of interest in connection with Governments? In the case of buildings on leased lands, at the end of 20 or 30 years it may be you lose the buildings. Therefore, in a sound concern, you have to write that item off. You cannot do anything else, and you must have a fund gradually accumulating to enable you to do that.

"Applying these true principles as far as one can to the Government of the country, are there to be found any plain and direct analogies? A Government spends a fairly considerable sum per annum out of revenue upon the upkeep of the machinery of government. It spends another sum which we roughly call loan expenditure on what should be reproductive works. There, of course, you strike at once the necessity of a classification. Educational buildings, are they reproductive or not? Personally I should say that they are reproductive, not immediately, perhaps, but in the future, in the added skill and brain power of the community. But any way you take it we know there is not on the part of a Government—I am not speaking of the Tasmanian or New South Wales Governments particularly, but of Governments generally—quite the close supervision and the close management that there usually is in private concerns. There is bound to be some unproductive expenditure. What the percentage of that would be I do not know. I have no means of judging. Now, the ordinary expenditure which is reproductive, can it reasonably be said that that needs any sinking fund at all. Personally I do not see where you particularly require the sinking fund, except for a State consideration, which I will touch upon later. A business would not attempt to repay its ordinary capital reproductively employed. That is not its idea. Its capital is furnished by a number of shareholders and debenture holders, and it returns a certain fixed rate of interest on the debentures. If the concern is properly regulated and run the presumption is that it is making more out of the use of that capital than the rate of interest it is paying to its share and debenture holders. That capital a business concern is not required to repay. In the same way Government expenditure that is reproductive from that same point of view, if it is a true analogy, does not require a sinking fund at all. Coming back to the more general consideration, there is a proportion, whatever it may be, of Government expenditure that will not be reproductive. There is, in addition, a certain wastage of expenditure due to the fact that the Government pays a little more for service rendered than a private concern. Whether that part should or should not be covered by a sinking fund is questionable. Personally, I think you are on more solid ground in favour of a sinking fund if it is worth while making such provision for that relatively small proportion of a Government's expenditure. Any business man, if he were asked baldly whether a sinking fund as against permanent debt is a good or a bad thing, would say yes, it is a good thing on the whole. In the case of a business, one of the things we are always seeking to do is to establish internal resources which would rank as reserves in order to improve the solidity of the concern, but necessarily that assumes that you have an annual surplus from which you can make the required contribution.

SYDNEY MEAT PRESERVING COMPANY

The report of the above company covers the six months ended December 31. It shows a net profit of £370, which has been transferred to the reserve account, increasing it from £47,886 to £48,527. Further quantities of the company's preserved meats were supplied to the Imperial and Commonwealth Governments for troops. Sales in the Commonwealth and the islands have been maintained. Prices of meats, extract, and tallow have been satisfactory in Great Britain, and wool has been disposed of in the local market at advantageous prices. The following comparison may be made:—

	Half-year ended Dec. 31., 1913.	1914.	1915.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Carlton and United Breweries have declared an interim dividend for the half-year ended December 31 at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on ordinary shares, and 7 per cent. per annum on preference shares, payable on March 17. The rate of dividend has been reduced in consequence of the increased cost of production, due to the higher rate of wages and the high cost of material.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Country Amusements, Limited, is being wound up by resolution passed on January 27, 1916, and Mr. H. J. Gibbons has been appointed liquidator.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

The auction sale of tea yesterday disclosed a further strengthening of the market. Common teas brought 9¾d, and others up to 1/0¼. The whole catalogue was disposed of to keen competition. Teas out of the market this week showed good quality but high prices. Local stocks of Indians are being depleted, and price teas are particularly scarce. Calcutta letters dated the middle of January were to the effect that there were sufficient orders on the market to keep prices very high, leaving the Russian element out of account. Since then the Russians have entered the market, with the skyrocket result we know.

There was a run on carbide yesterday, due to rumours that the Swedish Government was likely to prohibit export. Large parcels changed hands. Cream of tartar was firmer in the oversea markets, and any serious buying would cause an upward move.

An attempt was made to buy up all the turpentine offering. In the morning there were sales at 4/3, but as the day sped holders felt the demand, and at the close nothing was let go under 4/5. The buyers when asked to resell quoted a substantial advance. The statistical position is very strong.

Advices from London received by the last mail show that all metal goods are at an abnormal price, with no sign of weakening. The tendency is all the other way, and it is predicted that there will be no easing till the end of hostilities is in sight. There is almost a famine in steel; in fact, the position was so precarious when the letter was written that it was expected that within two months it would be practically impossible to get supplies of any kind of steel. The only class which could be got when the mail left was steel plates, but the Government was asking particularly for this class of material, so it was expected that there would be greater difficulties than ever in maintaining supplies in the future. Much relief is not expected from America, as the demand there is absolutely without precedent, and the last spurt in price was brought about by a phenomenal demand which sprang up for their own domestic requirements. Cable advices received since the letter was written are to the effect that steel plates are practically unprocurable. For the first time for many years bar iron is selling below the price of steel. A cable yesterday offered American steel at £23 c.i.f. and e. The pre-war price was £8, and of Continental steel £5/10/. As regards tinplates, the mail declares that some Welsh makers had been obliged to stop manufacture for the Australian market until lots already ordered lying at their works were shipped. The Government demand for steel was so great that private owners found the greatest difficulty in obtaining steamers, and the consequence was that private orders were held up indefinitely. There has been a rumour current this week in the city that the export of tinplates to Australia, except for food canning purposes, is prohibited, but cable inquiries state that this point has not yet been reached, though anything may happen. Some galvanised sheet makers in England will close down shortly, owing to the difficulty in obtaining steel. Orders placed in America in July were not shipped till last month.

There was again a good demand for woolpacks, and a fairly large number of April-May-June shipment changed hands at 2/9½ net to rails. Spot stocks were sold at from 3/8 to 3/9 net. Branbags were quoted at 8/3 net for prompt delivery, and 8/2 net ex the Ujina. There was very little demand for cornsacks at 3/9 net to rails.

HANDLING OF KEROSENE.

WHARF-LABOURERS' CLAIMS.

CASE FOR THE OIL COMPANY.

The manager of the Vacuum Oil Company has issued a public notice to clients of the company, stating inter alia:—

It is therefore with feelings of deep regret we have to announce that on account of the action of members of the Sydney Wharf Labourers' Union in refusing to handle our goods, except at a rate of 2s per hour, we are temporarily unable to maintain our usual prompt delivery service.

Owing to the geographical position of our Sydney warehouses our goods have to be transported by lighters plying in Sydney Harbour between our bulk stores and the city wharfs, whence we distribute by road, rail, or sea.

For some time past the company's lighters have been manned by members of the Sydney Wharf Labourers' Union, who were paid on the basis of 1s 9d per hour for ordinary day work, and who were also paid for time occupied in travelling to and from their work. These rates are in accord with Mr. Justice Higgins' award, and, of course, the men enjoyed all the other privileges granted in that award.

On January 6 not a single member of this union would accept employment from the Vacuum Oil Company Proprietary, Limited, at 1s 9d per hour. They demanded payment on the basis of 2s per hour, although their claim for 2s per hour for handling case oil, including kerosene, benzine, and motor spirit, had been deliberately and specifically refused by Mr. Justice Higgins in the recent lengthy hearing of the Waterside Workers' Federation claims in the Commonwealth Arbitration Court.

It may be mentioned that the members of the Sydney Wharf Labourers' Union who refused to handle Vacuum Oil Company's oils at less than 2s per hour have not declined to handle any other company's oils, and actually do continue to handle them at 1s 9d per hour.

So that our customers may realise the true position, it must be stated that when Mr. Justice Higgins awarded the high rate of 1s 9d per hour for unskilled labour he based his award on the fact that the work of the wharf-labourer is intermittent in character; but whilst this is true regarding wharf-labourers in the general sense it does not apply to the work of the Vacuum Oil Company Proprietary, Limited, which is constant year in and year out. The company in its anxiety to obtain continuity of service from these men offered them constant employment, but the union, in its wisdom, refused to permit any of its members to accept a constant job. The union sees fit to demand casual rates for constant work, and not content with their earnings of 77s per week of 44 hours, the men are now demanding 2s per hour or 88s per week for the constant employment offered by the company, exclusive of the payment for travelling time at the close of each day's work.

The work of the men employed on the company's lighters is not arduous or unhealthy, but just the reverse. The lighters make three trips daily from our main warehouse at Pulpit Point. The trip occupies about half an hour each way, so that many of these men spend three hours daily in travelling on the harbour. They do absolutely no work whilst travelling, but their pay goes on at the full rate.

The directors of the Vacuum Oil Company Proprietary, Limited, recognise their obligation to the working class, and have never refused to grant a fair and square deal to labour, but to this demand they decline to submit.

We endeavoured to have this matter adjudicated upon by the President of the Federal Arbitration Court, but he decided that he had no jurisdiction, as the dispute was confined to the State of New South Wales. We then instituted proceedings in the New South Wales Arbitration Court, and have been successful in obtaining a wages board to consider the whole matter.

MOUNT LYELL CHEMICALS.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

Reports from good authorities, although still lacking in confirmation from the company itself, have been received in the city that the Mt. Lyell Mining and Railway Co., Ltd., intends increasing the sphere of its activities in chemical manufactures on a large scale. As far as can be ascertained, the first developments will be in alkalies, for the production of which cheap power derived from the Lake Margaret scheme will be utilised. About £110,000 worth of alkalies are imported into Australia annually, the largest individual items being caustic soda, soda ash, and bicarbonate of soda.

RAILWAY MARKET.

LUCERNE VERY STEADY.

Although the weather was very uninviting, there was a good muster at the Sydney produce sales yesterday, when 90 trucks of all descriptions were available. A marked change was soon apparent from Thursday's sales. First-class oaten and wheaten chaff was very scarce; in fact, there were only two or three trucks which could lay claim to the "good" qualification. Most of the wheaten was green, but spoilt by black oats, while in oaten chaff, although most samples were heavy, with good sound feed, yet foreign substance depreciated its utility also. The auctioneers did very well to interest the buyers, and get such steady rates as they did, with unfavourable conditions to contend with.

Wheaten chaff ran at from 3/6 to 4/8 per cwt, and mixed oaten and wheaten in one consignment realised 4/8 per cwt. Oaten chaff was worth from 3/6 to 4/6 per cwt.

Lucerne was of a medium to good quality, and no inferior lucerne hay was offered at auction. A consignment from Mudgee sold at 5/2 without delivery, and other prices were from 4/2 to 4/6 per cwt.

A little more lucerne chaff showed itself, and was altogether not too bad in quality. Brown lucerne chaff sold at 4/6 and 4/7 per cwt, while green samples were worth from 4/8 to 6/ per cwt. A few bags of lucerne dust realised 7/. A small part consignment of oaten hay, which was derrick pressed, obtained 3/ per cwt, while another truck in proper bales could not raise an offer.

Despite the fact that a very heavy shower was in progress when the onions sales were being held, and goods could not be favourably exhibited, a large number of buyers paid great interest in this section, and there was a rather firm demand. Prices were not quite as high as Thursday, but were very steady. Silverskins sold at 8/7, while Brown Spanish reached 8/6, an advance of 10/ per ton on Thursday's price.

The yarding included 85 trucks of hay, straw, and chaff, four of grain, and two of onions. Trucks manifested to arrive were:—Forage, 122; grain, 8; potatoes and onions, 4.

Wheaten Chaff.—Ex Ashfield (18857), passed 3/6; do. (8570), 4/; ex Burrumbuttock (11590), passed 4/; ex Burwood (10760), 4/3; ex Cady, Crookwell (1420), passed 3/9; Spackman, Crookwell (19949), 4/; do. (16534), 4/1; do. PIG SALES.

SUPPLIES VERY SHORT.

At the City Yards yesterday afternoon only 140 pigs were yarded. Larger supplies were expected, but owing to heavy weather, a steamer containing 200 stores had not yet landed its burden. Most of the yardings were porkers, there being but few pens stocked with baconers and backfatters. Competition for the latter was very active. Values for porkers were not equal to extreme rates of Tuesday last, while baconers and backfatters met a firm demand at late high rates. As the North Coast drought shows signs of breaking, a very active demand is expected.

Rates for the sales were:—

Backfatters, prime and weighty to £9, good £7 to £8, medium £5/10/ to £6, light from £4/10/.

Baconers, best prime £5/15/ to £6/5/, good and prime £5/3/ to £5/15/, medium £4/15/ to £5, light from £3/10/.

Porkers, prime and weighty £2/10/ to £3/5/, good £2/12/ to £2/16/, medium £2/5/ to £2/8/, prime light £1/15/ to £2/2/, light and inferior from £1.

MINING.

SPECULATION LESS ACTIVE.

VALUES STILL FIRM.

BARRIERS TO THE FORE.

Though there was a noticeable falling off in speculation this morning, this did not extend to the values realised in the sales booked, nor in the buying and selling quotations at the morning and noon calls.

All sections continued sound, especially Barriers and tin stocks. Mount Lyells were in good favour, owing to excellent mine developments. Though business "petered out" somewhat during the afternoon, values were good all the same, and continued so right up to the closing hour.

MINING IN THE STATE.

BATHURST, Friday.

Reports from the Hill End goldfield state that general activity is being shown in all quarters. The Reward mine is running three shifts, after a delay of a couple of days through an accident in the engine-room. The satisfactory crushing results recorded last year are being maintained. Work is proceeding on the Patriarch shaft, which is being put in working order from the surface downwards. The draining of the present properties is a big undertaking. When this work is effected the Reward mine will be favoured by a natural drainage system for a depth of about 800ft. While the driving at this level is being undertaken some of the best reefs on the field will be simultaneously worked.

YAMBULLA, Friday.

A battery has been erected on the Artiseek gold field, and some claims are reported to be looking well, notably Duffy's, where they have struck a rich reef. At the Yambulla mine a crosscut is being driven to the Duchess of York. G. Hite and J. Burns are raising good stone on their claim on No. 7.

NORTH LYELL MINE.

PHENOMENALLY RICH ORE.

QUEENSTOWN (Tas.), Friday.

Work at the 1200ft level in the North Lyell section of the Mount Lyell mine is displaying evidence of phenomenally rich ore in the roof and ground floor stope, where cutting out to prepare for timbering is in progress. At the 1100ft level in the northern extension, No. 41 stope, the ore body on the ground floor continues to produce fair-grade ore from a face now over 20ft wide. Several months ago this ore body had narrowed to a very small seam, and it appeared certain that the ore limit had been reached; but it has since made again to the above width. At the 1000ft level the ore bodies proved by the diamond drill southwest of No. 40 stope are opening up excellently. The labour supply continues fairly adequate, and the output, approximately 10,000 tons per month, is being maintained. Three furnaces are in constant blast at the reduction works, and the necessary adjustments are being made to different portions of the flotation plant prior to giving the machinery a trial run. Hopes are entertained that Monday's conference in Melbourne will effect an amicable settlement of the wages difficulty.

W.A. GOLD MINES.

KALGOORLIE, Friday.

Operations were resumed on the Perseverance and Associated mines, which were closed down a few days ago owing to shortage of labour, brought about by the refusal of the members of the miners' union to work with enemy subjects. The labour available, however, is still far short of requirements, but it is hoped that all the mines on the Golden Mile will be working at full capacity next week, as a number of men are reported to be on the way to Kalgoorlie from other mining centres.

SOLDIERS' LEAVE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Would you kindly allow me a little space in your paper with regard to the leave regulations about to come into force? I am a perfect stranger in Australia, only having been in the country three months. I am an ex-Imperial soldier, having served ten years, of which I spent nine years in India. I saw active service on the north-west frontier of India. I have also been in the present struggle, having gone through the German South-west African rebellion under General Botha. I was one of the first to land. I was wounded, and was also a victim of the Huns way of fighting, that was I drank some of the water in one of the poisoned wells. After the conquest of German South-west Africa I gave up a very good position to come to Australia at my own expense. I enlisted on the 13th of December, 1915. I hope the people who are drawing up this plan of leave will just think of the brave men who are going to leave their mothers, sisters, and sweethearts behind. There are quite a lot of boys that reside in Australia now in camp that always look to the week-end in their own homes. I myself have got no relations in this part of the world, but I have made some good friends, and when the week-end comes I am ready for a bit of a change. The final leave of four days for a man who may be on his last visit to his home is not time to even say good-bye to them.

I am, etc., TOMMY ATKINS.

Liverpool, Feb. 11.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—My son has not received any letters from home. I have never missed one mail since he left some four months ago, and have sent enough reading matter to supply the whole battalion, still I receive the third letter asking me if I have forgotten him, he has not received one letter. I have addressed everything properly, and attached correct stamps. I have received two cables from Cairo asking for £5, and signed with my son's name. As my son is many miles from Cairo, they are not genuine cables. According to the lad's letters he asks for news from home, as he has everything else he wants. Is it possible for his letters to be claimed by the person sending the bogus cables? Cannot something be done to have the mail delivered to the lad, who says he cannot do his best at the front, wondering if there is anything wrong at home? Is it fair to the mother who has given two sons to the Empire? I am, etc.,

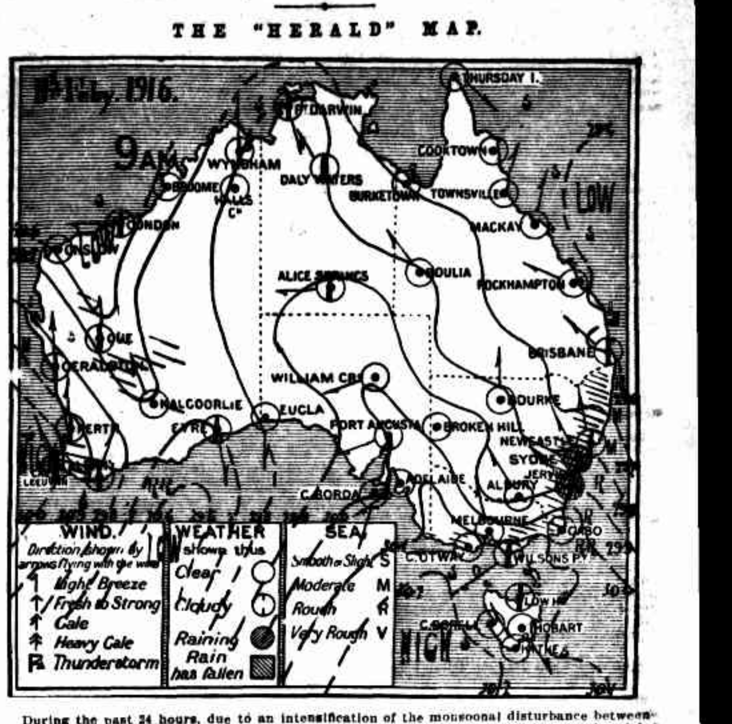
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



During the past 24 hours, due to an intensification of the monsoonal disturbance between New Caledonia and the east coast of Australia, a storm of cyclonic nature has developed in the North Tasman Sea. This, acting in conjunction with the extensive high pressure over central and south-eastern areas of the continent, has resulted in stormy, wet weather in coastal districts of New South Wales. The isobars on central and southern parts of our coast are congested, and, therefore, favour gales from south and east and rough seas, with further good rains. Unsettled weather, with rain, is also indicated in the north-east quarter of the State.

The high is centrally situated to the south-west of Tasmania, and the cyclonic disturbance between New Caledonia and Lord Howe Island.

Another disturbance is coming into some prominence over Western Australia, where unsettled weather is being experienced, and, so far, scattered light rains have been recorded over that State.

Ocean Forecast.—Centre of tropical disturbance near New Caledonia; rough weather between New Caledonia and North Island of New Zealand; strong, squally southerly winds on east coast south from tropic. Data incomplete, but probably squally and rough off the north-west coast of Western Australia.

In a letter from Mr. Larcombe, Assistant Commissioner of the Citizens' War Chest Fund, to his mother, he says:—"Passing one of the Australian camps at Ghizeh on Christmas Day, I saw the troops lined up getting their billies. In all there were about 60,000 billies. Some had £5 notes in them, others cameras. One had nothing but nuts. So you can imagine with what curiosity and delight the soldiers received them. Could the donors have seen it they would have been rewarded for their labour and trouble. They would have felt it had all been worth while. It was the same at the other camps as at Chizeh—at Zeitoun, at Suez Road, at Abbassia, and at Maadi."

Mrs. King, the hon. secretary 1st F.A.B. IS YOUR BILLET BETTER NOW than it was last year?
Are you progressing—standing still—or sliding back?
Will you be in a better position next year?
It means everything to you to be able to answer these questions satisfactorily.
IF YOU ARE A SENSIBLE MAN, you must admit that you can't get a better position unless you are worth it. In other words, you will have to gain more knowledge before you can hope to gain more money.
WHY NOT GAIN MORE KNOWLEDGE and earn more money? Perhaps the only difficulty you have is in deciding upon the subjects that you should study, and the College that is to instruct you. If you are in search of helpful information upon this matter, you are one of the men for whom we prepared our Special Illustrated Book,
"HOW TO CHOOSE A CAREER."
We naturally believe our College to be the best—our many years' successes at Public competitive exams., and the eloquent testimony of our thousands of successful students, should make YOU feel that you will be safe to entrust YOUR preparation for a better position to

"The burnt; and so is all the meat.
How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,
And serve it thus to me, that love it not?"

And it is to prevent such a dire calamity as this happening to the good husband's dinner that the

Their heat is most simply regulated, allowing of the slowest fires as well as the fiercest. Food cooking in these stoves gathers none of the odour of the fuel, nor is there any smoke.

PERFECTION STOVE IS BEING
DEPARTMENT
FROM 1 TO 5 P.M. EACH DAY.

IS ALSO BEING DEMONSTRATED.

A DELIGHTFUL BIRTHDAY OR WEDDING GIFT IS THE NEW

ELECTRO-PLATED TOASTER.

This handy article not only toasts bread and tea-cakes to perfection, but is most useful for heating stews, soups, and other courses, for keeping the tea or coffee pot warm on the waggon in the dining-room, and has many other uses that will occur to its possessor.

The Toaster is fitted with spirit lamp, stands on its own table-legs, has perforated plate and silvered wire frame for toasting; and an aluminium shield for making girdle cakes, keeping food hot, etc.

TULLE—
ECONOMICAL.

Few ladies will deny that Tulle is at once the most luxurious, fascinating, and becoming Millinery trimming for Summer wear. Yet it is a fact that if you are careful to choose "Dynamo" Rainproof Tulle your Millinery will cost you less than ever. "Dynamo" Tulle is rainproof—yes, guaranteed rainproof. It is also sunproof. It is colour-fast. It is fadeless. When wet, you simply shake it gently to and fro in the air till it is dry. It immediately regains the crisp, firm appearance it had when new. It loses none of its sheen or colour. Its original charm is completely restored.

"Dynamo" Tulle is wonderfully durable. It stands the wear and tear of every day use much longer than ordinary Tulle. It is most economical, because it avoids the frequent renewals so unpleasantly necessary when ordinary Tulle is used. Therefore, see that you get the genuine

"DYNAMO" RAINPROOF TULLE,

FOR WOMEN WHO

especially those who have the time and money at their disposal to improve their appearance. Your face should be first, then the head, and last your dress. If you have unsightly, all refinement is hidden, and you look coarse, also uncared for, and your beautiful frock attracts attention to this blemish. Now, be warned, and come and get them removed. You will feel happier, your children will be happier, and your husband will be proud of you.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS

A WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

A FEW HAIRS REMOVED FREE, AND ONE HUNDRED POUNDS IS THE FORFEIT IF I FAIL.

Come and have a chat, and I will give you all details. I will not mind if you do not have treatment, as, having worked

15 YEARS IN SYDNEY,

I cannot be offended if you do not wish to come after having an interview with me. I can offer no more.

MY MASSAGE TREATMENT

is to build up the sunken tissues, clear the skin, and restore the features. One treatment will allow you to judge what can be done for you. If you are unable to visit me and find that the skin is becoming dry, lined, or wrinkled, send for

NETTOYER FACE CREAM.

It will preserve the skin, clean it, and prevent wrinkles from forming. Also invaluable before the use of powder. Only 3/6 and 6/; if posted, 6d extra.

FRECKLES.

All ladies who surf should guard against the skin becoming freckled or sunburnt, as no evening frock is seen to advantage on a burnt skin; so send for my preparations.

NETTOYER SUNBURN CREAM.
